Back in France, with his American bride, he, as Mayor of Montmartre during the Franco-Prussian War, earned a reputation for honesty and efficiency.

Honored as a member of the General Assembly, next as president of the Paris Municipal Council and then as member of the Chamber of Deputies, leader of the Radicals, a power in organizing the Third Republic and owner of the great daily, La Justice, he at last was one of France's great men.

Then slander accused him of disloyalty and dishonesty in the Panama canal scandal. He met every charge, the attack in the Chamber crumbled, but his constituents deserted him. Forced out, his newspaper wrecked, he, at 52 had to start again as a private citizen.

Nine tranquil years as a writer; then he fought for and had Dreyfus freed. Back triumphantly to the Senate, and he became Premier. In an argument with his old enemy, Delcasse, he lost his temper and the premiership.

When the World war began he entered the Viviani Ministry. In 1917, when 76, he again was elected Premier. Retiring in 1920, he ran for president and lost.

His life has been a constant battle but always he has been "the Tiger."

For more than 50 years he was one of France's most influential men. He overthrew 18 ministries and made at least three presidents. Today, at 84, he is beloved and recognized by hosts as the greatest statesman of his country.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

George Burdett Ford, who is to preside over the sixteenth National Conference on city planning which begins it sessions in Los Angeles today, is one of the leading city planners of the United States. With the very best of training, received at Harvard, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and the Ecole des Beaux Arts, Paris, he began a professional career as architect in Boston in 1901. Five years later he was called into partnership with one of the leading architectural firms in New York. Mr. Ford's specialty being those phases of construction of edifices which relate to environment and setting he naturally came to be a consultant on questions of urban improvement and the planning of civic centers; and in this capacity he has served many towns and cities of the country and shaped some of the largest reconstructions of community life yet undertaken in the United States. Following the war he went to Europe for the Red Cross to direct the reconstruction of communities in Belgium and France.

FUNERALS.
Mrs. Dan C. Russ.

With many relatives and friends in attendance the funeral of Mrs. Dan C. Russ was held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from Trinity M. E. church. Rev. J. Harlow Graham, the pastor of the church, conducted the service and delivered a eulogy which was in part as follows:

Two tasks are mine this afternoon. One is to remind you of the rich qualities and the radiant life of the noble mother, friend and Christian whose spirit has slipped its earthly moorings and moved out upon the broad seas of the larger life awaiting. Into the near presence of God we know she has gone. Into the multiplied service of the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, she will bring in fullest measure the same unselfishness she manifested here in so many forms.

Mrs. Russ spent her life in devotion to the best things. She was daughter, sister, wife and mother in the highest meaning of the words. She was church woman par excellence. It is most fitting that we gather in her honor and her memory in this edifice where centered so much of her interest. Her good deeds, her kind words, her never failing interest in new faces in the congregation and new neighbors in the community will live long, a precious memorial in many lives. Her contribution in deeds to the life and work of the church would make a long catalogue but she herself as an influence for cheer and goodness for graciousness and devout loyalty were her larger gifts. Her spirit was heroic and contagiously optimistic. She was an active and aggressive embodiment of wholesome helpfulness, you were aware of her presence in any company. She had attained an individuality. She was a force for righteousness because she herself was its incarnation. She was all this, yet she was unassuming and self-effacing. She was on the committee which welcomed us into the parsonage when we came to Norwich to begin this pastorate. Her words and her face are those I most clearly remember.

It would be most fitting if someone who had known Mrs. Russ more intimately and in other spheres of her busy life should speak here today. I am sure the same brisk and busy helpfulness would be remarked. Necessarily my associations with her were largely in and of this church. To it her character is a legacy of inestimable value which will enshrine her name and memory in the hearts of all who knew her genuine [illegible]ableness. We have no [illegible]ctual arithmetic at hand to [illegible] all that she has been. [illegible] track out all the lines of [illegible] which have gone out from her beautiful personality we should doubtless discover how pervasive has been her influence. Let the angel of the beautiful record do that, for he only can fully reveal either the extent or the meaning of all she has done and meant. Suppose we could bring before ourselves here today in panorama all the good causes Mrs. Russ has helped, and all the good deeds she has done, what witnesses and what eulogies!

And now this life has come to its earthly end. It will seem strange to enter these doors and not find her presence here or to hear her voice again. But we have not come here to wish her back again, nor to sorrow as those who have no hope. She loved this life as do we but if in this life only we have interest, confidence and hope we are most miserable, shortsighted and small-minded creatures. Let us even indulge a regretful joy that she has been delivered from the burden of the frail, failing flesh. We are here to thank God with her, and for her and as her friends to wave farewell as she enters into the peace and rest and light of God, her Father.

The bearers were Charles A. Beach, Edward J. Beach, Arthur T. Beach, William H. Oat, Edwin A. Reeves and Harry E. Prentice and burial took place in the family plot at Yantic cemetery. Rev. # REVISED FIGURES ON OFFER TO BUY CITY'S GAS & ELECTRIC PLANT

Revised figures based upon the balance sheet of the Norwich gas and electric department up to Dec. 31, 1923, have been handed to Mayor Milo R. Waters by H. L. Lanahan, general manager of the Eastern Connecticut Power company, in relation to the offer of the power company to buy the city's gas and electric plant.

The former offer was based upon the report of the gas and electric commissioners to the public utilities commission for the year 1923, while the present offer is figured on the report for 1923. It makes a number of differences to the advantage of the city.

If the terms of sale and purchase should be accepted, the revised offer shows the net figure of $734,896.96 to be received by the city instead of $620,704.32. Under the terms of an operating agreement that is a part of the offer the city would receive $36,422.10 per year, instead of $35,196.78 as in the first offer.

The revised offer also contains a proposition to make a 20 per cent reduction on the present rates charged for electricity.

The changes made by the figuring upon the 1923 report of the gas and electric commission are indicated as follows:

| | First offer. | Second offer. |
| Betterments | 67,841.56 | |
| | $1,345,511.05 | |
| Inventory | 61,044.54 | 54,205.61 |
| | $1,416,575.59 | $1,429,642.84 |
| Less mortgage | 400,000.00 | 400,000.00 |
| Pay to city | 1,016,575.59 | $1,029,642.84 |
| Liquidation | 162,128.63 | 295,254.40 |
| Cash to city | $1,178,704.22 | $1,324,896.96 |
| City pays bonds | 558,000.00 | 563,000.00 |

Mayor Waters will present the offer at the common council meeting tonight (Monday) as it is contained in the following letter:

April 5th, 1924.

To the Honorable Mayor and Court of Common Council,
City of Norwich,
Norwich, Connecticut.

Gentlemen: In reference to our proposal of March 28th, certain data relative to the gas and electrical department for the year 1923 is now available, which permits revision of our proposal by bringing it more nearly up to date.

The question of the purchase of power is a matter of contract, and, as shown in our previous letter, would show, for 1922, a saving of $69,657.84, which, through extra retirement reserve and certain items of expense, as agreed to by the president and general manager of the gas and electrical department, reduces the saving to a net of $29,657.84.

Sale of Property

Recognizing the fact that the difference between the cost of generating power by the gas and electrical department and the selling price of The Eastern Connecticut Power company for the same amount of power is an economic loss, this $70,000 per year can and should be saved for the users of electric service. This saving can be made available by the sale of the property.

Therefore, subject to proper authorization, The Eastern Connecticut Power Company is prepared to purchase the entire gas and electric property, including the distribution system now owned by the city of Norwich, at the book figures, as they appear in the departments report to the public utilities commission as of December 31st, 1923 which figure is .....$1,274,437.23

To this we add the inventory of material and supplies, assuming that the valuations are correct... 54,205.61

Making a total of .....$1,429,642.84

And as the property is subject to an underlying mortgage of ..... 400,000.00

Which we, as purchasers would have to assume, this would mean that we pay to the city, in cash $1,029,642.84

The city, or of the department, would then naturally liquidate its remaining current assets and pay its current liabilities. An analysis of the balance sheet of December 31st, 1923, would indicate that this would result in a net return to the city of ..... $ 262,854.40 which would make available to the treasury of the city in cash ....$1,292,896.96

The liabilities of the city, on account of ownership of the gas and electrical department in addition to the $400,000.00 which would be assumed by us are as follows:

| | |
| 4s due April 2, 1931 (original purchase) | $227,000.00 |
| 4's due April 2, 1931 (plant improvements) | 40,000.00 |
| 5's due May 16, 1951 (funding) | 271,000.00 |
| | $538,000 |

This much of the sale price would have to be used for the purchase of these outstanding bonds, or, if they are not purchasable, placed in a sinking fund to protect them at maturity. This would leave available to the city for the retirement of their debt, or for any other cash requirements of the city .....$734,896.96

The effect of this sale, when consummated, would result in an actual revenue to the city, of say 4 1-2 per cent. on $734,896.96 or $33,070.96. This item alone is greater than the net saving shown above as resulting from the purchase of power. In addition to this, the property would, if owned by the Eastern Connecticut Power Company, be subject to local taxation, and produce further revenue to local taxation and produce further revenue for the city.

The difference between our wholesale selling price for power and the cost of production of power by the gas and electrical department makes possible a saving of about $75,000 per year which should be available to the users of electric service, and which amounts to nearly 2 per cent. of the revenue from lighting and power. We therefore, agree to retain the present electric rates of the gas and electrical department, and except for street lighting and sign lighting, to make therefrom a reduction of 20 per cent. This makes a straight reduction of 20 per cent. on the customer's electric bills without any uncertainty which might arise from the establishment of a form of rate different from the one now in effect.

The effect of this sale upon the city's finances would be to retire $734,896.96 of debt over and above the debt created, on account of the gas and electrical department representing an accrued saving in interest of $33,070.86. Further, subjecting this property to local taxation, would make a material increase in the grand list, which coupled with the interest saving, would make possible a reduction in the tax rate.

In order to make this transfer of ownership possible, it will be necessary to secure, in the next session of the general assembly, certain legislation, but to avoid further delay in giving to the people the benefit of this saving, provided the sale is approved by the citizens, we propose to enter into an agreement with the city, under which we bind ourselves to pay for the property when the necessary authority is secured, and, in the meantime to operate the gas and electrical department of the city under a contract, the terms of which would provide that the city would receive during the operating period an amount equal to interest at 3 per cent per annum upon the purchase price of $1,029,642.84 .....$61,452.10

Plus interest at 5 per cent. on $400,000.00 ..... 20,000.00

A total per year of .....$71,452.10

As the city would be obliged to protect the interest on the total outstanding mortgage debt of $555,000.00 which equals .....$45,030.00

This would leave a net per year .....$26,422.10

And, we would agree immediately upon taking over the operation of the property to so reduce rates as to give a saving as previously stated of approximately $75,000.00.

During the operating period, and before the property change title and was subject to tax, we would agree to furnish energy to the city, for street lighting, at the same price that it is now being furnished by the gas and electrical department.

It is, we think, quite clear that the saving to the users of electricity, as reported above, would result from the fact that the generating cost in a great system like ours is much less than in a smaller plant; and, also, that the Eastern Connecticut Power Company must capitalize its betterments and extensions instead of absorbing them in the rates charged.

Yours very truly,
H. L. LANAHAN,
General Manager

OBITUARY.
Mrs. Charles W. Gale

The many friends of Mrs. Gertrude Hakes Gale, widow of Col. Charles W. Gale, will be grieved to learn of her death, which occurred after a long illness, on Saturday afternoon at three forty-five o'clock at her home, Pinehurst, Washington street. Mrs. Gale had been confined to her room for the past five weeks but her recovery had been confidently hoped for by the members of her family.

Mrs. Gale was born in Worcester, March 15, 1856, and was the daughter of the late Henry Hakes and Anna Woodward Hakes. Her early life was spent in her native city where she attended and graduated from the public schools and also from Worcester Academy. Upon leaving school she entered the employ of the well known business firm of Thomas S. Eaton and for many years acted in the capacity of private and confidential secretary. In June 1894 she was united in marriage to the late Frank A. Roath and came to Norwich to reside. In 1903 Mr. and Mrs. Roath purchased the magnificent estate "Pinehurst", located at 164 Washington street, which she has occupied since that date. An interesting coincidence, in this connection, is revealed by the fact that this property was formerly owned by her ancestors, having been given to them by original grant.

Mr. Roath died in September 1908. In June 1913 Mrs. Roath was married to Colonel Charles W. Gale of this city whose death occurred in May, 1919.

Mrs. Gale was a member for many years of the Central Baptist church has been prominently identified with many religious societies and organizations both in this city and in other parts of the country. In early life, and while a resident of Worcester, she organized a model Sunday school primary department and often conducted special classes before conventions and conferences. She took particular delight and interest in the work of foreign missions and for many years was an active and efficient member of the national board of the Women's American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society. At the time of her death she was an honorary member of this organization. She was also a trustee of the Connecticut Baptist State Convention. In 1913-14 Colonel and Mrs. Gale made a tour around the world and a considerable portion of their journey was in Burma, India, and Assam visiting the Baptist mission stations. So great was her devotion to this field of Christian activity that her gifts for its support were large and frequent, among them being a reservoir system at Golaghat, Assam, and the Gale Memorial Bible Training School.

Mrs. Gale was a direct descendent of revolutionary ancestors and a daughter of the Pilgrims and was a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, having served as recording secretary of Faith Trumbull chapter in 1898-1901 and as regent in 1901-03. She was also a member of the Society of the Founders of Norwich. She was especially interested in the Children of the American Revolution and recently presented them a silk flag with eagle and standard.

Her talents were unusually diversified. Her love for music was very great and during her residence in Worcester she sang for many seasons in large choruses in the famous Worcester festival. She never lost her interest in this annual event and was a regular attendant and patron until her last illness began more than three and a half years ago.

"Pinehurst" has often been the scene of many delightful musicals and Colonel Gale was the first president of the Norwich Music Association. In his memory Mrs. Gale has recently given the magnificent new Gale Memorial organ to the Central Baptist church. She developed a most remarkable skill in china painting and her work won for her great admiration and appreciation from many sources. She was at one time president of the Norwich Art Association.

In social life, she was a leader, and in her beautiful home delightfully entertained her friends from far and near. On the occasion of Ex-president Taft's visit to Norwich in 1917 he was the guest of Colonel and Mrs. Gale.

Mrs. Gale was a member of the Pantops and of numerous other social organizations. She was one of four sisters, only one of whom now survives, Mrs. Milo C. Treat of Pasadena, California. Mrs. Gale's mother, Mrs. Anna M. Hakes, is also living and celebrated on March 26th, last her 104th birthday anniversary in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Treat, at Pasadena.

A woman of rare ability, of charming personality and of liberal and benevolent sympathies, Mrs. Gale was beloved by a host of friends who will long cherish her memory.

Mrs. Freeman A. Libby

Mrs. Anna Bertha Libby, widow of Dr. Freeman A. Libby, quietly passed away at six o'clock Sunday morning, after a two weeks' illness at her home, 421 Washington street. Mrs. Libby was born at West Chelmsford, Mass., January 28, 1859, the daughter of Joseph and Martha Whitney White.

Her father was agent of the woolen mills at North Vassalboro, Maine, at which place she was united in marriage on June 1, 1882, with the late Freeman A. Libby, M. D.

Mrs. Libby was a devoted wife and loving mother who found her greatest enjoyment in caring for the home and family. Naturally gifted with gentle manner and a kind disposition towards all, re-enforced by genuine charm and a strong character, she was loved and respected by her friends and acquaintances. She was a woman of strong and loyal Christian convictions that had become an integral part of her character and a matter of daily living. She joined the church as a young woman and had always maintained a deep interest in its welfare. Since coming to Norwich about 18 months ago she had identified herself with the Central Baptist church of this city. Two sons survive, Judge Arthur F. Libby of Norwich, and Prof. J. Ralph Libby of the University of Vermont, Burlington, Vermont.

George Kinney.

George Kinney, 74, of 98 Franklin street, died Saturday morning. Earlier in the week he suffered a shock from which he failed to recover. He was born in New Brunswick, but for many years had made his home in Norwich, being employed in the former Hopkins & Allen firearms plant, Franklin street. He was well known as an old time baseball player and at one time was catcher of the old Sachem baseball team. He is survived by one son, George Kinney, on the vaudeville stage under the name of Arthur Van. His wife's maiden name was Martha Colt.

IZBICKI DENIES HE EVER DRANK LIQUOR

Anthony Izbicki of North Main Street, who with his wife was one of the passengers in the automobile driven by John Rydel of New London on Sunday March 23, which overturned on the Norwich-Westerly road beyond Fox hill, causing the death of John Stempnick and Izbicki's five year old daughter, stated Sunday night that he wished it understood that neither he nor his wife ever touched liquor and they had suffered keenly from the accusation made at the time of the accident that the entire party in the car was intoxicated.

Rydel's hearing on the charge of manslaughter is scheduled to be held this (Monday) afternoon at 2 o'clock before Justice Appleton Main in Poquetanuck.

Mr. Izbicki gave some of the particulars of the accident that had so far not been made public. He stated that there were six adults and five children in the car and that they were returning from a christening at the farm of Tony Handt and Mike Martak, about six miles out from the city. They left the farm at 5.55 he said and Rydel drove at the rate of about 50 miles an hour. Izbicki who was sitting next to the driver with Stempnick at his right, said he was afraid and told Rydel not to drive so fast, but Rydel paid no attention.

As they came to the point of the fatal accident, Izbicki said Rydel blew his horn for a small car that was ahead of them. This car gave them the road, but swung back again just as they got up to it, then driving about 25 miles an hour, Rydel's car began to zigzag in the road and another approaching car pulled off into the ditch. A moment later Rydel's car upset and Izbicki was knocked unconscious.

The little girl who was killed was lying asleep on a blanket on the floor of the back seat when the accident happened.

CELEBRATED SEVENTY SIXTH

The seventy-sixth anniversary of the birth of modern spiritualism was celebrated Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Norwich Spiritualis Academy when a special program was successfully carried out.

In addition to the sermon and demonstrations of psychic phenomena, a delightful program was arranged by Mrs. Henry E. Church, contralto; Miss Grace Cobb Taft, cornet and Mrs. Charles A. Dowsett, violin. Charles A. Dowsett was at the organ during the service and opened the service with a fine rendition of "In Spring", Mendelssohn, playing the accompaniment when the anniversary hymn Angel Buglers, was sung by the congregation.

WILL ALLOW ERECTION OF SLAUGHTER HOUSE

Recommendation that the Worcester Rendering Co. be permitted to erect a slaughter house at 32 Talman street is contained in a report made to Dr. E. J. Brophy, health officer, by J. Frederick Jackson of the state department of health.

On March 19, 1924, upon request of and accompanied by Mr. Henry Gilbraith, sanitary inspector for the city board of health, Norwich, inspection was made of the Worcester Rendering Company's Storage plant at Norwich, Conn. The owner of this plant had previously offered to partition off a part of this building for a slaughter house which would meet all of the requirements of Chapter No. 3 of the Sanitary Code. All the butchers now engaged in slaughter in the vicinity of Norwich would be allowed to come there to slaughter their cattle. A small fee for slaughtering would be charged. The necessary help would be provided to keep this place in a sanitary condition at all time. The present inspection was made for the purpose of advising the company officials of the feasibility of their proposed changes.

Mr. Ross, the local manager of the company, was present during the inspection and outlined to the writer the policy to be carried out in the event that part of this building is remodeled and used for slaughtering.

The building is located at No. 32 Talman street on the bank of the Thames river. It is about five minutes walk from the heart of the city, and about six dwellings are located within five hundred feet of it. The present location therefore, would be a very good one for a slaughter house. It is to be noted in some cities, slaughter houses are located in thickly settled sections but with proper maintenance no nuisance is created. One such slaughter house is located in Hartford and so far as known, no complaints have ever been received from it.

There may be some objection on the part of adjacent property owners on account of the nearness of this building if it is used for slaughtering. For a number of years, hides, hoofs, entrails and scrap from meat markets have been stored in this building which is the collecting point for Norwich, New London and Groton for this refuse. A truck from Auburn, Mass., takes away this material every day. From Mr. Gebrath it was learned that no complaints have been made in the past about this building and it has always been kept in sanitary condition. The addition of a killing floor, in my opinion, will not add any more refuse than is now being collected at this place, and furthermore, that from daily slaughter will be fresh and will be removed before becoming offensive.

If slaughtering is to be allowed in this location, it will eliminate the dirty small buildings now in use and will abate many of the nuisances now existing. Also, this procedure will promote cleanliness in the meat markets, as the heads, hoofs and hides of animals now slaughtered at the various places are taken by the different butchers to their markets and allowed to accumulate until collected by the meat scrap collector. These accumulations are obnoxious, to say the least, and their elimination will undoubtedly greatly improve the sanitary conditions of many meat markets in Norwich.

In view of the above considerations, it is recommended that permission be granted to the Worcester Rendering company to construct a slaughter house at their present location, same to be built and operated strictly in accordance with the Sanitary Code and after plans of same have been formerly submitted to and approved by this department.

"ANGLER'S PARADISE" WAS FOUND BY FISHERMAN

"What is more perfect than an open brook!" With apologies to the author of the real thing we start the story for behind it all there hangs a "fish tail."

A local fisherman out Saturday to try his luck with the speckled trout wandered about until he struck onto his favorite brook and fixing his tackle he began slowly to fish the stream passing now and then to play his line up and down and around a likely pool in hopes to tempt friend trout to feast upon his last worm.

Everything went well until a sign was noticed which read "No Fishing Allowed". Here the fishing must, according to law, come to a stop, and as our hero was a true sportsman he left the stream and followed on beyond until he came to see another sign which read as follows: "Angler's Paradise—Fish, Fish, FISH—Come up to the house and have dinner."

Our hero did not stop at the house for dinner, however, but did "fish" and had good luck. Inquiring as to the reason for the sign he learned that the owners of neighboring farms took a different outlook on life. One posted his brook to prevent fishing, keeping it all for himself and a few friends. The other wanted all well behaving fishermen to enjoy the grand old sport along the brook on his property and wanted, the "World to Know It." Whatever is back of the movement, the fisherman and his friends are agreed that the good sport is the man who hung up the last mentioned sign, and that he should be treated by any person fishing his brook.

SHIP AND ENGINE TEAM LOSES OUT IN INDUSTRIAL BASKETBALL TOURNEY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 6.—The International Silver Co. five of Meriden, by defeating the General Electric Co. quintet of Bridgeport, won the first state industrial tournament held at the Y. M. C. A. court in New Haven Saturday afternoon and evening. The tournament was conducted in a most successful manner by the officials in charge and it proved to be a success from the players' point of view also.

In the opening game the Safety Car Heating and Lighting Co. of New Haven lost to the International Silver Co. of Meriden, the ultimate winners. It was a hard, furiously fought game from the very start, with the New Haven team showing a dogged persistence. With about two minutes and forty-five seconds remaining of playing time, Krall, the New Haven captain, was ejected from the game because of four personal fouls. The game came to an end here because the New Haven outfit would not play without their captain. Meriden was then awarded the game. Before the game terminated so abruptly, the makers of silver articles were leading by a 28 to 26 score. The New Haven team had a good chance to overcome this lead and win out before the final whistle blew as the entire team began to get stronger as the game was coming to a close.

The General Electric Co. of Bridgeport took the floor against the New London Ship and Engine in the second game of the afternoon. The New London team met with engine trouble on their way to participate in the tournament and this game did not get under way until about ten minutes after four. The Bridgeport team exhibited form that was far above that shown by any one five played by the New London team this season. The final score of this game was 40 to 13 in the electrical workers' favor. The long journey to the field of battle and meeting with several accidents not only fatigued the local team, but made them seem as though they were hardly a match for the Bridgeport five. They played in a listless manner in the first half but when the game was continued after a short intermission, it was a new Ship and Engine team that faced the Bridgeport five.

For a good part of the second half it was all New London Ship and Engine. But once the electrical representatives awoke to the fact that the game was getting to a point where the New London team had only to drop in a few more baskets and tie up the contest, a short spurt which seemed without any effort on their parts gave them enough points to put the game forever out of the reach of the ship workers.

Even though the New London Ship and Engine was defeated, this team put up one of the best games yet to be exhibited this season. They held the Bridgeport five to low score considering the handicaps they were under. The standard of basketball playing is much higher in other large cities than in New London. For the New London Ship and Engine, MacGowan formerly of the Submarine Base, was the leading scorer and performer. He threw the leather sphere through the hoop five times from the field for ten points. Craig with three field baskets and one foul was the next in the scoring. It is singular to note that Risch the stellar forward was held without even being able to score a single point. It is probably the only contest that Risch has ever been held scoreless.

For the Bridgeport five, Vreeland stood out as the most prominent figure. He made 14 points. It is interesting to note that Vreeland, the Bridgeport center, was stationed at the Submarine Base during the war and played on the Base team with Butch MacGowan, who was his teammate. To see these two former teammates playing against each other was an unusual sight.

CLEVELAND RELEASES TWO UNDER OPTIONAL AGREEMENT

Cleveland, Ohio, April 6—The optional release by the Cleveland Indians of first baseman R. T. Knode, former University of Michigan star, and Pitcher Phil Bedgood was announced in dispatches received from New Orleans tonight.

Knode goes to Birmingham in the Southern Association and Bedgood to Minneapolis, American Association.

That Knode played with Waynesboro in the Blue Ridge league in 1921 and 1922 and with Salisbury in the Eastern Shore league part of 1921 while still a member of the Wolverines baseball and football teams was revealed by the sports editor of a local newspaper tonight. Knode made the admission at Lakeland, Fla., last week, the editor says, when he learned arrangements were being made to farm him out.

Knode came to the Indians last spring after he was declared ineligible as he was about to participate in a big team championship game.

RECORD BREAKING CROWD AT WESTERLY GAME

Westerly, April 6.—Basketball fans from New London and Washington county were generally represented in the record breaking gallery of more than 1200 spectators in the state armory on Dixon street, Saturday night as the climax of a successful winter season of basketball, under the management of the 243rd Field Artillery. In the excitement of the double-header, which at times rose to fever pitch and seemed to threaten the completion of the game, wiser counsels prevailed and the game finished without exchange of fisticuffs.

In the first game between Westerly and Stonington in which the rivalry was keen and the scoring close—the extent of which was shown when time-up was called and the score stood 14 to 14, an extra five minutes of play was announced by Referee D. Harold Rogers and the final score stood Stonington 20, Battery E of Westerly 15.

The second game and the feature on the card, Madison Square Garden Whirlwinds vs. South Kingston, a "jar-ring" element was entered in the selection of the referee—Morgan O'Brien of the Metropolitan Basketball league of New York—who it seems has been coaching the Whirwinds, and although on his decisions "he hewed to the line" as many fouls were called, in the first stages of the game seemingly on the South Kingstown team and perhaps later impartially, nevertheless, it would have seemed the part of good management to have selected a referee whose decisions by reason of his affiliations would have left him freer from criticism on that score.

Crowds began gathering early and when the game started there were in the neighborhood of 240 automobiles parked near the armory, whose occupants had come from some distances to see a red-hot game—perhaps the last of the season—and they were not disappointed entirely on those scores. It is thought doubtful if another game is to be played and it will not be known definitely until next Tuesday night whether the Battery boys are to play on next Saturday evening a return match with the Dixie Speed Boys of Hartford, who trimmed the Battery boys by a score of 40 to 32 in a remarkably fast and clean game.

FIRPO KNOCKS OUT REICH IN FIRST ROUND

Buenos Aires, April 6—(By the A. P.)—Luis Firpo, the South American heavyweight champion, tonight added another victory to his record by knocking out Al Reich, the American heavyweight, who came to Buenos Aires with championship aspirations. Firpo's powerful right turned the trick. In less than two minutes after the sound of the gong in the first round, Firpo landed on Reich's jaw, and Reich crashed to the floor.

Notwithstanding desperate efforts, he was unable to rise within the allotted time and after the count of ten was carried to his corner.

Firpo wasted no time in going after his man. He landed a couple of heavy rights to the body and Reich succeeded in getting a light left on the South American. They clinched several times and Firpo punished the American severely between the clinches.

Suddenly he let loose a series of rights to the head and body, which left Reich helpless. Reich tried to block the blows but without success. The knockout was the third of three heavy rights to the jaw.

Firpo received a great ovation as he went over to Reich's corner to ascertain if he had seriously injured his opponent.

The end came in 1 minute 45 seconds, Firpo landing a terrific right to the jaw. Reich dropped to the canvas with a crash and remained there. He rolled over on his face.

After the count of ten he rolled over again in an attempt to rise, but fell flat on his back. He was picked up and carried to his corner.

The weights of the men as announced were Firpo 223 pounds, Reich 215 1-2 pounds. Reich was the first to enter the ring a few minutes after eleven o'clock. He was followed a half minute later by the South American champion.

Great crowds began gathering early for the fight, which Firpo has declared will be his farewell appearance in the ring.

Not less than 35,000 spectators were present when the preliminaries began, but as usual, the enthusiastic South Americans showed impatience for the coming of the stars themselves.

PLANNING ELABORATE POLO PROGRAM FOR NEXT YEAR

New York, Apr. 6.—Although the United States is focusing its attention this year on the championship polo matches with England for the Historic Hurlingham cup, plans already are afoot for an elaborate international campaign in 1925.

On the heels of the prospect that the Argentine will play here next year an all-American cup, a new competitive polo trophy, has come a cabled challenge from the British army for a British army for a series of matches in England in 1925 with an American army four. Last season the Yankee military mallet-wielders conquered the British army team here for the international military title.

BULKELEY TEAM MAKES GOOD SHOWING IN PRACTICE

New London, April 6.—The Bulkeley baseball squad had its first stiff workout of the season at Morgan Park Saturday morning. For three hours Coach Robert T. Aldrich sent the aspirants for the team through their paces. The Bulkeley mentor was highly impressed by the showing that was made by the players.

Morgan park looked the scene of a big league camp during the early stages of baseball practice. After a short infield practice for both the first and second teams, an eight inning game was played between the regulars and the Yanigans. The regulars had a three run lead on the scrub players but a series of errors and one safe hit brought the teams on even keel again in the first half of the seventh. In the latter part of the seventh, the first team batters began an assault on Parisi that netted them a total of six runs. Some heavy hitting figured in this total.

Daniels, last year's pitching ace, held the scrubs down to one hit and no runs in the four innings he was on the mound. Stiles, a freshman who relieved him, got into some hot water in the fifth and the Yannigans tied up the count at 3-all. For the Yannigans, Montali, an aspiring sophomore, was the first hurler. He was touched up for three runs in four innings. Parisi, a veteran of last season, went along well until the seventh when he struck a snag, and the first team players pounded the ball to all corners of the lot.

The Bulkeley players are the same heavy sluggers of a year ago and it looks as though another state high school championship is in store for the locals.

EPINARD TITLE SERIOUSLY CHALLENGED BY MASSINE

Paris, April 6—Epinard's title to supremacy on the French turf was seriously challenged this afternoon at the opening of the summer season at Longchamps when Massine defeated Sir Gallahad, III and Nicosat in the first racing fixture of the year. Sir Gallahad, fresh from his victory in the Lincolnshire handicap in England, was a topmost favorite among the thousands of persons present who made the opening of the flat racing season appear like a grand prix day.

Massine beat Sir Gallahad easily after having trailed him for a mile and a quarter of the distance. Nicosat was among the also rans. Epinard, which was entered in the race, declined to try conclusions with the field. French turf followers now feel that Epinard must meet Massine before Epinard goes to the United States as France's best four-year-old colt.

Today's race was the prix des Sablons, at a mile and a quarter, and Massine won in the last few strides.

JAP PLAYERS WILL TAKE PART IN TENNIS TOURNEY

New York, Apr. 6.—Zenso Shimizo and M. Fukuda, Japanese Davis cup stars now in business in this city, will represent their country in the international tennis matches together with the ranking tennis stars in their native country who are now on their way here. Shimizu has just been officially appointed captain of the Japanese Davis cup team.

Takio Harada and Suneo Okamoto, winner and runner-up in the Japanese singles title play respectively, sailed from Japan on March 21 and are due to arrive in San Francisco within a week. They will work their way east participating in various sectional tournaments, arriving in New York in time for sufficient practice before the Davis cup matches.

TO CHOOSE FOOTBALL TEAM FROM 46 AMERICAN TEAMS

New York, April 6—The Olympic team of the United States football association will be selected from the American citizens of the 46 teams composing the organization, President Peter J. Peel, of Chicago, announced tonight after a meeting of the national committee of the association. The party of 17 players, with a manager, trainer and Mr. Peel as representative of the association, will sail May 3.

How It's Done In the Majors

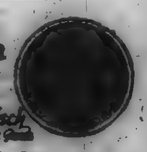
By Frank Frisch



The score is 0-0. Last half of third inning. Runners on first and second. None out.

Where and how should the third baseman play to be of greatest service to his team?

In such a situation a bunt is to be looked for. Of course, many major league teams do not bunt. Instead, they try to cross the infielders with some other play. But a third baseman should always expect a bunt and to be able to handle it he should pull in toward home in order to field it quickly and force a man at second. Often this will result in completing a double play.

A third baseman should have an understanding with both the catcher and pitcher concerning bunts coming his way, otherwise they'll collide. And he should always call for the ball when going in for a bunt in order to prevent such blunders as these collisions cause.

A good rule for the third baseman to follow on such a play is to first make sure of getting one runner out. If he does that the double play usually takes care of itself. You'll notice that big league third baseman never field a bunt or, for that matter, any ball hit at them with one hand unless compelled to do so.

DANIELSON SERVICE BATTERY FIVE WINS MILITARY BASKETBALL TITLE

Danielson, April 6. — The Service Battery won the Connecticut National Guard basketball title here Saturday evening by defeating Company B, 164th Infantry, of Middletown, champions of the western and central sections of the state, 27 to 23. The game was unusually fast and clean and kept several hundred fans in a continual state of excitement.

Company B jumped into the lead in the first quarter, 8 to 2, but the Service Battery came back to tie the score at half time, 13 to 13. The third period again showed an advantage for the infantry men who gained a lead of three points but the fighting battery team would not be denied the victory and held Middletown scoreless in the final stanza while dropping in seven points for a 27 to 23 victory. Keech was the high scorer for the victors with 18 points. Capt. Bill Armington received a sprained ankle in the first minute of play but gamely finished the contest.

In a fast preliminary the Service Battery Seconds nosed out Central Village 23 to 21. The summary:

JOHNNY DWYER PITCHES BRILLIANTLY AGAINST YALE

New London, April 6.—New London was represented in two branches of sports at New Haven Saturday, in basketball and in baseball. In the former sport, the New London Ship and Engine represented the Whaling City in the industrial elimination tournament and in the latter sport Johnny Dwyer was the sole representative of the City-By-the-Sea.

While the New London Ship and Engine basketball team did not help put the city on the sporting map of Connecticut, yet Johnny Dwyer, the former Chapman Technical High school luminary, while not only breaking into collegiate circles by pitching against Yale, but made such a good job of it that he is considered the find of the present collegiate season by critics of many newspapers.

Johnny Dwyer did not begin the game for Fordham university. He relieved Joe White, the leading Maroon slab artist for the past two years, in the third inning after the ferocious Eli batsmen had pounced upon the offerings of White and scored four runs, winning the game right there. Dwyer was nominated to relieve the tottering White with the Yale rally at its height. Neale, brother of the famous Greasy Neale, once of the Cincinnati Reds, faced Dwyer. The batter before Neale, Wear, a left fielder, was the last man to face White, he forced Captain O'Hearn at second. The New London contingent, which numbered about fifty, and who were hoping against hope that there would be a chance for the popular Dwyer on the mound before the game ended, cheered Johnny as he came out of the bull pen to relieve White.

Dwyer's name was upon the lips of not only New London fans, but also of the Fordham rooters that had traveled to New Haven from the metropolis in hopes of seeing a Fordham victory. There was only one out when Neale, a veteran of many baseball games, came up to the plate swinging his heavy club. Neale found that Dwyer could mix them and hit on a slow teaser that Johnny himself fielded and forced Wear at second. Trefel, the next Eli batter, could not do anything with Dwyer's delivery and grounded out to Hayes at first.

In extracting himself out of this precarious position, Dwyer not only received the comment of Coach Coffey upon his good work, the New London contingent was in an uproar. Fordham rooters were wild with joy and this masterly pitching gave them new hope for a victory. But four runs which were made off White's delivery was too much to overcome by the Maroon athletes and the game was lost by a 4 to 2 score.

While Dwyer was on the plateau he allowed the Yale batsmen but one safe single. He twirled five and two-thirds innings. The Hartford Courant credits Dwyer with allowing the Yale batsmen one hit while the New Haven Register gives Yale a total of seven hits, four of these made off Dwyer's delivery. This is not so for before Dwyer took the mound duty assignment, White allowed Ewing, the Yale third baseman two hits, O'Hearn one, Mallory one and Lindley one. The Hartford Courant credits Yale with a total of six hits and the writer of the article agrees with this total of safe hits gathered by the Yale batsmen.

The fact that Johnny Dwyer was given the preference over a much older twirler, Slate, in finishing the game with Yale, points towards a real collegiate baseball career for the local boy. It is possible that Dwyer will get the call over the veteran, Joe White, after Saturday's performance. In the course of an interview with Coach Coffey, the Fordham mentor extoled Dwyer highly on his behavior on the mound.

This is good news to New London fans who hope that Dwyer can keep up the good work. Many local fans who traveled to New Haven especially for the purpose of seeing Dwyer do his stuff, were not disappointed. No doubt the New London contingent would have been much larger if it had been guaranteed that Dwyer would appear in a Fordham uniform.

FRENCH FLYWEIGHT CHAMP BEATS BELGIAN BOXER

Oran, Algeria, April 6—Young Ascensio, known as the "European Pancho Villa," flyweight champion of France, defeated Henri Hebrans, of Belgium, in a fifteen round bout last night before ten thousand fans, the largest gathering ever assembled in North Africa.

Hebrans proved a tough customer, and the champion was unable to put him away. He is so tough that Eugene Criqui, the former featherweight champion of the world and Edouard Mascart, the European featherweight champion, both broke their hands on his head in previous fights.

FRED TONEY GETS HIS RELEASE FROM CARDS

St. Louis, April 6—That Branch Rickey feels the St. Louis National club is well fortified as to pitchers was shown today when the Cardinal manager announced the unconditional release of Fred Toney, veteran pitcher. With Toney gone, the Cardinals now have 27 players under contract. The squad leaves Bradentown, Fla., tonight on their trip north, meeting at Syracuse in Jacksonville, Fla. tomorrow; and Rochester, N. Y., at Savannah, Atlanta at Atlanta, Ga., and Memphis at Memphis on the days following, arriving in St. Louis Friday.

Ingwersen to Coach at Iowa

Iowa City, Ia., April 6—(By the A. P.)—Burt E. Ingwersen, first assistant varsity coach at the University of Illinois tonight was elected head football coach of the University of Iowa, by the board of athletics.

Cuban Boxers Coming Here

Havana, Cuba, April 6—Angel Diaz, 124-pound Mexican boxer and Andrew Balsa, 195 pound Spaniard will leave tomorrow for New York accompanied by George Lawrence, their manager.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

Abe Goldstein, the new bantamweight champion, plans to take up law as a profession when he is through with the boxing game.

The celebrated Caledonian Club of New York city held its first outdoor meeting of track and field sports at Hoboken in 1857.

King George has been an ardent devotee of tennis since boyhood and is patron of the British Lawn Tennis Association.

The six towns making up the Eastern Shore League of Maryland this season are Salisbury, Cambridge, Dover, Parksley, Easton and Crisfield.

The Western Association has decided to take out rain insurance to the amount of $1,500 on each of the holiday games on the season's schedule.

The Detroit Y. M. C. A. natatorium, one of the finest in the country, is to be the scene of the national A. A. U. swimming championships in April.

George Whitted, former major league player, who piloted the Toledo Mudhens last season, is to manage an independent league club at Mt. Carmel, Pa., this year.

The largest display of beagles ever exhibited in the United States will feature the coming bench show of the Mississippi Valley Kennel club at St. Louis.

Denver fight fans are agog over the possibility that the boxing game may be revived in their city on the "four-round" basis, similar to that which has proved so satisfactory on the coast.

Johnny Mostil and Harry Hooper, of the Chicago White Sox, are definite holdouts. Mostil is asking for more money and Hooper, because he is a ten-year man is asking for his unconditional release so that he can make a deal with the New York Giants.

The Chicago Cub players have an orchestra which is in great demand in Avalon. The other night they gave a concert which was broadcasted by radio. The orchestra includes Ace Elliott, piano; Cliff Heathcote, Jack Churry and Hack Miller, guitars; Barney Friberg, banjo; Otto Vogel, violin, Raymond Pierce, bass horn, and Sparky Adams trombone.

Surgeons have found a chipped bone in Arnold Statz's ankle, and also state that he has wrenched muscles in his leg. The injuries were received in a recent exhibition game and the doctors say that the Cubs' star outfielder will be out of the game until the opening of the season.

Manager Stanley Harris of the Washington Senators has asked President Clark Griffith for an extension of time in which to weed out the recruit players on the club's roster. The men in camp look so good that Stanley is afraid that he might turn loose a player that might be a star.

No one can say that Outfielder Bernie Neis of the Brooklyn team does not use good judgment even when skylarking with his teammates. Last week Neis and Gene Bailey, who is Bernie's most formidable rival for the center field job, engaged in a friendly scuffle. Neis happened to have an opened penknife in his hand and during the mix-up he accidentally cut Bailey's right thumb, and Gene will be on the shelf for a few days.

Men who have had training under McGraw will predominate as managers in the National League this year. Besides Muggsy, himself, at New York, we have Art Fletcher, who used to shortstop for the Giants at Philadelphia; Dave Bancroft at Boston, and of course, Wilbert Robinson at Brooklyn.

Only California and France are to be represented in the Olympic Rugby championships, which are to begin at Paris May 3.

History records that the first billiard table was set up in New York City, in a house on Whitehall Dock, in the year 1800.

Jack Johnson, the former champion pugilist, is reported to have become sporting editor of a new weekly newspaper published by negroes in Montreal.

Forty-six entries are reported for the sixty-fifth renewal of the King's Plate, the great Canadian turf classic, which will be run at Toronto on May 17. The event has the distinction of being the oldest continuous racing fixture in America.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

BREED THEATRE

Murmurs of surprise and whispers of delight hailed The Uninvited Guest, the Metro picture which opened at the Breed theatre yesterday. It is a J. E. Williamson presentation produced with undersea scenes by the Submarine Film Corporation with natural color photography by the Technicolor process and directed by Ralph Ince.

As the plot of the story, written by Curtis Benton, progressed on the screen, the audience held its breath at the thrilling rescues and realistic undersea scenes that make this production decidedly unusual. A gripping love story which starts in New York, goes through a shipwreck on the sea route to San Francisco, lingers in the beauty and glamor of the South Sea Isles, and winds up in the Westchester estate of a millionaire would be enough to class The Uninvited Guest as an exceptional picture.

When the beauty of Jessie Tolley, and the villainy of William Bailey and Louis Wolheim; the trickery of Mary MacLoren and the bravery of Maurice "Lefty" Flynn, in perfect portrayals of colorful roles are added to the story, it becomes very exceptional.

And then, to cap the climax, 25 per cent of the picture, most of them undersea scenes, have been filmed in their natural colors and as such are a treat to even the most blase of picture-goers.

The Uninvited Guest will be the feature attraction at the Breed theatre again today and Tuesday and other pictures on the bill include the Pathe news and an Educational comedy.

Bradley Theatre, Putnam—Orpheum Theatre, Danielson.

A play described by all who have seen it as hugely entertaining is The Cat and the Canary, by John Willard. This drama is now on tour and is announced by Kilbourn Gordon, Inc., for presentation at the Bradley theatre, Putnam, on Wednesday evening April 9 at 8.15 p. m., and at the Orpheum theatre, Danielson, Thursday evening, April 10, at 8.15 p. m. The popularity of The Cat and the Canary gained it two successful seasons in New York and long runs in Chicago, London and Philadelphia.

The Cat and the Canary is a drama in three acts. The story concerns an eccentric bachelor who leaves a will requiring that his heirs shall meet to hear it read at midnight on the twentieth anniversary of his death. The appointed place is the library of the house where he died. In the interim the sole occupant of the house has been a superstitious West Indian negress. References to a strain of insanity in the family, to spirit messages, seeking a medium, to a valuable lost necklace, to a homicidal maniac at large in the neighborhood, all help to create a sense of impending events of dire import. When, in the first act, a pair of ghostly hands snatch the matter-of-fact lawyer out of the scene, the play of thrills is fully under way. But the author has provided the necessary reaction to all this mystery in natural comedy which quickly follows each thrill and makes The Cat and the Canary, an entertaining play of exceptional worth.

The production is complete in every detail for all the settings and effects are exactly reproduced from those in use in New York. The cast includes Helen Mayon, Reed Brown, Bernard Craney, Eda Heinemann, W. Fay Roope, Helen Beresford, Sally Sanford, Thaddeus Gray and James T. Ayres. The Cat and the Canary, it is said, has an appeal for every playgoer who has red blood in his veins for it is an old thriller brought back to life and richly modernized.

At the Palace.

The first half we have The Acme of Daredevitry. Even the most cold-blooded blase person relishes an occasional thrill. No matter how much we profess to be surfeited with so called sensationalism, we still enjoy a novelty or an original presentation. This is specially true in theatredom. The old is often repeated saying, "there is nothing new under the sun" rests an occasional refutation when we see such wonders as radio for instance, or other modern inventions. And the old adage is again overthrown in the case of an act that is to appear at the Palace theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The act is entitled The Sensational Duponts, and it is all that the name implies.

Barry and Lancaster in their laugh-a-minute bit of Tom-foolery, Yes We Have No Bologna, will be welcome visitors to this city. Although this is their first appearance here they are quite well known to anyone who has been a habitue of New York's bright lights for they have appeared in numerous musical comedies for years past. We promise you the heartiest laugh of your life when you see this capable couple of comedians.

Mlle. LaToy presents a beautiful spectacle which she terms "the most beautiful act in vaudeville" and the proof that she has aptly named it will be seen during her engagement here. It has universally been conceded as being the last word in artistic presentation.

Manuel Romaine is well known here for many years a bright shining light in minstrelsy. He forsook the scenes of his former successes to star in vaudeville. Together with the Romaine Twins offers a routine of harmony songs and dances that are a delight to the ear and eye. Harmony and agility are blended so that even the most unappreciative cannot help but enjoy and applaud.

One of the really bright stars of this exceptional show is Phil Romano, a clever comedian who has a line of bright chatter and catchy as well as novel song selections. He is well worth listening to as he has reached the top of his chosen art.

At the Strand.

From the pages of one of America's most famous novel will step what is hailed as a classic of the screen, when "Fools Highway," Universal's first great starring vehicle for Mary Philbin since "Merry-Go-Round," opens its engagement at the Broadway theatre commencing today. It is the adaptation of "My Mamie Rose," Owen Kildare's famous story of the old Bowery, actually the author's own life. Played by a great cast of notable players in a spectacular setting that reproduces in every detail the famous old street, the new picture is held one of the masterpieces of the year for its faithful portrayal of life and gripping drama interest.

"Big Brother" at the Strand.

The theme is that old, yet ever-new topic of regeneration. The story centers around one Jimmy Donovan and a little fellow, Midge, an orphan left absolutely alone in the world when his "big brother" is killed at the season's big social event, the annual dance of the Pat McGraw Pastime club. Big Ben Murray was Jim's pal and Donovan's last words to his faithful lieutenant were a promise to bring the kid up straight. He fights a terrible battle with himself and finally manages to go straight, though he hates the police.

Accused of the theft of his firm's pay-roll, Donovan does a Houdini out of his handcuffs and starts hot-footed on the trail of the real thieves—Cokey Joe Miller and his own like the money—in fact he is seriously wounded. The authorities are informed of the case and in appreciation, the cops are admonished to "lay off Jimmy Donovan, he's turned straight"—not that the Czar of the Car Barn gang was chicken-hearted or even a "sis"—rather a gentleman who had become a gangster through circumstances and turned the well known leave for Midge's sake—and a girl.

Mickey Bennett, as Midge Murray, is the cleverest juvenile actor the screen has ever seen—bar none. The whole thing is superbly done — another Dwan triumph — a gripping story, simply though convincingly produced. It's the best crook drama we've ever seen.

The master picture is at the Strand today, Tuesday and Wednesday in addition to short subjects.

Will Address Vegetable Growers

On Wednesday evening, April 9, there will be a meeting of the vegetable growers of Norwich and vicinity at the Farm Bureau office, 19 Shannon Building. A. E. Wilkinson, vegetable specialist from the extension department of the Connecticut Agricultural college will be present. The subject that he will present is "Where Our Competition Comes From."

Paul Mehl who is the marketing specialist at the college, will also be present. Mr. Mehl has made a special study of the Waterbury and Bridgeport markets and has some very interesting figures and information in regard to the sources of vegetable supply of these markets, together with the prices for a period of years. This is a very interesting subject and in a smaller way the marketing in Norwich is similar to Waterbury and Bridgeport.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE-AWAKES

WINTER RAIN

Every valley drinks,
Every dell and hollow:
Where the kind rain sinks and sinks,
Green of spring will follow.

For a week of weeks
Buds will burst their edges,
Sleep their woolen coats, glue-coats,
Streaks
In the woods and hedges.

Weave a bower of love
For birds to meet each other,
Weave a canopy above
Nest and egg and mother.

But for bottomless rain,
We should have no flowers,
Never a bud or leaf again
But for seeking showers;

Never a mated bird
In the rocking tree-tops,
Never indeed a flock or herd
To graze upon the lea-crops.

Lambs be woolly white,
Sheep the sun-bright loam on,
They could have no grass to bite
But for rain in season.

We should find no moss
In the shadiest places,
Find no waving meadow-grass
Pied with broad-eyed daisies:

But miles of barren sand,
With never a sea or daughter,
Not a lily in the land
Or lily on the water.

—Christina Georgina Rossetti.

JOG ON, JOG ON

Jog on, jog on, the footpath way,
And merrily hent the stile-a
A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tires in a mile-a.

Every penny moneybags of gold—
What good have we to store for,
When little or nothing seen is told,
And we have less to care for.

Then cast away care, let sorrow cease,
A fig for melancholy;
Let's laugh and sing, or, if you please
We'll troule with sweet Dolly.

—SHAKESPEARE.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDEAWAKES.

It takes intelligence, self-control and zeal to become reliable, trustworthy, skilful and serviceable in this world, and it is the discipline and orderliness of childhood that prepares the way to success. To be intelligent means that a person must understand how things are done and not only that but why things are done. He must understand the ordinary, everyday things that confront us. He must be educated if he intends to push his way ahead. The place we begin our education is in school, so we ought to gain all the knowledge we can during our school days.

Self-control means that we must be able to control our actions and our words when our inner feelings tell us to do otherwise. In other words, we should not dare up over every little thing that goes wrong and do and say mean things. That doesn't get us anywhere; it only makes life all the harder for us, for very often lack of self-control loses friendships that might have helped us a great deal. That means knowing how to do and say the right things at the right time.

It is a pity to see children traveling the path that leads to a life of hardship, poverty and despair. Whether children realize it or not, character is moulded during childhood. Our actions in later life are largely influenced by our actions in childhood. If we allow ourselves to be headstrong and unruly while we are children, the chances are that we will have the very same traits when we grow up. If we allow ourselves to be slovenly and careless about our personal appearance we are very likely to be the same in later life. If we form bad habits in childhood they are quite liable to stick to us throughout life. A bad habit is a hard thing to shake off once it gets a firm foothold.

It should be the aim of every boy and girl to lead as clean a life and as serviceable a life as possible.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE-AWAKES.

The Plainfield High School Building.

Uncle Jed: The citizens of the town of Plainfield decided that the old school building was not equipped with the room and accommodations necessary. They thought that with the increased population and other items that it would be profitable to expend the vast sum of money necessary for a new high school building that would equal if not rival any school in the state.

It is built of red brick and is entirely fireproof. The heating, ventilation and sanitation systems are the most modern to be found. Cooking, science and biology laboratories are of the best and make us very proud to be able to study in them. The auditorium and gymnasium are very well equipped, which is proved by the excellence of the school athletic teams.

This building is very beautiful and has cost the citizens of Plainfield much sacrifice.

HAS TWO CATS

Dear Uncle Jed: I have two dandy cats. Their names are Monkey and Brandy. I made a big box and shingled it and the cats go in to rest. I love cats.

Monkey is the oldest cat. Brandy is a young cat. I don't let people pull their tails. I don't know any more to tell. I am ten years old.

SAW FOUR DEER

Dear Uncle Jed: Tuesday we saw four deer. They were down in the woods and we could see their white balls. We often see deer. Sometimes we see as many as six deer at a time. The deer sometimes come fifty feet from the house. One evening we saw a mother deer and her baby deer.

THE GREEN - TAILED TOWHEE

Dear Uncle Jed: The green-tailed towhee is a summer bird. It is one of the characteristic birds of the western states. It is an inhabitant of the sagebrush, chaparral, and cactus, and is usually observed singing from the top of a bush, or hopping about on the ground. The song is bright and musical and the call is a soft mewing note. The nest, which is placed on the ground, is made of sticks and lined with grass. The eggs, four in number, are whitish speckled with reddish brown.

MY PIGEONS

Dear Uncle Jed: Last week father bought me a pair of pigeons. They are purple with red. It is fun to watch them when they eat. I feed them with corn and bread. They like to drink water. They made a nest in the box that father hung on the house. In the nest are two eggs. I like my pigeons.

A VISIT TO SLATER HALL

Uncle Jed: Many years ago William A. Slater gave to the town of Norwich a building which is now called Slater Hall, and which is dedicated to the memory of his father, John F. Slater.

This beautiful building contains many statues. One part of the gallery consists of those of the gods and goddesses. Of these the Greeks had many; such as Demeter, Zeus, Hera, Pluto, Mermes, Athene and many others we could mention.

There are other statues of athletes. Among them are, The Discus Thrower, The Wrestlers, The Runners and The Winner. The Greeks were famous for their beautiful bodies and in these statues we see this.

The first sculptors used a tree trunk for the body, the roots for the feet and placed a head on the top. If we notice the statues closely, we find a great deal of advancement in them. Those of the fifth century are greatly improved over the third century products.

The Greeks were also famous for their beautiful buildings; as an example the Parthenon which was extensively decorated. They told stories in relief as is the case in, The Seige of Troy, Perseus and others.

The originals of these statues are now in the great museums of Paris, London, Rome, and Berlin. Museums which are not fortunate enough to have the originals have duplicates, as in the case of Slater Hall.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A LEAF

Dear Uncle Jed: My experiences first began when one day I awoke as a bud on a maple tree to hear a robin singing sweetly, and to see little green sheets of grass sprouting up around me.

I was growing very quickly, and having a nice time, until one day a strong wind came and I had to hold on very tightly to the twig which I was on. When that storm was over it would not take much to blow me away, because it had loosened me very much. One morning shortly after, when I awoke I found a spot of pretty yellow on me and also a small spot of red. I knew that in a short time I was to leave and go on a long journey.

I was not there long until a strong wind blew me off the twig and carried me about a mile, not far from the banks of a river. Many other leaves and myself were there about a week, when another strong wind came and blew me into the river.

I was carried down the river with the current for about a mile seeing many beautiful sights. Suddenly, I was caught by a bush that was growing on the bank of the river. I am still held there fast, hoping to proceed on my journey soon again.

KINDNESS TO ANIMALS

Dear Uncle Jed: Everybody knows something about animals and what they do for man. I think we ought to be kind to animals. Here is a story about, Kindness to Animals.

A wagon was heavily loaded with bags of iron. It looked too heavy for one horse to draw. The patient animal had strained and tugged, until he finally reached the top of the hill. Now he must back the heavy load in at the open door of a barn.

The horse braced his fore feet and pushed, but the wagon did not move. The man got down from his seat, went to the back of the truck and pulled. "Back!" he cried.

The wagon moved this time about a foot. Once the driver pulled and the horse pushed both together.

"Back!"

With the last command, the horse shoved with all his might. This time the horse succeeded. The wagon rolled back. Not a blow had the horse been struck. Only gentle words had been spoken, and the horse had done the rest. The man went to the horse's head, took his nose in his hands, patted him between the eyes, and said, "Good old Jim! You did it, didn't you? I knew you would."

PROMPT OBEDIENCE

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you a story of a little girl. One day Mary and her mother crossed the little stream that came from the pond. Mary wanted to play in the water. Her mother said that she might. Bye and bye there came a noise like thunder. It seemed to come from the pond. "Quick, Mary! come here!" said her mother. Mary did not stop to ask why. She ran to where her mother stood. Then they saw the water pouring down over the rocks. The great water gate by the dam was broken. If you had waited said Mary's mother you might have been carried down the river. I am glad you obeyed at once.

MY BIRTHDAY PARTY

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my third story. I hope all the Wide Awakes will be interested in reading it. As Saturday was very pleasant, I went over to my cousins house. When I came home the table was set and to my surprise there was a beautiful birthday cake with ten candles on it. And there were many other good things. There were six girls and six boys there. At eight lunch was served. It consisted of cake, soda, nuts and ice-cream. I received many gifts, a hair ribbon, a pair of beads and a dress. At twelve o'clock they all went home very tired but very happy.

MY DOG

Dear Uncle Jed: I have a nice dog. Its name is Susie. She is yellow with a black mouth and her feet are white. She can do many tricks. When she feels sad she will come to me and sit up as if she wanted something.

Just a few days ago I got a new dog. It is not very old. When our old dog came in the house and saw my father petting it she became very jealous and came over to me to be petted too. So I picked her up and petted her too. Then she looked at the other dog as if to say, "You are not the only one that can be petted."

Finally the little dog got down and came near me, but the other dog would not let her touch me.

A CAT AND A MOUSE

Dear Uncle Jed: At home I have a cat named Tatles. He likes to play with a paper tied by a string to the door knob. He likes to play with other cats too. One day he was looking closely at a hole in the ground. I was wondering why he stayed still instead of playing. Soon I saw a twig move. I kept still. Then I saw a mouse stick out its head. As soon as it was out Tatles leaped and got it. He ate it.

LIKES THE FARM

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write a letter to you. I would like to tell the Wide Awakes my hobby. My hobby is farming. I like to milk cows and feed the hens and collect the eggs. Some boys don't like to farm but I do. I just think the country is the greatest place on earth. I stayed in the city two weeks. I was so miserable I didn't know what to do. I notice that I haven't been sick very much and that only with a cold and not often.

In the summer time I use the horse and horse rake to rake the hay and I think it is a great pleasure on a farm you can roam in the lanes and in the swamps to gather pussy-lips. It will soon be time for them. I like very much to do the planting in the gardens and to gather the products.

In the fall you can pick apples and nuts. I think anybody that does not like the country can't have much love for his health. In the woods you can fish for trout and other fish. I would rather live on a farm than in the city.

When you get a chance to come into the country, take it.

ARNOLD KENDALL.

THE MOUSE GOT AWAY

Dear Uncle Jed: One day pussy caught a mouse and brought it in the cellar to eat it. Just as pussy was going to eat the mouse it seemed to say, "You should wash your face before eating. Every mouse and rat does." Pussy said, "O, yes, I forgot all about that." Pussy let the mouse go to wash his face. "Good-bye," said the little gray mouse as it ran to a hole. "I see," said pussy looking very wise, "the next time I catch a mouse or rat they won't fool me."

I saw all this happen and had a good laugh at pussy.

MY VACATION

Dear Uncle Jed: Last week we had a vacation. Monday I went hiking in the woods. We saw many interesting things as we went along and we saw a few rabbits in a pile of brush. We saw a mother and father rabbit with five young ones in one of the piles.

Tuesday I took a ride to Westerly to see some of my friends. That night I went to the theater in Westerly.

Wednesday I went hunting in the woods. We saw a few young snakes. We killed some of them and then we built a fire and we roasted some potatoes.

Thursday I played around the house with my hoops, but on Friday I drove a horse around the village for an egg-man.

Saturday I made a garden and flew my kite. Later I am going to plant carrots, lettuce, radishes and parsnips.

Sunday I went to Sunday school. I think that I have had a good vacation.

THE BIG SNOW STORM

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first letter I have ever sent to the Wide Awake circle. So I will tell you about the big snowstorm we had here. It snowed all day and all night and part of the second day, and the wind blew very hard. There were a good many telephone poles broken down near our house, so the telephone men came to fix the wires and put in new poles. They had the trucks in our yard while they were at work. They had to work hard and got very wet. So my father asked them to come in and get warm and dry, and eat their lunch if they cared to. And they were very glad and thankful. They were working around here for a week. The trolley cars did not run for more than a day, and there are big snow piles around here yet. There were sixteen robins in our orchard the day before the storm. I hope they did not freeze or starve, and will come back soon.

A NARROW ESCAPE

Dear Uncle Jed: One day last summer I had a very narrow escape. As it was hot, my parents suggested going for a ride in the auto. No sooner had they said it than we went.

We climbed a very high and steep hill, and had to go on low. After we had gotten half way up we started to go backward. As my brother was driving he put his brakes on, but it didn't do any good. My father then jumped out and put a stone behind the back wheel.

We then found out that our brakes wouldn't hold. I certainly thought that a narrow escape.

MY PIANO CAT

PICKING COTTON

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about cotton. When cotton is one day old it is white. Then it turns pink and the third day it turns green. It swells to the size of a hen's egg, then bursts open and is ready to pick. Picking in Texas begins in June. In other places later. It is sometimes picked by machine, but mostly by hand. The pickers are paid a half cent a pound. One man can pick two to three hundred pounds of cotton in one day. Cotton is valuable according to the fibre. The Sea Island cotton is the best because it's strands are long. The bush grows to 12 feet and more. Cotton is used for clothing and cloth, also for other things. It is a hundred years ago since cotton has been separated by hand. It took people a long time to get one bale of cotton free from seeds. By machine fifteen bales or more are cleaned in one day. When cotton is ready for shipment, it is squeezed into bales bound about with iron bands. Our best customer is the United Kingdom, next come Germany then France, Italy and Spain. We send cotton to China and Japan.

HOW A SQUIRREL ESCAPED

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the second time I have written to you. I am going to tell you about a Squirrels Escape. I was sitting in the woods one autumn day when I heard a small cry and a rustling amid the branches of a tree a few rods beyond me. Looking thither I saw a squirrel fall through the air, and catch on a limb 30 or more feet from the ground. He appeared to have dropped from near the top of the tree.

He secured his hold upon the small branch that had luckily intercepted his fall, and sat perfectly still.

In a moment more I saw a cat which was lost in the woods, come down the trunk of the tree and begin exploring the branches on a level with the squirrel.

I saw in a moment what had happened. The cat had driven the squirrel from his retreat in the rocks and stones beneath, and had pressed him so closely that he had taken refuge in the top of the tree. But cats can climb trees, too, and this one had tracked the frightened squirrel to the topmost branches where he had tried to seize him. Then the squirrel had, in horror, let go his hold, screamed, and fallen through the air, till he struck the branch just described.

MY BIRTHDAY

Dear Uncle Jed; I am going to write to you about my birthday. We lived in Oneco then. My aunt and my uncle and my brother Robert came. They were going to hang a May basket, because my birthday was May the ninth. Robert hit the door with his foot and frightened me. They told me to go to the door, but I was afraid, because he hit the door so hard. Then pape got up and went to the door. There was a May basket on the steps. He brought it in and I was surprised. I went out to find them. They were in the woodshed because I heard them. My sister Ruth helped me to find them. We found them and they went in the house. I found bananas, nuts and candies and other nice things. It was my ninth birthday. My aunt and my uncle went home and that was the end of my birthday.

OUR TRIP TO THE GREEN MOUNTAINS

Dear Uncle Jed: During my vacation my mother, father, sister and I went to the Green Mountains. The day we started was very exciting. We started very early in the morning. We had a very pleasant day to go. That made the day more comfortable. The scenes were much more beautiful because the sun shone on them. When we got in sight of the Green Mountain I was very anxious.

When we reached the Green Mountains my uncle was waiting for us at the station with his automobile. We went to his house. The next day we started to go to our cottage in the Green Mountains. My uncle has a cottage near ours. We had a good time for two months.

When it was time to go home we went back to my uncles house for two days. We started homeward August 30, 1923. We reached home safe, tired but happy. The house seemed empty for a few days. We got used to it soon. I hope we will go again next year.

PHILADELPHIA IN HISTORY

Dear Uncle Jed: This time I am going to tell you about Philadelphia. William Penn was a Quaker. He wanted to make a home for the Quakers so he asked the king for a piece of land in America. The king gave him a piece. Penn named his settlement Philadelphia.

Philadelphia was the largest city in colonial times. Ben Franklin was a great printer and writer. He lived in Philadelphia. He went to France to get help for us during the Revolution.

The Continental Congress met in Philadelphia. Philadelphia was one of the places tea was sent to. The people stored it in damp cellars where it spoiled. The Declaration of Independence was signed in Philadelphia. Philadelphia was in the fighting zone during the Revolution.

Our first flag was made in Philadelphia. George Washington drew a design for a flag on paper and took it to Betsy Ross, the best sewer of that time. She made the flag just as Washington had planned it. The United States was governed under these articles from 1781 to 1789. Then our Constitution was made for better government. Philadelphia was our first capitol. Ever since then Philadelphia has been a prosperous city.

BE KIND TO ANIMALS

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to the Wide Awakes. I am going to write about, Kindness to Birds and Animals. You should always be kind to birds and animals. If you are kind to an animal he will not be so timid next time. He will gradually become friendly with you. If you put out a board with seeds and nuts on it the birds will come all the time. Some boys enjoy stoning frogs. Boys who do this do not know that frogs have feelings. If you are cross don't kick the cat. Some boys shoot birds for fun. These boys should be kind to birds. I have two squirrels near my home. I put food out for the squirrels. I do not harm them. They come very near the house. If food is not there they will come near the house and wait to see if we see them. We then put out food for them. They like corn, apples and nuts. Never forget to be kind to birds and animals.

I LIKE MY MOTHER BEST

Dear Uncle Jed: My dearest friend is not a young person. She has tints of gray in her hair. She has mild blue eyes that twinkle and seem to smile sweetly at you and such a kind pleasant voice. Sometimes in the evenings we all gather at the fireplace and she tells us the most delightful ghost stories you ever heard. She always helps me with my shopping. I like some of the newest things but really I look dreadful with them on. But she always picks out something becoming for me. You probably would like to know who she is so I'll tell you. She's my own dear mother.

IRON THE EVERYDAY METAL

Dear Uncle Jed: Have you ever thought how much labor and time are taken in getting raw materials ready to be made into iron? Before railroad tracks can be laid, iron has to go through a long process until it is made into steel. Then it has to be molded into the long slender rails. This is just the way with the iron in our world.

Wherever you see a bank of red sand or red clay or a little brook which leaves a red mark on the ground as it flows it may be iron. Iron is in most soils, in red bricks, in garnets, ripening apples and even in your own blood. It forms one twentieth part of the crust of the earth. Iron dissolves in water if you give it time enough. If you leave a steel tool out of doors on a wet night it will rust. If you were making a world and wanted to give the people the most useful metal possible the gift would have to be iron.

If iron that is in use should suddenly disappear did you ever think what would happen? Houses, churches, skyscrapers, and bridges would fall to the ground. Everybody would be out of work. To see how it would seem, try for an hour to use nothing that is made of iron or has been made by using iron.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A GRAIN OF WHEAT

Dear Uncle Jed: I am a grain of wheat. I was planted by a farmer in a great field in North Carolina. I grew fast and soon discovered I was nearly three feet in height and of a golden yellow hue. I remained in the field until harvesting time. Then I was gathered with my companions by hired workers and put in a large farm wagon. Unfortunately for me I was at the very bottom. With all my companions on top of me. I do not understand why I was not smothered.

We were taken into a large barn and remained there a short time. Then again we were put in a team and driven away. We were put through various machines, and finally turned into the flour. We were put in a cotton bag and bought by a baker in Massachusetts. He mixed us with yeast, water and other substances and put us in a small pan. Then, Oh! goodness! gracious! I thought sure my end had come when I was put in a terribly hot oven. The heat was so intense I fell into unconsciousness and when I regained consciousness I was hardly know myself.

I was a fresh crisp, wholesome loaf bread. After being wrapped in oiled paper, I was put in the five o'clock backery machine. This being the first time I had ridden in an automobile I grew quite dizzy. I was just beginning to like it when I was sold to a little boy who skipped home with me and said, "Now, mother please give me a slice of bread." "Yes," replied the mother, and so there my end came.

A NIGHT'S CAMPING

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first story to you and the Wide Awakes. This is about one of my adventures. One day last summer we went out and were out for a good time. So we did have a good time all day. When night came we got our camp beds ready. As we were all tired we lay down and soon fell asleep. I don't know how long I slept, but I was awakened by a noise outside. The others were all snoring and not wishing to awaken them I got up noiselessly and looked out and saw two boys and I could hear them talking and judging from what I heard I knew they were going to scare us.

I seized a sheet from my bed and threw it over my shoulders and head and went out and started to walk. I don't know how near I was but all at once I heard a scream and someone running. I could hardly stop laughing when I took the sheet off. The other girls were up and I told them about it. They said it was a good lesson for the boys.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID COXY

Looking the Animals Over

As soon as the circus was over in the last story, Little Jack Rabbit and Uncle Lucky went around to see the animals in the big painted wagons. And gracious me! How the lions roared and the hyenas laughed and the bears growled! Little Jack Rabbit was so started that he hid behind the old gentleman rabbit's coattails. Then they had seen all there was to be seen they hopped out and into the Luckymobile.

By and by, after a while, whom should they see but the Farmer's Boy driving his father's big team of horses. They were hitched up to the plow, for the Farmer wished to have his field ready for planting potatoes.

All the farmyard folk came to the Fence

Stopping the Luckymobile behind a clump of trees, the two little bunnies hopped over to the Old Rail Fence. Not far behind the Farmer's Boy hopped little Bobbie Redvest, picking the worms in the plowed-up ground and when he had his beak full, he flew away to the old apple tree in the orchard to feed the little robins which Mrs. Robbie Redvest kept in their nice new nest.

As the two little rabbits stood there, all the Barnyard folk came into the field to pick up worms. There was Cocky Doodles and Henny Jenny, Ducky Waddles and Turkey Tim, besides the little chickens who had come out of the lovely Easter eggs which Henny Jenny had painted yellow and sky-blue.

"Hello there," said Uncle Lucky, taking off his old wedding stovepipe hat to bow politely.

"Cock-a-doodle-do,
I'm very well, thank you.
We're eating up the little worms,
And everything that crawls and squirms.
The Farmer's Boy we're helping, too,
For he has all that he can do
To drive and guide the heavy plough
And milk at night the moofy cow."

Then the old weathercock on the Big Red Barn whirled around on his right foot and pointed toward the west, where Billy Breeze was bringing up a big white cloud to spread over Mr. Merry Sun. But the big white cloud broke up into little clouds and Mr. Merry Sun laughed down from the big blue sky till all the little leaves and buds trembled in the breeze and the water, as it fell over the old mill dam looked like jumping diamonds and little colored glass marbles down to the roaring ocean.

"Ker-dunk, ker-dunk!" sang Granddaddy Bullfrog, as he sat sunning himself on the old log. All of a sudden, he jumped into the Old Duck Pond with a great splash for the Miller's Boy, who happened along, picked up a stone by the Old Rail Fence and the old gentleman frog thought that bad boy was going to throw it at him. And perhaps Granddaddy Bullfrog was right and in the next story I'll tell you some more about Little Jack Rabbit and his friends.

Conductor 1402 at the Palace.

Conductor 1402, scheduled to play at the Palace theatre during the first half of this week, is a typical Johnny Hines picture. This means that everybody who sees this comedy should be prepared to laugh boisterously, frequently and long. This comedian of shadowland is credited with possessing an assortment of pep and laugh-provoking antics at once the delight of his audiences and the envy of his rivals.

He is given the widest range and free play for his stunts and antics in Conductor 1402, as Johnny Hines wrote the story and scenario for this picture himself.

It is a story of a young Irishman, Terry O'Toole, who leaves his native country to make his fortune in America. Arriving in the land of the free, he goes to Loteda, Ohio, where his father had spent a few years when in this country.

Before long, he dons the uniform of a motorman of the Loteda Traction company. His job also includes that of conductor and his number is 1402—hence—Conductor 1402.

Terry does not find the work irksome, for what with beating up such passengers that offer resistance to his requests, flirting with the ladies and various other funny pleasantries, time passes quickly. But one day he performs an act of great bravery in saving the life of the son of the president of the traction company, which brings Terry into the limelight. He meets the president's daughter and then things take on a different outlook for him.

The supporting cast includes such favorites as Doris May, Dorothy Burns, Michael Dark, Ruth Renick, Robert Cain, Dan Mason, Fred Esmelton and Byron Sage. Direction is by his brother, Charles Hines, and Frank Griffen. It is a Warner Brothers classic of the screen.

"The Gingham Girl" at the Broadway Soon.

Everyone in this city who keeps in touch with the events of the theatres has heard about "The Gingham Girl." This musical comedy created a sensation in New York last season. It broke this year's record for musical attractions by remaining on Broadway for more than 300 performances and giving 100 per cent. satisfaction to the half million people who saw the show.

"The Gingham Girl," with a special organization of singers, dancers, chorus and musicians, will come to the Broadway theatre, Friday night, April 11th.

The book of the play is by Daniel Kussell, the music by Albert von Tilzer, the lyrics by Neville Fleeson and the dances staged by Sammy Lee.

"The Gingham Girl" would also be called the "ginger girl," for this musical comedy has shown so much pep that it lasted a long, hard season and then again into the summer. It had one of the most likeable stories in years, setting forth with variety, dash and abundance of humor how a self-confident young man from the country started out to make a pile in the big city, only to discover that his little sweetheart back home in New Hampshire had come to New York, and has made her fortune instead, by putting up the smartest hot toothsome cookies.

ORGAN AND SONG IN RECITAL AT PALACE

During lent when the mind turns to the finer things and one's soul is open to and is seeking the nobler influence in life, music, the expression of beauty, that music of the classic masters, has always been the eloquent symbol of man's devotion, that emotional something called Religion.

That marvelous instrument, the pipe organ of today, where reeds, strings, diapasons, all so grandly harmonized, brings within the power of one performer to express the grief, the tumult, the joy, the rest, the peace, all the emotional utterances of the soul's of great masters. The love of the beautiful, given a chance, reigns in the heart of every man, but so occupied is he with the trivial in life that the lenten season is a necessity to the rushing, pushing crowding, humdrum of existence, to purify, to elevate, to encourage him to look forward and go on.

The inspiring programme of lenten and classic music, vocal and organ, offered tomorrow, April 8, at 4.45 p. m., at the Palace theatre by the Woman's Guild of the United Congregational church is one rarely met with outside the large music centers, where high class music reaches its pinnacle during this season of the year.

The programme to be played by Frederick W. Lester and sung by Henry J. La Fontaine will be published in Tuesday's Bulletin.

POETRY

Through Healed

"And looking up to heaven, he sighed, and saith until him, Ephpatha, that is Be opened."—Mark 7:34.

I wonder, Lord, when thou didst heal
Or leprous, crippled, dumb and deaf,
So they first knew the oys of earth,
I wonder if they heard Thee sigh,
Or thought to ask Thee of thy grief,
Or did they rush exultingly
To test the truth of their belief.

I wonder if they stayed to seek
The deeper healing of Thy grace,
Or did they go, content to fill
Again in life their trivial place.
Ah, Lord, that they should come so close,
Should meet Thee in the broad highways,
Yet in Thy gifts and mercy find
A pathway back to common days.

Far better they had borne their ills,
And known Thy touch within the heart,
Than to have raised in passing oys
The lasting joy Thou couldst impart.
And better we through life should stretch
Our hands in pleading, yet not find
The things we crave, if, satisfield.
With sight of earth, we meet Thee—blind.

—Wm. J. Holliday in Sunday School Times.

The Flight of Youth

There are gains for all our losses,
There are balms for all our pain;
But when youth, the dream, departs,
It takes something from our hearts,
And it never comes again.

We are stronger, and are better,
Under manhood's sterner reign;
Still we feel that something sweet
Followed youth with flying feet,
And will never come again.

Something beautiful is vanished,
And we sigh for it in vain;
We behold it everywhere,
On the earth and in the air,
But it never comes again,

—Richard Henry Stoddard.

SATURDAY'S STOCK MARKET.

New York, April 6.—On the theory that the technical rally had proceeded to the point where the maladjustment of the market position had been fairly well rectified, professional operators resumed selling operations in the industrial division of the stock market yesterday and their efforts were successful before the short session closed in undermining the firmness of the general list. The rails persisted in their advance during the early dealings, Norfolk & Western and Pennsylvania being conspicuous as the leaders of the movement, but this section was eventually unsettled by the uncertain action of the industrials.

RECOVERY OF BOND PRICES LAST WEEK

New York, April 6.—(By The A. P.)—Recovery of bond prices last week followed a return of easier money rates and assurances that senate action on the tax reduction bill would be expedited. Constructive influences were at work, based on the assumption that funds would continue in supply indefinitely at reasonable figures, stimulating activity and rising prices in all sections of the list.

The return of railroad shares to stock market leadership for the first time in many months was accompanied by a similar development in bond trading. Moderate gains were registered by a wide variety of the high grade railroad investments, with numerous speculative mortgages, such as St. Paul, New Haven and Erie, staging spirited rallies.

THE WEEK'S REVIEW IN FINANCIAL CIRCLES

New York, April 6.—(By The A. P.)—A more cheerful sentiment developed in business and financial circles during the past week. Considerable optimism was expressed with regard to the report of the Dawes committee. Attention also was given to reports of beter prospects for tax reduction. Securities and comodities rallied briskly, apparently because the market was oversold. Foreign exchange rates also displayed considerable strength.

One of the most spectacular recoveries of the week occurred in cotton. Liverpool led the advance, apparently impressed with the prospects for beter business in Europe and with the added European purchasing power implied in the advancing exchange rates.

Short covering was heavy here and its effect was augmented by foreign and domestic trade buying. May rose above 30 cents, a gain of four cents from the low of less than two weeks ago.

Car loading figures for the week ended March 22 disclosed another slight decrease compared with the previous week. For the first time since early in the year the total was smaller than for the corresponding week of 1923.

These decreases were attributed to a sharp slackening in coal loadings, for stocks of coal were built up against the possibility of a strike on April 1. Production and loadings of coal have decreased rapidly since the middle of February, when it became apparent there would be no strike.

WHITE CROSS COUNCIL MADE EASTER DUTY

The congregation at St. Patrick's church for the first mass Sunday morning at 7.30 o'clock, overflowed into the galleries, the ushers seating 500 men in the center aisle alone. In addition to the usual large congregation, White Cross council, Knights of Columbus members received Easter holy communion in a body from the rector, Rev. M. H. May, who had the assistance of Rev. Myles P. Galvin.

In compliment to the knights, Organist Frank L. Farrell played during the service and a men's choir of twenty voices led in congregational singing of the hymns, beginning with "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name." During the service Frank R. Murdy, gave the beautiful solo "Jerusalem." Nearly every person in the large assemblage received holy communion, following the usual confession on the days previous.

After the church services 150 members attended the communion breakfast in the Wauregan hotel where an appetizing menu was served and enjoyed. Grand Knight Francis T. Diggins opened the program by calling for the singing of America. This was followed by a blessing invoked by Chancellor Thomas F. Shea. Orchestral music was furnished by John Egan, Frank Driscoll and Michael D'Atri.

Several solos were well rendered by Frank R. Murdy, Warren Kane and Edward T. Connelly. The breakfast finished, Grand Knight Diggins expressed his pleasure at seeing so many members faithful to their Easter duty and for the large number present at the breakfast. He then called upon the lecturer, John J. O'Rourke, to proceed with the meeting.

Rev. W. A. Keefe, chaplain of the council, spoke of the principles and ideals of knighthood. He stressed the necessity for the practice of religion and reminded the members of their duty to God and country.

Hon. Augustine Lonergan of Hartford was the speaker for the morning.

In opening his address Mr. Lonergan stated that he had a particular interest in Norwich because of the fact that his parents lived here at one time. The former congressman delivered an eloquent address on the work of the diocesan charity bureau and the St. Vincent de Paul society. The great humanitarian work that these agencies are doing was a revelation to those privileged to hear the speaker. In a forceful manner he urged the local council to stand back of the great charitable work of the diocesan bureau in its efforts to relieve distress, help the unfortunate, and provide for the needy. Like the work of the K. of C. during the recent war the charity of this organization recognizes no creed, no color and no race.

He branded as un-American the hyphenated citizen stating that regardless of color, race or creed, the citizens of these United States were all American citizens without qualification. The speaker recited instances of charitable work that came within his observation. He made a profound impression upon his hearers when he stated that many men of wealth when making their wills on the deathbed, seemed not to care for the wealth they were leaving, but to take solace and comfort in recounting the kind and charitable deeds they did during their lives. Charity and patriotism, two cardinal principles of the K. of C. was the keynote of the speaker's address.

At the conclusion of Mr. Lonergan's address, Father Keefe again addressed the members telling them of the fine things that are being done by the local branch of the diocesan bureau, which is the Connecticut Council of Catholic Women. He made a strong plea for support to this great local charitable organization.

A pleasing incident of the meeting was the presence of James B. Gaffney of San Francisco, who 32 years ago became a member of White Cross council and still retains his membership in Norwich.

The meeting closed with the spirited singing of the Star Spangled Banner, before which the Council gave a rising vote of thanks to the speakers.

STORRS COLLEGE SPEAKERS ON HOME ECONOMICS

The spring session of the Connecticut Home Economics Association was held Saturday at Meriden High school auditorium. Miss Dorothy H. Buckley of Hartford, president of the association, presided.

Miss Lisbeth Macdonald of Connecticut Agricultural College and I. G. Davis of the same institution, were the speakers at the morning meeting. The former discussed "Home Nursing" and the latter spoke on "From Producer to Consumer."

At noon the delegates were guests of the Meriden Business Women's League at a luncheon in the parlors of the First Congregational church. W. R. Cole of Massachusetts Agricultural College and Miss Mildred Annan of Connecticut Agricultural College were the speakers at the afternoon session. The former gave an interesting talk on jams, jellies and marmalades and the latter won the interest of the women by her talk on making and renovation of hats.

City Court Cases

In the city court Saturday morning two men paid fines on intoxication charges. Deputy Judge Henry C. Pettis who was on the bench, discharged Herbert A. Leonard, charged with keeping a disorderly house at 16 West Thames street. Kenneth A. Thorne, Josephine Stewart and Julia Lamphere, charged with frequenting the house, were also discharged. They were arrested at the place Friday night. One man charged with intoxication had his case nolled or payment of $10.

PRESTON CITY

Thursday afternoon, April third, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Shedd at Preston City, Clifford Morgan Main and Elizabeth Campbell Pearsall, formerly of Brooklyn N. Y., were united in marriage, Rev. W. Muttart of the Congregational church performing the ceremony.

The bride was attractively dressed in white and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Clifton L. Dawley. Mrs. Lausa Bennett was at the piano, playing during the entire ceremony. Following the marriage lunch was served after which Mr. Main and his bride left for a wedding trip.

The bride received many nice and costly presents including silver, linen, cutglass and money. The guests included friends from Norwich, Mystic, Brooklyn, N. Y., besides local friends.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Helen B. Pearsall and the late James J. Pearsall of Brooklyn, N. Y., and is a stenographer of ability. The groom is the son of Mrs. Paul Massey of Old Mystic and the late Amos W. Main. He is very popular in Preston and vicinity being the local postmaster and proprietor of the recently erected general store. ### FORTY HOURS' DEVOTION AT ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH

Following high mass Sunday, the devotion of the Forty Hours opened at St. Patrick's church, to continue until Tuesday morning. The devotion is in memory of the period during which the body of the Saviour remained in the tomb, before His resurrection. The high mass was sung by Rev. Myles P. Galvin and there was the customary procession of the Blessed Sacrament, little white-frocked girls, beautifully trained by the Sisters from the parish convent, preceding the altar boys, the smaller girls strewing the path of the Sacred Host with flowers. The sanctuary and altars were adorned with palms, ferns spring blossoms and flowering plants. The music was by the chorus choir, directed by Mr. Farrell.

Today (Monday) also on Tuesday morning, the masses will be at 8.30 and 8 o'clock. While the devotion continues, priests speaking different languages will assist the local clergymen, that the confessions of the people of the many nationalities in this large parish may be heard.

ALVAH FRANCIS GARDNER

MRS ALVAH FRANCIS GARDNER

GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY OF EAST GREAT PLAIN COUPLE

A number of relatives and intimate friends of Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Francis Gardner gathered at their home on the New London turnpike, East Great Plain, Saturday afternoon to congratulate the couple on reaching their golden wedding anniversary and to enjoy a family gathering.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner, who are both enjoying the best of health, entered into the spirit of the occasion and thoroughly enjoyed the day. The reception lasted from 2 until 6 o'clock in the afternoon and at 4.30 o'clock the family gathered about the table to partake of a full course turkey dinner. Old time melodies were enjoyed and Mrs. Edward Griffith of East Great Plain sang a number of the songs of fifty years ago, being compelled to respond to several encores at the demand of her delighted audience.

The couple received many beautiful gifts from relatives and friends many of whom could not attend the reunion and throughout the day cards and letters, of congratulation were received from many places. In speaking of the anniversary Mrs. Gardner stated that her golden wedding anniversary day was a day very warm and perfect much like the April day in 1874 when she became a bride. The weather then was warm and perfect during the morning and afternoon, but, unlike Saturday, a light snow fell towards evening covering the ground with fleecy flakes.

Among the relatives present at the anniversary celebration, or who sent letters of congratulation were Frank N. Gardner, of East Great Plain, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Gardner; Mrs. William Drake of Norwich and Mrs. Carrie Park of Leffingwell sisters of Mrs. Gardner; John L. Ross and Albert Ross of Leffingwell and Charles Ross, postmaster of Wakeley, Mass., brothers of Mrs. Gardner; Mrs. Orrin Gardner of Norwich and Mrs. Charles Gardner of Gardner Lake, sisters-in-law to Mr. Gardner; Mrs. Charles E. Briggs of Norwich, cousin of Mr. Gardner and Mrs. William J. Odgers and family of East Great Plain.

Mr. Gardner comes from old New England ancestry, having been born at Gardner Lake, Salem, October 14, 1851, the son of Cyrus Gardner and Lucy Swan Gardner. For many years he lived at the old Gardner family homestead, at Gardner Lake, where his ancestors had settled and builded over 200 years ago. The property is now owned by the Gardner-Buckley Cemetery Association. For years Mr. Gardner has followed the occupation of a farmer.

On April 5, 1874 at the Methodist parsonage in Norwich he was united in marriage with Miss Anne A. Ross, who was born in Leffingwell, March 17, 1854 the daughter of Enos and Mary Ross, her father having served during the Civil war with the 28th regiment, Connecticut Volunteers. For some years the couple resided at Leffingwell later moving to East Great Plain where they have made their home for many years. Mr. and Mrs. Gardner have one son, Attorney Frank N. Gardner, also of East Great Plain.

It is the sincere wish of the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Gardner that the newly married couple of fifty years live to enjoy many more happy years of married life, and in this they simply express the wish of the entire public.

FIND BAD CONDITIONS AT NORWICH TOWN SCHOOLS

Air space per pupil that averages less than half the modern standard requirement, unsanitary conditions as to drinking water supply and toilets, crowded and unhygienic coat rooms and poorly lighted school rooms are among the most serious charges made against the Norwich Town and Yantic schools by the "committee of twenty" which was organized in Norwich Town to investigate school conditions.

Their report has been made to the school board of Norwich, accompanied by the following letter:

Norwich, Conn.
March 26th, 1924

Town School Committee,
Norwich, Conn.
Gentlemen:—

At the March meeting of your Board a petition was presented signed by residents of Yantic, Bean Hill and Norwich Town, requesting your consideration of the need of additional and improved school facilities in that section.

In order that your petitioners might be intelligently informed and in order to be of assistance to you in every way possible a "committee of twenty" residents of that section, was organized. Out of its own number this committee appointed one sub-committee on "local facts" and another on "modern practice elsewhere," the first to determine the facts in the local situation and the second to secure information regarding modern educational equipment and facilities in other cities corresponding to Norwich.

The results of the investigations of these committees are summarized in two reports which are enclosed herewith for the following purposes:

1. To give evidence of the sincerity with which your petitioners have approached this matter.

2. To enable the general public to acquire a clearer understanding of the situation.

3. To show that in the light of conditions elsewhere our request is reasonable.

4. To actively assist the Board in so far as possible.

The committee of twenty, therefore, respectfully invites your thoughtful consideration of the attached reports and re-affirms its desire to assist and cooperate with the School Board in the interests of improved and modern educational facilities for the children of the community.

Very truly yours,
GROSVENOR ELY, Chairman
PHILIP A. JOHNSON, Secretary

Alexander Abbott, R. R. Agnew, Wallace S. Allis, Gurdon F. Bailey, Robert Boisson, Miss Adelaide Butts, Ozias Dodge, Mrs. C. B. Gilbert, Mrs. Francis Gilman, Miss Eunice Gulliver, Mrs. Leonard Hough, John P. Huntington, L. F. LaPierre, Mrs. Allen Latham, Arthur Libby, John J. O'Rourke, Mrs. George F. Smith, Bart Sullivan.

The Committee of Twenty

Summary of Reports

The reports referred to in the letter to the Town School Committee are most comprehensive and indicate a thorough and conscientious study of the situation here and elsewhere.

In summary, the report of the committee on "local facts," Gurdon F. Bailey, chairman, Mrs. Allen Latham, Mrs. Charles Gilbert, Mrs. George Smith, establishes the following salient points:

1. Serious congestion exists as is indicated by the fact that actual measurements show that as against the modern standard of 400 cu. ft. of air space per pupil the three schools in question average less than half this amount. At Town street in Room 1, 32 pupils in space for 15; grades III and IV, 52 pupils in space for 24; West Town street grades III and IV, 37 pupils in space for 16.

2. Unsanitary conditions regarding both toilets and drinking water supply.

3. Poor lighting, both as to equipment and desks. Out of the eleven rooms in three, nine have cross-lighting from windows making blackboard work difficult for both pupil and the teacher.

4. Heating: the furnace at Town street school will not last through another season. At West Town street there is a fire hazard the furnace pipes being separated from wooden partitions by sheet tin only.

5. Cloak Rooms: crowded and unhygienic, coats are hung one on the other, inviting spread of contagious troubles.

6. Structure: West Town street unsubstantial—ways in high winds. Yantic walls and ceilings are poor and floor not firm.

The committee on "modern practice elsewhere" Ozias Dodge, chairman, Mrs. Francis Gilman, Mrs. Leonard Hough, Alex. H. Abbott, John J. O'Rourke, has through correspondence with Stamford, Middletown, Manchester, Greenwich, Willimantic, Akron, Ohio and other cities established that modern practice contains the following essentials:

1. 400 cu. ft. of air space per pupil should be the minimum. Every effort is being made to make the class rooms bright and cheery with as much sunlight as possible. Toilets are of the best possible sanitary construction. Adequate heating and ventilation systems are given fullest consideration.

2. All modern schools contain auditorium used for general meetings of students for patriotic and other exercises; and for public community gatherings concerning public affairs.

3. All are lighted throughout by electricity. Artificial lighting provides accommodations for night classes.

4. Ample playgrounds wherein the whole school can play.

5. There is a tendency to build schools off the heavily travelled thoroughfares as a precaution for the childrens safety.

6. Schools are generally built two floors above basement. In some instances but one floor above basement is built.

Neither committee presumes to suggest to the town committee any particular type of building and neither expresses any opinion on the question of consolidation.

STATE POLICE WATCHED FOR ILLEGAL LENSES

State policemen were active in several parts of the city Saturday night on the well travelled streets in Greeneville, Norwich Town, and Thamesville where hey were on the watch especially for machines driven with illegal lenses or headlights or taillights that were out of order.

Drivers who were found to deserve a warning got one and those with illegal lenses were warned that if they were caught on Monday or later without proper lenses they woud have to suffer the penalty.

PROPOSE GASOLINE BUSSES ON AIR LINE RAILWAY

The big topic among the operating men on the New Haven system in New Haven Saturday night was the talk on the plans to run gas busses between New Haven and Middletown and between Middletown and Willimantic on the Air Line Division, in place of some of the regular passenger trains.

The road is not undertake to carry out this move, it appears because it thinks it can make this service pay better than the present steam service. If it cannot do so, it is said that the present day trains will be relied upon again.

The Colchester branch, however, will be covered by gasoline cars.

WILLIMANTIC RIVER THE HIGHEST IN 18 YEARS

Willimantic, Conn., April 7.—Heavy rains started falling here tonight adding to the damage done last night when six dams along the Willimantic river overflowed five feet, the highest record in 18 years. Small streams and rivers have been flooded but the bordering high banks have prevented serious complications. Twin Bridges at Warrenville, have been under water which his covered every thing a quarter of a mile either side of the bridges. At the reservoir a rise of five feet two inches was noted. About 40 automobiles have been stranded in the water.

DAMAGE BY WASHOUTS ON NEW HAVEN ROAD

New Haven, April 7.—The heaviest damage by washouts and high water on the lines of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad occurred on the Waterbury division, according to a statement issued by the railroad here this noon, detailing the difficulties accompanied on the railroad lines as a result of last night's storm.

A landslide east of Forestville station which obstructed the tracks was promptly removed by section men, the statement says. Between Waterville station and the so-called Jerome siding, a distance of three miles, about four feet of water covers the tracks, which will prevent train operations until the flood subsides. Washouts occurred also at East Litchfield and two between Torrington and Winsted. South of Naugatuck the northbound tracks and prevents train operation on the main line but trains are operating through a siding. Some wires are also down on this line, due evidently to poles being washed away.

Trouble has been experienced with both washouts and high water at various places between a north and south line running through Danbury and Plainfield, which is equivalent to a line almost across the state. On the New London division there was a washout at Crown Hill south of Norwich and on the Hartford division there was another under the main line at Bolton.

WARNING TO MOTORISTS BY HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT

Hartford, April 7.—The state highway department today issued a warning to all motorists to exercise extreme caution for the next few days while driving over state highways. The heavy rainfall of yesterday and today and the flood conditions of all streams have caused innumerable washouts and holes in the state roads, so many that they cannot all be repaired for several days. In addition some bridges have been weakened by the freshets. These conditions impelled the department to issue the warning in an effort to precent accidents. The worst condition reported today was on Avon Mountain where holes five feet deep extended half way into the road. At other points in the state the water was reported to have covered the highways, at one place to a depth of five feet.

Mail Sent by Trucks

Torrington, Conn., April 7.—Train service was halted here today due to high water resulting from the heavy rains of yesterday and last night. Mail was sent to Waterbury by trucks and one truck load of mail was received here from Waterville. The water has receded since morning.

Washouts and High Water

New Haven, April 7.—The Waterbury division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad suffered heaviest from washouts and high water, according to a statement issued by the railroad here today.

Trouble has been experienced with both washouts and high water at various places between a north and south line running through Danbury and Plainfield, which is equivalent to a line almost across the state. On the New London division there was a washout at Crown Hill south of Norwich and on the Hartford division there was another under the main line at Boston.

THREE GIRLS DISFIGURED BY HAZING IN BROOKLYN

New York April 7.—Three girls were branded with silver nitrate and perhaps permanently disfigured at a hazing which marked their initiation into Delta Kappa Gamma, a Brooklyn junior high schools sorority, it was disclosed today.

Physicians who feared fatal developments when the victims became seriously ill, pronounced them out of danger, although still under treatment.

Threats of prosecution against the sorority members and of suppression of the organization followed revelations of what occured at the initiation. The girl who led the affair, a Sunday school teacher, was reported suffering a nervous collapse.

A week ago, the authorities learned, Helen Chapman, Mildred Hellwig and Helen Steingester were invited to the home of Miss Grace Turner to be initiated into the sorority.

The victims reported they were ordered to disrobe themselves, while Miss Alice Norton, president of the sorority, daubed their faces, throats and back, painted whiskers and moustaches upon them, and inscribed crosses on their cheeks and the sorority letters upon their foreheads—all from a bottle of 20 per cent. silver nitrate labelled "poison".

Even the victims thought it painless fun, they turned black wherever the painter's brush had touched. Intense burning pains and illness followed, and the doctors were summoned.

The girls who planned the initiation are said to have declared a substitute silver nitrate for the iodine usually applied in such ceremonies at the suggestion of boy chemistry students, who said it would turn the skin black but failed to mention that it also would burn.

INCUMBENT DEFEATED IN MONTREAL ELECTION

Montreal, April 7.—After ten years in office, Mayor Martin met defeat in today's city election, his campaign managers tonight conceding the election to Charles Duquette. The concession came after an unofficial count of the votes cast in 887 of the city's 1,183 polling places gave Duquette a 5,943 majority.

Today's election followed a torrid campaign, marked by much heckling which culminated last night in an attack on a Duquette supporter by Mayor Martin, who interrupted a speech to administer a whipping to his tormentors.

POPE NOT TO GO OUTSIDE THE VATICAN LIMITS

Rome, April 7.—(By the A. P.)—The Vatican today officially denied that the Pope intended to go outside of the Vatican limits. There are positive indications that the pontiff will be present at the dedication of the Knights of Columbus' welfare building on Wednesday, but it is explained that this building is on Vatican property and can be reached through the ring wing of St. Peter's by passing through the sacristy.

While the Knights of Columbus building is owned by the Vatican it is not considered technically inside the territory assigned to the Vatican, and if the pope attend the dedication ceremonies it will certainly mark the farthest step any pope has taken since 1870 beyond the narrow limits of St. Peter's. One pope has proceeded as far as the Church of Santa Marta, which is the extreme limit reached, still through the sacristy, which adjoins St. Peter's.

In attending the Knights of Columbus dedication the pope will have to traverse the basilica, enter the sacristy and then proceed through the Church of Santa Marta to the welfare building, all of these edifices being contigious. A special entrance has been cut through, so that the pontiff can pass into the various buildings without setting foot on other than Vatican property.

It is the Vatican's contention that Pope Pius would not go beyond the limits of his present temporal domain, and it was clearly indicated today that any interpretation which would signify the pontiff's departure from the limits set by the law of guarantees would be unequivocally denied.

New York, April 7.—The entire democratic committee of Richmond county, sworn as deputy sheriffs, will assist in gathering evidence for the grand jury which today began an investigation of the murder of Mrs. Maude Bauer, who was killed two weeks ago on a lonely Staten Island road. ### STOCK QUOTATIONS GIVEN ON MOTION PICTURE SCREEN

While today's demonstration was in the nature of an experiment it is expected that the stock exchange authorities will announce the official adoption of the new process. Many brokerage houses also are planning to install the device to supplement their quotation boards.

LEGAL ASPECT OF THE KU KLUX KLAN DISORDER

Johnstone, Penn., April 7.—Habeas corpus proceedings were instituted today at Ebensburg on behalf of the 34 men, said to be members of the Ku Klux Klan, who are charged with murder and riot in connection with the fatal disorders Saturday night at Lilly when two men were killed and a score injured, several seriously, in rioting between the townspeople and visiting klansmen.

Application for the writ was made after counsel for the accused men had failed preliminary hearing here. They were held without bail for the June term of criminal court upon the charges preferred by District Attorney P. P. Weimer. A hearing upon the habeas corpus application was set for Wednesday.

District Attorney Weimer declared tonight that he was unable to say whether any additional arrests would be made. He stated that the four men arrested at Lilly upon charges of riot had been admitted to bail, pending a preliminary hearing.

Little hope is entertained for the recovery of Frank Misaco and Patrick Bradley, both of Lilly, who were shot in the rioting, according to reports from the Altoona hospital.

In the information filed by District Attorney Weimer the 24 men are charged with meeting together "to disturb the peace and to riot." The murder charge named Philip Conrad and Floyd Paul, as the victims of the fight.

OVERWHELMING VICTORY FOR FASCISTI IN ITALY

Rome, April 7.—(By The A. P.)—With two thirds of the total election results now available, an overwhelming victory for the Fascisti is assured. There now only remains to be seen what seats candidates an the opposition tickets have secured.

In the north, the stronghold of former Premier Giolitti, which is neutral rather than opposition, it is apparent that Giolitti and his principal lieutenants are elected, while in the south the official opposition, headed by Vicovani Amendola, secured a limited amount of success. In view of their uphill fight the government's opponents hail it as a moral victory.

Of the opposition factions the Catholic party still is by far the strongest. Next in line are the Unitarians and Maximalists, and following them come the communists and the republican. A rough estimate of the results gives the fascisti and the minority fascisti 64 per cent. of the total vote in the chamber.

The latest returns show that 1,437,252 electors voted for the government list, as against 823,819 for the minority lists.

Must Increase Postal Rates With Salaries

Postmaster General New Declares Salary Increases Proposed Are Unwarranted.

Washington, April 7. — Postmaster General New today condemned as unwarranted the postal salary increases proposed in bills before congress and wrote to Chairman Edge of the joint sub-committee on postoffices his suggestions for salary increases with recommendations for increased postage and postal service fees to meet such a pay raise.

Pending bills would increase postal expenditures $150,000,000 a year, he said, and the state of the national budget would not permit such expenditures. If any bill is passed increasing salaries, the revenues to meet the increases must be raised by increases in postage rates, Mr. New declared. Submitting a lengthy analysis of salaries of postal employes and similar classes of workers in private business, the postmaster general said comparison revealed that the advantage rested with the postal employes.

"I have urged the desirability of not undertaking the revision of postage rates until the results of the cost ascertainment now being conducted shall have become known, which will be in a few months," said Mr. New. "It has been made evident, however, that there is a strong desire upon the part of the friends of these bills to legislate upon rates regardless of that situation."

The salary increases suggested as a substitute by the postmaster general were worked out on a scale of an increase of $200 for clerks and carriers in first class offices having $600,000 annual revenues, and $100 in first class offices having less than $600,000 annual revenues, and in all second class offices.

"Starting with these increases there has been an endeavor ot readjust other salaries throughout the service accordingly," said Mr. New. "The total amount of increased expenditure which this alternative would carry is approximately $48,000,000."

The increases would amount to $2,419,920 for second, third and fourth class postmasters; $10,487,895 for assistant postmasters, clerks and supervisory employes; $7,010,900 for city letter carriers; $6,210,000 for the railway mail service; $7,500,000 for the rural delivery service; $3,997,360 for clerks in third class postoffices; $165,990 for postoffice inspectors and the remainder for other classes of employes.

The increases in postage and fee rates suggested by Mr. New to meet the pay increases, with the various classes of mail and services to which they apply and the estimated increase in revenue are:

Second class matter, $4,985,000, by increasing rates on advertising matter 1 1-2 cents a pound in first and second zones; 1 1-4 cents in third zone, and 1-4 cent in fourth zone.

Fourth class matter $30,100,000, by increasing parcel post rates beginning at 9 ounces to and including eighth zone, and on the pound rates to and including 70 pounds for local delivery and for first, second and third zones; increasing rates for fourth, fifth and sixth zones, from 9 ounces to five pounds, and for seventh and eighth zones to four pounds.

Insurance fees, $1,700,000, by increasing fee from 3 to 5 cents and 5 to 7 cents, the 10 and 25 cent fees remaining unchanged.

C. O. D. services, $1,200,000, by increasing fee from 10 to 12 cents for up to $10, establishing a 15 cent fee for collections from $10 to $50, and continuing 25 cent fee for $50 to $100.

Registry service, $1,100,000, by increasing fee from 10 to 13 cents and charging 1 cent for return receipt when requested.

Special delivery service, $400,000, by increasing fee to 15 cents for articles from 2 pounds to 10 pounds, and 20 cents for articles of 10 pounds and over.

Money order service, $3,761,000, by rate increases averaging 2 cents per order, there being slight increases in most instances and decreases in others, under this schedule: not over $2.50, five cents; over $2.50 and under $5.00, seven cents; over $5.00 and under $10.00, ten cents; over $10.00 and under $25.00, 12 cents; over $25.00 and under $50.00, 15 cents; over $50, and under $75.00, 18 cents; over $75 and under $100, 20 cents.

RESULTS OF BAVARIAN ELECTIONS UNKNOWN

Berlin, April 7.—(By the A. P.)—The final figures in the Bavarian diet elections held yesterday will not be known for several days, but it seems assured that some twenty-five extreme nationalists have been elected out of a total diet membership of 132. The extreme nationalists had no members in the last diet, as the party had not been formed when the elections were held.

It is expected that the people's party, although it has suffered heavy losses, still will be the strongest faction in the ned died. It is believed, however, that it will be obliged to form a coalition with the socialists and the democrats.

The elections seemed to have proved that although the supporters of General Ludendorff and Adolph Hitler are very strong in Bavaria, and especially in Munich, they do not comprise a majority of the people.

A referendum held concurrently with the elections on the question of the appointment of a president of Bavaria and the establishment of a second chamber of parliament resulted in the rejection of both proposals by large majorities.

Amendment Would Exclude Asiatics

Senator Shortridge of California Explains Permanent Immigration Policy.

Washington, April 7—Determination of a permanent immigration policy transcends in importance every problem now before congress, Senator Shortridge, republican, California, told the senate today in urging adoption of his amendments to the pending immigration measure which would have the effect of excluding Asiatics.

Listing the major issues awaiting consideration as taxes, agriculture and reclamation, Senator Shortridge said that, although pressing in character, they could not be ranked with immigration, "which strikes at the very vitals of the nation."

Senator Shortridge described his amendments as comprising "the house provision" on Asiatic exclusion with further amendment which would remove the exemption now given to students of that nationality who desire to enter temporarily.

"This matter is non-partisan," he continued, "and cannot be otherwise because of the very vital interests at stake. For this government to be maintained, requires the perpetuation of a certain type of citizenry, and the desired type can only be established and perpetuated by being drawn from certain races of the human family."

A certain degree of homogenity in citizenship is a basic requisite of racial existence, the Californian said, adding that the history of republics from ancient days has shown the fatality of any compromise.

Japanese and other orientals are "neither racially, industrially nor socially desirable," Senator Shortridge insisted.

"We of California, Washington and other great western states," he added, "tell you that we cannot compete with the orientals and maintain the American standard, and I don't believe the other states want us to attempt the impossible. I speak not only for those states, however, but also for the American federation of labor, the American Legion and other great patriotic organizations.

"Do you agree with Secretary Hughes' recommendation for a quota basis for Japan which would admit some 200 annually?" asked Senator McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, "as a means of keeping within our treaty with that country."

"Certainly not," replied Senator Shortridge. "We contend more over the provisions of the house in this matter do not violate any existing treaty, nor even the so-called agreement. Secretary Hughes may have stated they would; if he did so, he was wrong."

Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, suggested the state department had stressed the "unnecessary affront" which statutory exclusion would give to a friendly nation.

The Expreso sailed from Havana March 11 and had been battling with gales ever since, her crew reported. She lost two sets of sails before being blown on the shoals.

REPRESENTATIVE LANGLEY INDICTED ON THREE COUNTS

Is Charged With Conspiracy to Withdraw, Sell and Transport Liquor—Congressman is Accused of Attempting to Influence State Prohibition Director to Rescind a Former Order so That the Whiskey Could Be Transported.

Covington, Ky., April 7.—Congressman John W. Langley, Kentucky, was indicted by a federal grand jury here late today on three counts, charging conspiracy to withdraw, sell, and transport whiskey.

Congressman Langley and the other five men are accused in one count of having conspired to defraud the government of approximately $17,640 by the withdrawal and sale of 1,400 cases of whiskey from the Belle Anderson distillery October 1, 1921.

The second count charges the same men with having conspired to sell the liquor for a consideration that is said to have been $32,000 and the third charges them with having conspired to transport the liquor.

It is set forth further in the indictment that Samuel Collins, prohibition director of Kentucky, had made a rule that no withdrawals of whiskey were to be made from distilleries in Kentucky on trucks and that all shipments must be by railroad transportation; that Congressman Langley's part in the conpiracy was to prevail upon Collins to rescind his order so that the whiskey it was proposed to withdraw could be transported out of Kentucky on a truck.

Joseph Cuckholx, of Orange, Conn., and William F. Allen, of New Haven, driver and helper respectively on the truck, were arrested on charges of transporting liquor.

According to the police, the truck owned by Tommy Cimino, of New Haven and carrying 20 barrels of illicit liquor, was followed by a touring car carrying the five New York men who ordered the truck to stop when it reached the, Greenwich-Stamford line on the Boston Post road. The driver of the truck put on more speed and the chase lasted until the truck was obliged to pull up behind a touring car ahead and was crowded into a ditch.

Two of the pursuers the men on the truck declared, hopped on the running board of their machine and held them up with guns, demanding that they get into the other car. When efforts on the part of the hold-up men to start the truck proved futile, it was abandoned. Cuckholx and Allen managed to run it out of the ditch and were prepared to proced to New Haven, after notifying Stamford police, when the five men returned. They were arrested as well as the two men on the truck. Bonds were not set tonight and the cases are scheduled for hearing tomorrow in police court. Both machines and the liquor were confiscated.

DEATH OF FORMER U. S. SENATOR MARCUS A. SMITH

Washington, April 7.—Former United States Senator Marcus A. Smith, of Arizona, died here today. He was 72 years of age.

Death resulted of heart disease, the former senator being found dead in his hotel room late today.

After serving in congress as territorial delegate from Arizona for eight terms, beginning in 1887, Mr. Smith was elected to the senate in 1911 after the admission of Arizona to statehood and was re-elected to that body for the six-year term which ended in 1921. Since his retirement from the senate he had held membership on the international joint commission and has resided here almost continuously.

Former Senator Smith was born near Cynthiana, Ky., and was admitted to the bar in that state before removing to Arizona in 1881.

The death of Senator Smith was announced in the senate by Senator Ashurst, of Arizona, who made a brief memorial address recalling the former senator's long service in the house and senate.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the democratic leader, and Senator Curtis of Kansas, acting republican leader in the absence of Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, joined in the testimonials and appreciation of the late senator.

711 GRADE CROSSINGS IN STATE OF CONNECTICUT

Hartford, April 7—There are in Connecticut 711 grade crossings. There is a state law which requires railroad companies to abolish crossings at the rate of one for every 50 miles of track owned by them every year. For some years this law has been in abeyance by an order of the public utilities commission, the statute giving the commission the power to suspend the law when, in its opinion, the financial condition of the railroad company made the suspension desirable.

WESTERN UNION EMPLOYE OUTWITTED TWO BANDITS

Newark, N. J., April 7.—The Western Union Telegraph company's office at 749 Broad street, was held up by two armed bandits early today who got only $3 out of a $1,000 roll due to the quick wit and "poker face" of Michael Scolamerio.

When confronted by the two bandits and two guns, Scolamerio pulled two one dollar bills from the top of a $1,000 pile in the cash drawer and handed them to the bandits. One of them asked, "is that all?" Scolamerio said calmly, "that's all," and the bandits backed out of the office.

PLEADED GUILTY OF MURDER OF CLASSMATE

Cincinnati, Ohio, April 7.—Without displaying the slightest sign of emotion or nervousness, Halton P. Siddall, 26, dental student, son of a banker of Equality, Illinois, pleaded guilty here today to the murder of his classmate, Juan Mazzola, 28, of Panama, and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

LABOR GOV'T SUFFERED DEFEAT IN COMMONS

London, April 7.—(By the A. P.)—By the small majority of only nine votes the labor government suffered in the house of commons tonight one of those defeats which Premier Macdonald contemplated when he assumed office, and then declared that it would not involve the resignation of the ministry because of the peculiar position of his government, which is in the minority in parliament.

The government's defeat came on an amendment offered by Neville Chamberlain, unionist, to the rents bill, opposing the second reading. This bill had already been the cause of much opposition in the house, and it was hardly expected that the prime minister could carry the measure in its present form.

In point of the fact the defeat was not on the question of principle, all the parties being agreed upon the necessity of giving relief to prevent the eviction of tenants who were unemployed, but they disagreed on the method of applying that relief. In the course of today's exciting and rather disorder debate the Prime Minister frankly admitted the hasty and immature nature of the government's proposals, but excused the ministers on the ground that the bill was really an emergency measure intended to effect within days what ought properly to occupy weeks, and he contended that the method of attaining what all the parties desired was a subject to thrash out in committee, not on the second reading debate.

TO INVESTIGATE MAYOR OF ASBURY PARK, N. J.

Asbury Park, N. J., April 7.—Possibility of recall proceedings being instituted against Mayor Clarence T. Hetrick, of Asbury Park, by the Civic Church League of that city loomed tonight after Prosecutor Charles F. Sexton, of Monmouth county, announced the contents of a sensational affidavit made by Walter S. Tindall would be a subject for grand jury discussion at Thursday's session.

Tindall, a local printer, is at liberty under $5,000 bail, following his arrest this afternoon on warrants charging perjury, sworn out by several Asbury Park business men mentioned in the affidavit, together with Mayor Hetrick.

The affidavit, charging that those present at a smoker given at Deal inn last Thursday night by local business men indulged in excessive drinking and witnessed nude dancing, was made the subject of a general attack on the city administration from every pulpit in the resort at last night's church services.

Prosecutor Sexton announced he would present the case from both angles. He said the grand jury will consider the charge against Tindall as well as determining whether or not indictments should be handed down against other persons involved in the alleged smoker.

SENATE OIL COMMITTEE HAD SHORT HEARING

Washington, April 7—Witnesses passed before the senate oil committee in rapid succession today, but little new information was contributed by any of them. They were questioned both about campaign expenditures in 1920 and stories of oil deals at the republican national convention in that year.

The committee adjourned its hearings over until Wednesday after a decision to summon William H. Milton, of Columbus, Ind., and Mrs. Jake L. Hamon, widow of the late republican national committeeman from Oklahoma. Further mass also were set for William D. Nichols, former chief of police of Kansas City; Mason General E. F. Gleun, retired, of Camden, N. C., and a "Mr. Himrod," of Mooseheart, Ills.

Milton was mentioned in testimony before the committee today as one of the Harding managers at Chicago and was identified as a former attorney general of Ohio. His subpoena requires.

TWO AMERICANS WERE KILLED BY ALBANIANS

Washington, April 7—The state department was officially advised today in a message from Charles Kodding, at Tirana, of the killing of Robert Louis Coleman, of San Francisco, and George B. Delong, of New York.

The two Americans, the report said, were fatally shot before noon April 6 by six unknown assailants and the Albanian chauffeur was seriously wounded, near Marmuras while touring from Tirana to Scutari.

Two legation attaches have been sent to the scene to investigate and to have the bodies brought to Tirana while Charles Kodding has requested of the Albanian government and has received assurances of immediate action, including the capture of the murderers, a prompt investigation, and the dispatch of troops.

WILLIMANTIC

NORWICH BULLETIN
Willimantic Office
21 Church St. Telephone 1082

About fifty relatives and friends from New York, Norwich and Willimantic attended the wedding, Sunday afternoon at two o'clock of Miss Dora Gertrude Sussman and James J. Rabinowitz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Rabinowitz of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Max Levine of the local congregation, at the home of the bride, 90 South Park street. The bride was given in marriage by her mother, Mrs. Rose Sussman. Miss Lena Sussman, and Abraham Sussman, sister and brother of the bride were bridesmaid and best man respectively. The flower girls were little Misses Lenore Hafner, Vera Rabinowitz and Eleanor Sussman.

The bride wore a modish gown of cocoa canton crepe with brocaded chiffon trimmings. She had a white wreath. Miss Lena Sussman wore a handsome gown of orchid and silver texture.

The nuptials were followed by a reception and a wedding feast for thirty-five guests. Mr. and Mrs. Rabinowitz left later in the day for a honeymoon journey to Boston. Upon their return within ten days they will make their home at 353 Windham Road.

The bride has been employed as stenographer with the A. Sussman Coal Company. Mr. Rabinowitz is in partnership with his father in business on lower Main street. He had made his residence in Dallas, Texas, for several years. The bride received many gifts including cut glass, linen, silver, checks, furniture and ornaments.

Carl Bradlaw and James Barry of Norwich fared well in the local police court Monday, as the court failed to secure evidence strong enough to secure a conviction so freed the young men of charges of breach of the peace.

Lieutenant Frank McLean, who arrested the men Saturday night under the opinion that they were "mashers", appeared against them Monday.

According to the officer's testimony the Rose of New England men had had a few drinks and feeling a certain sense of security in a strange city they proceeded to stop women who passed them on the streets. Most of these women would walk right on without replying to the remarks addressed to them, but one told the men to go about their business.

At this point, Lieutenant McLean, who was in citizen's clothes, approached the Norwich duo and reprimanded them for their actions. Bradlaw asked for the location of a certain hotel and was told, but Barry wanted to know "where the cop was" and he was informed that there was one close at hand. Both men then became abusive and were escorted to police headquarters.

Bradlaw and Barry denied any wrong. They came to Willimantic to see friends. When they asked about the location of the hotel they said they were given a gruff answer. The pair did not dream that they were talking to an officer of the law.

Deputy Judge Curtis Dean discharged the men. Prosecuting Attorney Harvey said that although a conviction was not given in the cases, it still remained true that drastic steps should be taken to put a stop to the practice of forcing one's attentions upon women pedestrians. Barry is only 18 and he was placed in charge of Probation Officer Peckham, as guardian ad litem.

James Kelley, 17 was charged with operating an automobile without a driver's license, to which he pleaded guilty, through his guardian ad litem in the police court Monday morning. Judge Dean imposed a fine of $10 and costs, which was paid. Kelley Saturday night took an automobile owned by Leonard Brothers Garage, Inc., by which firm he was employed. The machine was recovered a short time later by County Detective W. E. Holmes. It was expected that a charge of taking an automobile without the owners permission would be entered against Kelley, but as he had no intentions of actually stealing the machine he was not prosecuted on that count.

Daniel Sullivan, 68 Union street, entered a plea of guilty to a charge of intoxication and was fined $10 and costs. Sullivan has a good reputation in police circles. He testified that he had had a bad cold and drank too freely of whiskey. He was repentent for wha thad happened and would never allow it to happen again.

Some thirty-eight candidates, mostly freshmen comprise the material which Coach T. A. Callaghan, of Windham High school, plans to mould into a fast working baseball nine. The diamond outfit was given intensive drilling at Recreation Park Saturday afternoon, in preparation for its first engagement within three weeks. The candidates displayed considerable ability to handle the pill but as this was their first tryout in the open they lacke dfinesse which can be gained only through consistent practice.

Gymnasium classes have been held for the past week at the school.

Windham must play a fast and sure game this year in order to issue at the end of the season with a passing average. The schedule of thirteen games is a stiff one, opening up with a tussle in Pomfret Saturday afternoon, April 26 with the Prep boys, and continuing over rough roads to the end.

The prospects of an excellent season are not promising but a great deal of hard work under the proper tutelage may accomplish unexpected results.

Three local people had a rather "wet" experience, Sunday night while making efforts to reach this city by trolley or train. They embarked on the Norwich-Willimantic trolley due in this city at 10.05 o'clock and all was running smoothly until the car arrived at Baltic, when friend conductor startled the passengers with the announcement that, due to high tension trouble on the line, the trolley could not proceed further and would not resume its trip to Willimantic until 11.30 o'clock at the earliest. The rain was pouring down in bucketfulls and the local travelers settled down to await further results until they were informed that a train on the Providence division was about to leave for this city from Baltic. They lost no time in reaching the Baltic station, a mile and half distant. Their course took them over muddy ties and tracks and over two railroad bridges. They arrived at the station only to find the train was just pulling out and they had barely time to get aboard. They were drenched to the skin and it goes without saying that they were not in the best of humor when they arrived in this city shortly before eleven o'clock. It is not known when the car left Baltic for this city.

It is understood that the 8.20 o'clock car did not leave Willimantic until 10.45 o'clock.

At her home, 1300 Main street, Miss Florence A. Potter died Saturday evening after a long illness. She was born in this city, November 8, 1855, a daughter of Nason and Henrietta Henry Potter. She leaves a half-sister, Mrs. Mary J. Williams of Catskill, N. Y.

A local jitney driver was called out recently to take a passenger to the railroad station. The driver walked through a long muddy lane to take a heavy suitcase to the machine. The passenger, an elderly woman, then asked if it would be quite right if her sister rode to the station with her. When informed that it would be all right if the regular fee of 35c for each passenger was paid, the sister decided she had better walk and so she did.

A picture of Henry Breault, recently honored by President Coolidge with the congressional medal of honor for bravery in saving the lives of shipmates on board submarine S-5, which appeared in a Sunday newspaper attracted considerable attention locally. The young hero has been acclaimed as belonging to Putnam, but Willimantic claims him as a native son.

Country roads in this section are showing up bad under the strain of the hard rain storm which swept this city Sunday and Monday. Several automobiles have been reported stalled on backroads. The water in the Willimantic and Natchaug rivers and at the pumping station pond at Mansfield has risen to a remarkable extent, but so far as is known the storm has not caused any great amount of damage in this city or vicinity.

JEWETT CITY

Fred L. Kanahan of Lisbon, takes the blue ribbon for early incubator chicks, Saturday he had 2,000 out, a sight for any body to admire. Within a few days there will be 800 more added to the brood. All white leghorns. Mr. Kanahan for seven years kept white wyandottes and Rhode Island reds, explaining that he meant literally "he kept". Now he says his great flocks of white leghorns "keep him."

In the close to 3000 chicks which Mr. Kanahan will raise, he will figure on 50 per cent as roosters. These he forecasts with an an especial milk diet to the broiler stage. After three years, generally, the itinerant poultry buyers take over his old stock, at the live market price.

Mr. Kanahan says that the money in poultry is made today by the steady laying pullet. Eggs are 36 cents now and within a few days people in this section will buy hundreds of dozens, to be preserved in water glass. Not infrequently Jewett City eggs are sold in Providence markets for $1 per dozen, with the demand never supplied.

Local egg producers, who ship to the city markets have learned that different cities demand different style in eggs. In Boston, a white egg is a second rater, while in New York, brown eggs call for a fancy price. A dozen years of poultry handling have convinced Mr. Kanahan as well as other local egg producers, that with the system of electric lighting the coops, at some time during the time they would be naturally dark, any hen will lay a considerable per cent more eggs in a year.

Mr. McLaughlin was formerly landlord of the Hoxsie house, Mystic, but five years ago came to take charge of the Bethel boarding house. His wife, for a long time an invalid, died some two years ago and the Bethel mill having ceased to operate, he had no boarders therefore lived alone. ### SOUTHBRIDGE RUM RUNNER TAXED A TOTAL OF $752.58

(Special to the Bulletin)

Putnam, April 7—Hormidas Proulx, of Southbridge, was impressed in the city court Monday morning that getting caught at transporting intoxicants through the state of Connecticut is mighty expensive experience. His bill to the city court, as assessed by Judge M. H. Geissler, as $752.58 of which $700 was in fines. Proulx pleaded guilty to two counts charging transportation, April 3 and April 5—and was assessed $250 on each count and another fine of $200 was imposed on a charge of keeping with intent to sell. In addition Proulx waived all claim to the 50 gallons of alcohol that was found in his car when it was cornered Saturday night after a chase by the state police out on the Chepachet highway beyond the Children's home. While quotations on grain alcohol are no tas readily available except "in the trade" as are quotations on some other commodities, it is believed that the 50 gallons taken from Proulx represents an investment of between $400 and $500, so that the total cost to him for his adventure in the booze running game may be said to be between $1100 and $1200.

Investigation of this case developed the fact that Rudolph Jalbert, who was riding with Proulx when the latter was arrested, was not concerned with the transportation of alcohol. He was held at the police station here over Sunday, but no charges against him were pressed Monday.

The public was interested to learn that Proulx pleaded guilty to another transportation charge, on April 5, though he was not apprehended on that date, but admitted having done so.

It appears from developments of the past week that a considerable business in transportation of alcohol and whiskey from Rhode Island points into Southbridge has been underway of late, the route being through a part of this town and Thompson or Woodstock, into Massachusetts.

Edward Newton, 18, arrested by the police in Norwalk as a suspicious character Saturday night, is said to have admitted to having broken into several homes in Norwalk recently.

Their health and beauty are in my keeping

A HEALTH BEAUTY TALK BY THE HEALTH DOCTOR

CHILDREN are lovely because perfect health puts roses in their cheeks and sparkle in their eyes. Sickness has not touched them. Their bodies are vital with energy. The charm of happiness is in their smiles.

Any true mother would sacrifice her life, if need be, to cherish and safeguard the health and good looks of her youngsters—by keeping them well.

The health rule in millions of families is: Lifebuoy when you get up, after play or work, before eating and always before going to bed.

A mother said to me, "I wonder if I worry too much about dirt."

The Health Commissioner's answer

Let me repeat what a famous Health Commissioner told me recently. He said:

"I am convinced that most communicable disease is caused by touching things which many people handle. If everyone would purify the hands thoroughly and often, we would have no epidemics and a tremendous decrease in colds, fevers and minor skin ailments. A true health soap must be so mild and pure that it can be used constantly."

Gracious to skin—and beautifying

Lifebuoy is absolutely pure. Its constant use is highly beneficial to the most sensitive skin. You cannot safeguard health spasmodically. You can't wait until sickness comes. Because it can be used many times a day, Lifebuoy protection is constant.

The pure vegetable oils of palm fruit and cocoanut used in Lifebuoy are recognised as being most beneficial to the skin. I believe Lifebuoy to be the best soap you can buy at any price to keep your skin vigorously alive, with the charm of rosy health.

I have talked to hundreds of mothers who have used Lifebuoy for years. Almost without exception, they credit to Lifebuoy a wonderful improvement of the skin. I use it constantly and my skin is clear, soft, finely textured and healthy.

The gentle Lifebuoy antiseptic imparts a peculiar mildness to the rich, creamy lather. It safeguards health and promotes skin beauty. The skin responds to Lifebuoy lather with the healthy underglow of a radiant complexion.

I promise that you'll like it

Place Lifebuoy wherever there is running water. You will like the antiseptic, vanishing odor, for it assures you that you and your children are safely clean. You will become genuinely fond of Lifebuoy—it is so gracious to the skin—so gentle in its sure protection.

DANIELSON

A raid during Monday by state police officers at the Ralph Tracy farm, on the northern border of the town of Killingly, near White's crossing, netted six barrels of rugged cider, a keg of wine and two half barrels filled with what is described as a mixture of wine and cider. All of this was seized.

Tracy was taken into custody, presented before the court here and pleaded not guilty to the charges filed against him—actual sales and keeping with intent to sell. The case was continued until Monday of next week.

The raid at the Tracy place was the result of information obtained in the Putnam city court Monday morning when three young men of that city—Clement Brooks, 18, Albert Muscion, 18, and Alfred Montville, 18—were presented to answer to charges of intoxication and breach of the peace. They were arrested in Putnam Sunday night after creating a disturbance in a restaurant. They admitted in the Putnam court that they had purchased drinks at the Tracy place.

With this information, state officers who were attending the session of the Putnam court were quick to act and the big haul at the Tracy place followed in a very short time.

Tracy is under bonds of $1,500 pending the hearing of his case.

The Windham County National bank, through the courtesy of the Misses Palmer of Brooklyn, has added another portrait to its collection of officials who have been identified with this Windham county institution.

John Palmer, father of the Misses Palmer who donated the portrait, was president of the Windham County National bank from 1880 to 1892, a period of twelve years. Mr. Palmer was one of Brooklyn's substantial men. For five years he served the town of Brooklyn as town clerk and treasurer. He was one of the organizers, and for many years was secretary and treasurer of The Windham County Mutual Fire Insurance company. He was president of the Brooklyn Savings bank from its organization in 1873 until 1893, when he retired as president of both the national bank and the savings bank.

Mr. Palmer resided in Brooklyn uninterruptedly for over fifty years and took part in all important matters pertaining to the town. Strangely enough, during his incumbency as president of the national bank he had as his cashier, John Palmer Wood, whose portrait has likewise been added to the group of officials who have served the national bank. Mr. Wood was very prominent in Brooklyn affairs. He was for a number of years judge of the probate court of the district of Brooklyn. Through the courtesy of Mortimer Marlor of Brooklyn the bank has been presented a portrait of Mr. Wood. The bank is also fortunate in having a bill which bears the signature of both John Palmer and John P. Wood. The national bank hopes to procure from time to time portraits of all officials previously identified with the institution, and when completed it will make an exceedingly interesting collection.

During the one hundred years and more in which the bank has been doing business there has been connected with it some of Windham county's most influential citizens."

Looms for the plant will begin to arrive here the coming week. Workmen are now engaged in doing all the preparatory work that must precede the installation of machinery. This work includes a certain amount of electric wiring and the making ready of the power plant for operation.

CONGRESSMAN C. A. RUSSELL'S WIDOW DIES MONDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Danielson, April 7.—Mrs. Ella Frances Russell, 69, widow of Congressman Charles A. Russell, died during the early hours of Monday morning at her home here. Mrs. Russell had been seriously ill for the past ten days and practically all hope for her recovery had been abandoned at the week end.

Mrs. Russell was born in Killingly, March 13, 1855, a daughter of Sabin L. and Deborah Ann Mitchell Sayles. In 1880 she was united in marriage with Charles Addison Russell, who at the time was treasurer of the Sayles mills, operated at Dayville by Sabin L. Sayles, father of Mrs. Russell.

Excepting during the years when Mr. Russell was a member of congress and the family lived in Washington, Mrs. Russell has always made her home in this town, living the greater part of her life at Dayville and the last few years here in Danielson. Congressman Russell died October 23, 1903, having represented this district in congress most ably for about sixteen years and being the nominee of the republicans when death called him.

Mrs. Russell leaves a son, Judge Sabin S. Russell of the probate court of this town, a daughter, Mrs. Deborah Atwood, and a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth S. Bidwell, both of Danielson.

Cases disposed of at Monday's session of the court included those of Clement Brooks, Albert Mucion and Alfred Montville. They were taken into custody Sunday night after being at a restaurant, where, it was alleged, they made some disturbance. They were charged with intoxication and breach of the peace, but the latter charge was not pressed, disposition of the cases being on the intoxication charge.

The case of Thomas Culley, at whose place of business on South Main street, some liquor was found in a week end raid by local police was continued for one week.

No actions by the police followed the holding up of a local car believed to be a subject for reasonable search and the detention of the women who were in it at police headquarters for a time Saturday. No liquor was found in the car, which the officers had a warrant to search.

Pushing the work of putting in the new and heavier rails that are to be used on the Norwich branch of the N. Y., N. H., and H. R. R., a big crew of workmen braved the drizzle Monday morning and added much to what was done Sunday in laying the new iron.

The new rails are now in place from the Putnam passenger station southward to a point near the crossing above the home of the Putnam Country club. New rails have been distributed all the way from this city southward to Central Village. Passengers familiar with the line riding over the new rails were quick to appreciate what an improvement is being carried out. The work train crew that is engaged in putting down the rails is working out of this city.

Principal L. F. Battey of Putnam's evening school has completed his program for the exercises that will mark the end of evening school sessions here, Thursday evening, until next fall.

The exercises are to be held in the assembly hall of the high school and will include an address by Attorney Charles L. Torrey, secretary of the town school committee. The certificates will be presented by Supt. H. C. Jenkins of Putnam's schools. About 50 will receive these certificates, which will set forth what those receiving them have accomplished. The program will include vocal and instrumental numbers. The public is cordially invited by school officials to be present at these exercises.

Friends here learned Monday of the death in Southbridge Sunday of Mrs. A. Benoit, wife of a photographer who was engaged in business in this city for years. Mrs. Benoit was a resident of Putna mduring a number of years that her husband was doing business here and the family also lived in Danielson for years. Mrs. Benoit has been in failing health for a long time and an invalid for several years. She leaves her husband and a daughter, Miss Regina Benoit, who is engaged as a photographer in Southbridge.

There was some encouragement for mill operatives in Monday's reviews of trade conditions during the past week. During that period for the first time in weeks the tendency of many grades of cotton goods was upward. Buying was more active than for some time past. While pointing out these facts, one review stated that due to the fact that mills have considerable supplies of manufactured goods oh hand the buying is not likely to be reflected in greater activity of the mills for some little time to come, though the tendency appears to be in that direction.

The Quinebaug river and all other streams in this territory were at the highest level of the year, Monday afternoon, following the heavy rain that came on late Sunday afternoon continued through the night and well into Monday. At places some streams had overflowed their banks and inundated surrounding territory. A freak of the storm—a southeasterly one accompanied by heavy wind—was to break down numbers of trees or tear off heavy limbs. These trees and limbs are believed to have been greatly weakened by the March blizzard. Near Alexander's lake several large trees were snapped off at the base in the gale of the early hours of Sunday morning.

Members of Cargill council, K. of C., will be at Danielson Sunday to witness the conferring of the third degree upon a large class of candidates. Attorneys of this city will be in Willimantic today (Tuesday) representing clients at the session of the Windham county superior court for the consideration of cases on the criminal list.

Miss Mabel Drabble, army nurse, who died suddenly in California and whose body is now en route east, was formerly of the staff of nurses at the Day Kimball hospital.

Wednesday will be a day of caucuses for the democrats in towns in this section of Windham county—electing delegates to the state convention to be held in New Haven in May.

State Attorney Charles E. Searls, of this city, Frank Fenton of Willimantic and Mrs. Mary B. Wilson, state president, will be the speakers at the W. C. T. U. county conference to be held here Thursday.

District Deputy John B. Edmiston of Willimantic will come here this (Tuesday) evening to install the officers of Putnam lodge of Elks.

Mrs. S. B. Bradway of Eastford, oldest resident of eastern Connecticut, will observe her 106th birthday the last day of this month.

The Teacher Training class has a meeting scheduled to be held at the Methodist parsonage this (Tuesday) evening.

State police officers are continuing a checkup all through this section of motor vehicle headlight lenses. Owners of cars found with lenses no longer approved are warned that changes must be made.

There were some washouts on country highways in this territory as the result of the heavy rain, but a compensating feature was that the rain helped settle, mud that has made some roads next to impassable.

There were no developments over the week end relative to the counterfeit $10 bills that have been in circulation here.

The Putnam Girls' Club has disbanded. The club has been active for the past five years with rooms in the Rich block, Main street. The facilities in the present quarters are not adequate to continue the home-making instruction courses and it was also poorly located for many of the members. During its existence the club has given many enjoyable social affairs.

Rev. J. J. Etty of Pomfret, pastor of Holy Trinity church in that town, also pastor of the Sacred Heart church West Thompson, who has been critically ill, following an operation at the Day Kimball hospital, has so far recovered as to be out of danger and should be able to leave the institution in a few weeks.

The second annual spring opening day of the merchants of Putnam, Saturday, was a success. Much of the credit for the large crowd of people, a majority being women was due to the weather man who handed out one of his choice spring days for the opening event.

Harlan F. Stone, appointed by President Coolidge Attorney General in place of Harry Daugherty, is an acquaintance of Dr. E. F. Perry and Attorney Ernest C. Morse of Putnam who were in Amherst college with the new attorney general. He was a member of the college football team for three years, president of the class of 1894 and honor student.

Putnam grocers have made a change in schedule. For many years the stores have been open Friday evenings but hereafter the stores will be closed Friday evenings but will be kept open Wednesday evenings instead.

Hinman, two weeks ago, was married again within 24 hours after he left the court room. The second Mrs. Hazzard is a colored woman and is widow of the bridegroom's brother.

Representative Samuel H. Davis of Westerly delivered the keynote address at the Rhode Island republican state convention in Infantry hall, at Providence, Monday morning. Representative Davis spoke at length, dealing with the protective tariff question. The convention heard Congressman Everett Sanders of Indiana discuss national issues and Senator Arthur L. Sherman of Portsmouth an Mrs. Edward S. Moulton spoke on the attitude of the lieutenant-governor and the democratic minority in the state senate.

Resolutions requesting the Rhode Island delegates to the republican national convention to "use every reasonable means" to secure the nomination of Calvin Coolidge and a statement criticising and condemning in the most vigorous language the lieutenant governor as presiding officer of the Rhode Island senate were adopted.

Seven delegates-at-large to the national convention in Cleveland in June were elected and two delegates each from the three congressional districts.

Alternates: Fred W. Perkins, Providence; Thomas A. Boyle, Cranston; Emilio Capelli, Providence; Isaac M. Schlesinger, Charlestown; June R. Levy, Burrillville; Agnes A. Babcock, Providence, and Mary A. Van Beuren, Middletown.

Second district: Delegates, Walter A. Nye, Narragansett, and Martha A. Gardner, Exeter; alternates, Carrie Hancock, Providence, and John Schlesinger, Providence.

Third district: Delegates, Robert R. Jenks, Pawtucket, and Mabel W. Olney, Lincoln; alternates, Frank Dupuis, Pawtucket, and Arthur I. Dorman, Woonsocket.

The convention was called to order at 10:42 by State Chairman William C. Pelkey, who urged not only the renomination of President Coolidge at the forthcoming Cleveland convention, but pointed out that the party must have a platform to which President Coolidge can subscribe in the fullest degree.

Mr. Pelkey then turned the convention to Representative Davis, previously selected by the executive committee to be temporary chairman. Reading the call for the convention, presentation of credentials and calling of the roll of delegates followed.

Senator Peckham of Middletown moved that the temporary organization of the convention be made permanent, and it was so voted. Mr. Davis then became permanent chairman and the following temporary secretaries became permanent secretaries: Nathan M. Wright, James B. Dooley, Charles H. Howland, Miss Adelaide Esten and Mrs. T. J. McCauley.

In taking charge of the convention as permanent chairman, Representative Davis pointed out that 40,000 men and women eligible to vote in Rhode Island had failed to register in 1922 and that 40,000 of those who did register, failed to vote. He expressed the belief that the greater part of both these groups were republicans and called upon everyone "interested in good government" to register and vote this year.

"If this is done," Mr. Davis added, "we will have a different story to read the morning after election."

The chairman then delivered his keynote address on the tariff. Mention by him of the name of President Coolidge was greeted with enthusiasm.

The April session of Westerly town council was held in the council chamber, Monday at 9:30 o'clock, present President Campbell, Councilmen Utter, Rossi, Fowler and Nichols, Councilmen Morrison and Smith being absent. Present in the council chamber were also Town Solicitor Ferguson and Superintendent of the Water Works McKenzie. Clerk Whipple read the minutes of the last meeting and they were approved.

Water works, $3132.36; sewer bills, $3067.22; poor department bills, $215. Miscellaneous $221.40; town hall, $92.59; printing and advertising, $20.03; new schools, $6,243.05; dog fund, $32.50; town planning $23.49; interest account $3.96 and preservation of records $130.60.

Auto hire, $22.75; special police, $53.10; prohibition enforcement, $7.50; telephone and telegraph, $27.72 and miscellaneous $26.88.

Frank G. Booth appeared before the council and stated that he had presented a resolution to the council clerk which Council Clerk Whipple read. The communication from the Westerly Central Labor Union asked that the council take action and repeal the town ordinance for daylight saving, now in effect. President Campbell said he understood that the council had no jurisdiction. Solicitor Ferguson stated that there was a town ordinance in effect for daylight saving. Councilman Fowler thought the resolution should be laid on the table. Mr. Booth, in support of the request, said that the question was thoroughly gone into and the question had arisen if there was liability on the part of parents if children were sent to school at 9 o'clock. Councilman Utter said that the school hours were regulated by the steam trains. Mr. Booth asked if the trains controlled the Rhode Island State college which was on standard time. After considerable argument Councilman Utter said that he was in favor of action being taken on the question. President Campbell called for a vote and by voice there were only aye votes and the resolution was declared laid on the table.

Cornelius Riley addressed the council and asked for a license to conduct boxing at Bliven's Opera house on Thursday evening, May 22nd, stating that he appeared in person as he had been to the town clerk's office and had not obtained a license, saying that he intended running the bout for himself, when asked for details by Councilman Fowler. Councilman Utter said that he had favored the running of bouts by the Italian Athletic club on Rose street, because he thought they should be kept in that district, and that he thought objection should be raised when the bouts are brought to the opera house. Riley said he had no intention "to pull anything over" saying he would put on a good card. When questioned for principals by Councilman Fowler he announced Kid Crowley and John Monti of Norwich and said that it would cost him $175 to stage the bouts. Town Solicitor Ferguson explained that the town council had authority to make all the rules they saw fit and that they could grant the license with conditions or without. Riley had come to his office about the matter and he had told him to name the date in his application and in justice to hing the question should be decided without undue delay. Riley said that due to a misunderstanding some time ago he had hired special cars and had lost money when the bout was not permitted. It was decided to consider the question in executive session at the close of the meeting.

Peter M. Rose later appeared before the council and asked for a license to hold boxing exhibitions at No. 5 Rose avenue, April 18 and May 2. These were to be similar to those held by him for the Italian Athletic club. In the executive session which followed the regular session Rose was given the license, but the petition of Riley was denied.

Twenty one milk dealers' licenses having been approved were granted and victualizing licenses were granted the Brown Betty, W. Ward Sherman, Dubrelle and Galin, Charles Roundtree, Harriet Sisson and Maria Turrisi.

Shelby Nicholas, of the new police force was appointed a constable but the appointment of Harry Barber was held up. Communication was received from the R. I. state board of public roads directing the removing of warning signs on the state highways which were no (authorized by the state board. George Egger, Simon Nichols, Talmer Chapman and Sheffield Green were appointed fire wardens in their respective districts. A number of sewer apportionments were voted.

Superintendent of Health Dr. Samuel C. Webster reported 13 cases of contagious diseases, whooping cough, 1, measles, 1, scarlet fever 3, chicken pox, 9.

Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown's report showed nine arrests: taking automobile without owners consent, 1, not having operators license, 1, illegal possession of liquor 4, larceny, 1, driving while intoxicated 1, transporting liquors 1. There were taken into custody one and one liquor raid was made.

Town Solicitor Ferguson presented an ordinance in which the board of water commissioners, following the vote of the financial town meeting, sought to have that department take up the advantages of the workmen's compensation law. Councilman Utter got in touch with Highway Commissioner Butler and it was decided to have the ordinance cover the highway and all other employes of the town. After a considerable discussion, Dr. John W. Helfrich was named the physician and the committee voted was Tristam D. Babcock of the water works, Charles J. Butler of the highway commission and Clifford W. Campbell president of the council, The motion was by Councilman Fowler, seconded by Councilman Rossi.

President Campbell spoke of the fire hazards in the public halls of the town and he was named a committee to obtain information from proper authorities relative to exits in public halls.

Councilman Fowler brought up the matter of granting licenses to Watch Hill business men, it being thought that a $100 fee for candy and newspaper stores and $200 for clothing and waring apparel merchants was not excessive. The matter was continued to the next council meeting when those interested may be heard.

Councilman Nichols asked about the progress of the new Pleasant street school building and President Campbell said it was hoped that it would be occupied by next September; the Bradford school was practically completed.

Councilman Rossi asked about the progress of John Wall on town accounts and Councilman Fowler said that he started work a week ago Friday.

An ordinance to regulate buildings one which a public hearing is to be given in a months' time was read section by section and discussed. Some conflicting elements were brought out. On motion of Councilman Fowler the town fathers then went into executive session.

The gasoline shovel with caterpillar tractor of the McGann Co. of New Haven arrived on Mechanics street Monday afternoon and began work immediately on the highway. It came from Baptist Hill, Mystic, where it has been at work.

Commander Bertram Wall of Bristol, R. I., and Adjutant Raymond R. Littlefield of Central Falls, R. I., Rhode Island American Legion, elected at the annual convention held in Westerly Sept. 8, are scheduled to attend the meeting of Merrill Post, No. 29, A. L., this (Tuesday) evening. ## CUTTING THE TAXES.

What must make an appeal to the country is the stand that has been taken by President Coolidge against proposals for new forms of federal taxation in order to increase revenue.

The country has been clamoring for a cut in taxes. It wants to be rid of the burden it has been carrying. It doesn't want a shifting from one shoulder to another, which still means that the same ones must pay as much as they have been paying, if not more. And this view is particularly true when it is desired to raise this revenue for the purpose of indulging in expenditures which should be curtailed.

When there was presented to congress the scientifically planned tax cut which Secretary Mellon drew up, there was set forth a method of tax cutting that would accomplish that was desired. It would mean a relief of over $300,000,000 to the payers of federal taxes, and the benefits of that cutting, would be reflected in general conditions.

There are those, however, who have been fighting the Mellon plan for no purpose that can be considered as justified. And it is because of the upsetting of that plan, or an unwillingness to follow it that causes them to make the suggestion of other and new taxes to offset some that will be reduced or eliminated. The call for more revenue to make up for impending deficits if the Mellon plan is departed from cannot fail to make a good impression.

The country isn't desirous of more taxes. It applauds the retrenchment and the budget system which have contributed greatly to the making of a tax cut possible. They are not asking a tax reduction that will pile up a deficit, but one that will be within the limits of good business with the expectation that it can be maintained and others added thereto in the future instead of creating conditions that will demand larger taxes to make up for unwise reductions now.

The president is endeavoring to get congress to realize the importance of sanity in connection with tax reduction and it is to be hoped he can succeed.

THE REPARATIONS REPORT.

The Dawes committee has been at work on the reparation problem between the allies and Germany for a number of weeks. It has dealt seriously and exhaustively with the matter with the purpose of getting the facts before the interested parties in such a manner that a basis of adjustment might be reached, and the conditions in Europe improved.

Preliminary details concerning the report have been furnished. The voluminous finding and recommendations will soon be in the hands of the respective nations. That the committee has had no easy task in getting at the facts can be appreciated but the real problem lies in getting favorable action on the report by the respective nations. The aim has been to have them look through the eyes of the experts instead of holding too blindly to prejudiced positions.

It has been found that Germany had no intention of paying, that it was bent upon dodging its payments, and even now the German chancellor says that Germany will pay to its limit but that it will examine the report carefully to see whether the obligations placed upon the German people were within Germany's capacity.

It is quite evident from the results obtained in the past that there is need of different tactics in Germany, that there must be a stabilization of its finances, that it must knuckle down to meeting obligations instead of dodging them and that it must inspire others with its sincerity.

France has not been disposed to take things for granted. It has insisted upon guarantees and from the manner in which affairs have turned out it shows that it was justified. It thoroughly understood those with whom it was dealing and was unwilling to be placated with something less than it believed it was entitled to.

After the nations concerned have had an opportunity to study the recommendations of the experts the test on the result of their work will develop from the ease or difficulty with which they are able to come to an agreement.

A SQUARE DEAL.

There is nothing creditable in the attitude that is being shown to a colored student at Columbia university, where plans were underway for ousting him from one of the rooms in Furnald hall. The stand which the young man takes is far more commendable than that which has been shown by his attackers.

It is of course a matter which concerns his color. The fact that he holds degrees from two other universities gets no consideration, and it doesn't appear that he has in any way conducted himself in a manner that would be offensive to his neighbors. The whole secret of the affair seems to be shown by the fact that the leader in opposition to him is a nation for the most part to give a fair

Northern sentiment isn't as rabid as southern. The lynch spirit hasn't gotten the grip up north that it has in some states, and there is a disposition for the most par tto give a fair show to the colored man quite the same as to anyone else. This is particularly so if his conduct, ambitions and character show him to be entitled to it.

It is therefore gratifying to learn that the authorities at Columbia do not give any encouragement to the ousting efforts that have been made, the threatening letters that have been received or the intimidating manifestations. The statement to the effect that no one is obliged to room in that particular hall, and if there is an unwillingness to sleep on the same floor with a colored student the opportunity to sleep elsewhere is always open. The fact that the young man has a room there does not require others to associate with him if they do not desire to, but because Columbia does not recognize the idea that a respectable young man must be hounded from pillar to post it serves notice that it is not governed by southern policies and it is to be hoped that such a question may be considered settled for good. Perhaps Columbia would be better off without those who cannot seem to rise above the color line. That at least is open to inference on the part of those whose efforts to have the young colored man dislodged have failed.

WHY BANS ARE PLACED.

That part of the initiation ceremony practiced in a Brooklyn sorority which has resulted in the permanent disfigurement of a group of new members brings to attention a condition resembling that which is too often disclosed in connection with hazings. There is a desire for fun and there seems to be no limit to which some will go to obtain it.

In this instance it might appear that those responsible for the brandings labored under the idea that there was no harm in external use, but the very fact that ti was marked "poison" should have been quite enough to have caused them to ascertain whether such use as was contemplated was justified. They failed to observe the precaution but have found it out now because those initiated have been injured or made sick because of their experiences.

Henceforth it can be expected that such acts will be eliminated or carried out with greater regard for safety. Just such acts as that under investigation have been responsible for the wiping out of hazing and sororities. The tendency to go too far has shown the need of greater restraint upon such high school and college ceremonies. What might be only innocent and harmless fun, if properly surrounded with reasonable care, is too often carried to the point where regrets are of no avail and some have to bear the marks of it for life and pay a frightful penalty.

When such disclosures are made there can be no surprise that school authorities are moved to end the organizations that are responsible for them, or to put a ban upon long established college practices when enthusiasm not tempered by reason carries them to the dangerous point.

SENATOR OWEN'S BILL.

Senator Owen of Oklahoma has apparently become provoked over something and in his desire to apply a remedy he seeks to have a federal law passed requiring that if any newspaper is to have the privilege of the mails it must be obliged to print a sworn denial, correction or explanation of any statement it has made and print it in the same position and on the same page of the paper where the statement complained of was published.

Probably there are few newspapers in the country but what are willing to correct any misstatements which they make in the course of presenting the news to their readers. For the most part there is a desire to get and print the facts, and to make corrections if such is necessary, though aiming to get the facts straight in the beginning. Senator Owen may have encountered some newspaper that operates on a different basis. He may have experienced or heard of someone else experiencing treatment of another kind, and because of that he believes that all should be made to toe the mark. In his attempt to deal with this matter, however, he goes much farther than the situation calls for. He would have all errors placed on the same basis, he would make it impossible to use the mails if the printing of the correction in the precise position was refused, and he would apparently make no allowance for differences of opinion.

Such a method of editing the newspapers of the country is not likely to get very far. Congress has more important business before it, and there is too small a number of newspapers that such legislation would cover to give congress reason for attempting any such legislation.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

Washington, D. C., April 7.—Senator Robinson, democratic floor leader has come boldly to the front in the last few weeks, not only as floor leader, accuser of everything republican and general "objector" but also as a possible candidate for president at the approaching democratic national convention.

He is actively working out the policies of the party. That does not mean that Robinson is a probable candidate nor is he working out the party policies alone. But it means that he is at present one of the most active senators on the democratic side of the climaber and keeping his eyes open for whatever may come his way. Opportunity wont have to knock very long or very loud at his door before he opens it in a receptive mood.

Robinson is consulting daily with Cordell Hull, national chairman, and up to this moment had hoped to have "Let's clean house" for a party slogan. But the drawing into the investigations of the names of prominent democrats may serve to modify that slogan. The revelation that the oil deals originated under the Wilson administration with Mr. Wilson and Secretary Daniels "fathering" them and the more recent showing that prominent democrats, like prominent republicans, have had big interests while serving under the federal government has taken the wind out of the democratic party sails along lines that they had hoped to make the issue of the campaign.

Senator Robinson is fiery, quick of temper, quick of retort, and vigorous of gesture and loud of voice when addressing the senate in a partisan argument, but is fairly popular with both sides of the chamber in spite of these drawbacks. He has the record of making the quickest political high jumps to be found in congress. In 1920 Robinson found himself taking hurdle after hurdle in political advancement until within three months he had held offices of governor of Arkansas, member of the house of representatives and United States senator. Through a political tie-up and a series of elections, appointments and resignations it was possible for Mr. Robinson to make these changes in regular order.

It was quite a blow to the militant members of organizations supporting equal rights measure when Judge William H. Smathers of Atlantic City recently ruled that "in the eyes of the law a man and wife are considered as one." Therefore the judge ruled that the wife of a certain man whose case was before his court could not be held guilty of a crime when she destroyed certain property standing in the name of her husband.

When Yeghy Pasha, the first Egyptian to join the diplomatic corps here made his first public address, he dwelt on the love of beauty which developed to a high degree in Egyptian art. But he created quite a sensation when he added that Egypt was the first country to adopt the use of cosmetics for women. "Cosmetics came with the discovery of metal ore" said the minister." Long before metal copper was known crude copper was used by Egyptian women as an ingredient of the paint which they used on their faces. The Egyptian minister took the stand that painted faces are not a "wicked contrivance used by the young to speed the way to destruction, but it is the old instinct that came with the dawn of history, to increase attractiveness."

The defeat of Mrs. Genevieve Clark Thompson, daughter of the late Champ Clark, to win the nomination for a seat in the national house has cast gloom on the managers of the women urging other women to enter political contests. Mrs. Clark apparently had the support of the old time democrats who had known and loved her father, but she lacked the support of the women in her district. In fact Mrs. Thompson seemed to suffer from the lack of support by women voters exactly as did Miss Robertson and Mrs. Huck when they ran for second terms. Each attributed her defeat to the women, whom, they said did not rally to their support.

Whether or not that was the ground of their defeat, it has dampened the enthusiasm of several women who had in mind declaring as candidates. The women interested in putting up women candidates for high elective office have warned their fellow workers that unless they can secure the ardent support of the women of their district, it will not be possible to win out. As one woman expressed it, "The men seem to feel they did enough when they gave us suffrage. Now we must look out for ourselves on an equality basis. So if we women don't support each other we may as well pick out the best male candidate and save our strength and the bitterness of defeat."

Congress is trying speed up a bit under the whip and spur of popular opinion that it is wasting time. There is now a bill before senate committees which would establish a radio at the capitol and broadcast "the day's doings" including speeches as they are made. If that should be done, the men like Heflin, Caraway and one or two others, whose "continuity of language" is inexhaustable as some one expressed it, would hold the floor from dawn to eve. There is no limit on speeches in the senate, and men who take the floor day after day, and "talk to the galleries" would then be sorely tempted to talk to the country in the same endless fashion.

Not long ago, Senator Lodge, when asked to make an after dinner speech at one of the large clubs, replied "After my experience in the senate this winter I wonder how any one can want to hear a man talk."

A number of places out in the country have been offered the president for use as a summer White House. It is understood the president will not accept any of them but will remain in Washington except such time as he spends with his friends, the Frank Stearns of Massachusetts, and at his father's Vermont farm up in the Green hills. The Coolidge boys have enrolled for the training camp at Camp Devens.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

King Albert of the Belgians, who today enters upon his 50th year, has been called the "most practical of European sovereigns." For some years he traveled extensively, and made himself acquainted with the working classes of many countries. In the memorable words that he used on one occasion, he was "learning to be a man, in order to be himself to be a king." He visited in turn as a young man the coal pits of Lens, the factories of Lille, the busy wharves and warehouses at Antwerp, and the artillery works at Braeshot, and at each place in turn he lived, so far as was possible, the life of the workers themselves. When he had completed his investigations in his native country he went further afield to Germany, the United States and the wilds of the Congo, always learning something which might be useful to him some day and always anxious to learn more. Thus when the great war came in 1914 he was able to enter into the spirit of his nation as no other monarch could do.

Stories That Recall Others

A CASE OF NERVES

Jane, a self reliant four-year-old, was recently observed by the family cook hurriedly stuffing something into a closet and upon being asked what it was, she announced in excited disgust:

"Ah, I'm putting this child in here. I never was so tired of hearing 'M-a-m-a' in my life." It was her mama-speaking doll.

HE HAD THE ABILITY

The other day a fellow was driving into the city with a heavily loaded team, and came to the point where he desired to make a left handed turn. As fate would have it there was a policeman who happened along at that very time.

"Yep, I think I can make it all right," answered the driver with calm assurance, and he did.

"Central 0000? Mr. O'Brien there, girlie?

"Well, dearie, you tell him a lady's waitin' ot talk to him and to make it snappy, see?

"Thanks, girlie.

"That you, Mr. O'Brien? Well, I certainly am surprised you should condescend—

"Well, I should think when a lady's waitin' to speak over the phone to a party he could—you know—kind o' make it snappy, and not keep her hanging on the phone till her ear's about busted, see?

"You said a mouthful! Call you up to bawl you out is right! But you're—you know—all wrong when you say you not wanting an snoop eyed nothin'. I'll say you are!

"Say, Mr. O'Brien, listen! When a lady makes a date with a party—

"Say, Mr. O'Brien, listen. Where did I get that date stuff? I ask you! Didn't ma phone you about—you know—forgettin' I had another date when I made the date with you?

"But, say, old dear, listen. Had I of ever supposed you'd get peeved or anything or there was goin' to be any misunderstandings, I wouldn't never of asked ma to phone you no more'n anything. I'd just a went to the movies with you even if the other guy did get sore and everything—

"But, say, kiddo, listen. If I had of known you was peeved at me and didn't think you had no date with me and all, the time I seen you with the other queen, I wouldn't never of bawled you out like I started to done. Honest, I wouldn't.

"But, say, George, listen. Don't hang up on me. I got—you know—sumpin' to tell you!

"But, say, George, lookut. I can't. There's a party waitin' to use this phone and my nose is gettin' all red and everything.

"But, say, George, listen. I don't get you. Honest, I don't know what you're peeved about. When a lady phones a party just to—you know—tell him sumpin' and all, and then he starts right in to get sore at her—

"But, say, George, if I had of ought there was going to be any misunderstandings and all I would most absolootly of told ma to phone the other guy. I forgot I had the date with you and so I had to bust my date with him and everything. Ma'd told him. She's swell! She don't mind what she tells.

"But, say, George, listen. What do you mean, me makin' a alibi? Honest, I wasn't tryin' to put nothin' over. I honest had a date with the other guy. Anyway, I didn't have no suspicions I didn't have, him speakin' about it a couple of times before and everything.

"But, say, George, lookut here. When he phoned me and says would I go to the dance and everything, I was—you know—so reel kind of sure I had the date with him, him speeking about it before and all.

"But, say, George, listen. I, honest, didn't have no more ideas of tryin' to make a monkey out of you—honest, I didn't.

"Well, say, George, listen. You, honest, don't think I was tryin' to put nothin' over or anything?

"Honest? I can't—you know—over the phone and everything. There's a party waitin'.

"But, say, George, listen! You come on over to our place to supper tonight and we can, maybe, go to a movie or sumpin'.

"And, say, kiddo! You sure ain't peeved or anything about me gettin' my dates balled up and everything and you sure will beat it over to our place tonight and everything?

"Oh, I feel just grand now. So long! You come up to supper right from work. I'll phone ma to have sumpin' real swell. Well, so long, By-by. You come on up to supper!"—Chicago News.

Carnegie Earned 20 Cents a Day

Andrew Carnegie had little schooling before his father was forced to close his hand-loom business in Dunfermline, Scotland, and move to Barefoot Square, Slabtown, Allegheny, Pa.

The lad of 13 became a bobbin boy, working from sunup to sundown, with 40 minutes rest at noon, all for 20 cents a day. A job in the engine room, included firing the boiler, and yielded 10 cents more each day.

A messenger boy of 15, at $3.00 a week, with mother and brother to support, he practiced telegraphy before hours. Came a rush message, he took it, and was made an operator at $25 a week.

A telegraph train dispatcher for the Pennsylvania Railroad, he broke rules and cleared up a wreck so quickly that he was made secretary to General Superintendent Scott. Next he was superintendent of the road's western division.

Seeing the havoc caused by the burning of a wooden railroad bridge, he organized the Keystone Bridge Works to make iron spans, then the Union Iron Mills, to supply the iron.

While he was in Europe, calamity overtook business, pig iron could not be sold, a partner advanced money for the payroll, the puddlers struck, the company faced disaster, and finally the partner quit. Carnegie rushed home, drove hard, booked big orders and pulled through.

In England, seeing steel made by the Bessemer process, he hurried home and organized a company to make the metal. Expansions, additions and consolidations culminated in the Carnegie Steel Company, which in 1901, was sold for half a billion dollars.

Systematically saving from the time he sold oranges when ten years old, he successfully invested in oil and mineral lands, sleeping car stocks and other industries.

With little schooling, Carnegie became companion of intellectual leaders; with little knowledge of steel, he became its king. He made more millionaires than any other man, was a pioneer in modern giving on a large scale, his benefactions totalling over $350,000,000, and at his death, his wealth hwas over $250,000,000.

Tomorrow—Pershing's Great Sorrow

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

ROBBING ICEBERGS OF THEIR TERRORS

"With the coming of April trans-Atlantic passengers begin to scan the horizon for a glimpse of one of nature's most majestic spectacles—an iceberg," says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society headquarters at Washington, D. C., which goes on to tell why these floating mountains of the oceans no longer inspire terror.

"There is something awesome in a mighty iceberg. Its lonesomeness and its huge size—some of them are a quarter of a mile long—and its shape and color tend to make it so. One will assume the shape of a cathedral, another that of a domed mosque, and still others look like giant natural bridges. Even those which have not been cut through show vast cavities which hold the lure that always attaches to caverns.

"Added to this is the color, by day ever changing from delicate tints of green and blue to mellow sapphire, sometimes as vivid and varied as fashion's latest fad, the Beauville scarf; and, by night, glowing with the strange reflected light known as the 'ice blink.'

"So much appears to the eye alone, but with the exercise of a little imagination one can speculate whether the water that trickles down the iceberg's sides was caught up by the sun before the time of William the Conqueror, or before the birth of Christ, or before Tutankhamen was laid away in his palatial tomb.

"For most of the icebergs in the north Atlantic are fragments of Greenland glaciers (some glaciers 'calve' an iceberg a day, as the natives call it) and the great ice mantle of Greenland is some 400,000 square miles in area, nearly three times the size of California.

"Since the rate of a glacier's travel is sometimes only a few inches a day, and seldom more than a few yards, it has been estimated that the snows which fell in the interior of Greenland 5,000 or more years ago are just melting in 1924 as an iceberg crosses the 'cold wall' into the Gulf Stream.

"This 'cold wall,' off the 'tail' of the Grand Banks, is just as definite a phenomenon of oceanography as a geological fault is in the earth's crust. As the Gulf Stream swings up around the Grand Banks and is met at an obtuse angle by currents or Arctic waters, there sometimes is a difference of temperature of 20 degrees within a ship's length, extending 250 fathoms below the surface, and a sharp contrast in color.

"Here is where the proud iceberg, daughter of thousands of winters and ten thousand snows, meets its fate from the gentle warmth of the southern waters. Even the mines of TNT sometimes used by the Ice Patrol are futile with the larger bergs until they have been disintegrated in part by nature's gentler but infinitely more powerful force.

"Since the Titantic met its tragic fate twelve years ago this month (April) the United States has established an ice patrol which virtually eliminates the dangers of steamship travel through the berg infested area.

"The radio of so many uses here plays the life preserver for it enables the patrol boats to send to every steamer through the region exact information about the location of icebergs, and, in turn, each steamship is expected to flash all observations of icebergs sighted to the patrol ship. Thus the eastern and southern and western limits of iceberg area are always charted and the course of the larger iceberg that pass through this rector are accurately mapped.

"Fortunately the icebergs that menace steamship traffic are too large to be affected greatly by the winds: it is the ocean currents that control their course, and the intricate processes of charting the North Atlantic currents has progressed far enough to enable the patrol ships to chart an iceberg's course with reasonable certainty.

"Thus science, in large measure, has converted the erstwhile terror of sailors into a harmless delight to trans-Atlantic passengers."

COOLIDGE HAS WIDE MARGIN IN MICHIGAN PRIMARY

Detroit, Mich., April 7.—(By the A. P.)—Polls closed in rural sections of the state at 5 o'clock with every indication that today's presidential preferential primary election has brought out the lightest vote in many years.

While balloting in the cities, including Detroit, it was the general opinion in political circles that even local issues had failed to bolster interest in the voting for president.

Voters were especially apathetic, apparently, among the democrats, some Detroit polling places late today reported that of the small vote cast about 95 per cent was republican. Even the fact that two of Michigan's best known figures—United States Senator Woodbridge N. Ferris and Henry Ford—were the candidates failed to send the democrats to the polling places.

Leaders for Senator Hiram W. Johnson, of California, continued to claim victory for their candidate and supporters of President Coolidge reaffirmed their confidence that the chief executive would carry the state by a wide margin. William G. Simpson, Detroit civil engineer, is the other candidate on the republican ticket.

Keep Prettier Teeth
When your dentist brings them to you

After a dental cleaning, you marvel at the pearliness of your teeth. Yet the dentist just removes the dingy film and tartar.
Learn what it means to daily combat that film. To keep teeth whiter, cleaner, safer all the time. This free test shows the method which millions now employ.

Film is the problem
Film is the great tooth enemy—that viscous film you feel. Much clings and stays, despite the old-way brushing.
Food stains, etc., discolor the film, then it forms dingy coats.
Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.
Brush teeth daily in the old ways, yet these film-caused troubles, as you know, come to nearly all.

Protect the Enamel
Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

The New-Day Dentifrice
Based on modern research

That is why dental science sought for film combatants, and two were found. One disintegrates the film at all stages of formation. One removes it without harmful scouring.
Able authorities have proved these methods effective. A new-type tooth paste has been created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent.

No possible doubt
Pepsodent leaves no possible doubt. It does other things which research proved essential. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva, also its starch digestant. Thus it gives increased power to the tooth-protecting factors in the mouth.
Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear.
A few days will convince you that this method is essential in your home. Cut out coupon now.

Standard Timer's Letter

The following communication from G. Warren Davis, secretary of the Standard Time League, was read by the city clerk.

This league invites your attention to the changed conditions of the present from the conditions of one year ago in relation to the observance of the 1921 standard time law. Since May 1st, 1923, there has been enacted what is called the public clock law. This law has passed its test-phase of the Supreme Court of Errors. All of the five judges of that court agreed that the public clock law was sound in all of its provisions. The law is therefore vital and active. It prohibits the wilful display of "any time-measuring instrument or device" inn or on any public building showing any other than the standard of time as defined by chapter 37 of the public acts of 1921. We ask your close analysist of that act and express the hope that your frank interpretation of both the 1921 standard time law together with the 1923 public clock law will lead you to such a faithful observance of these laws in all departments of the city government as will avoid the numberless confusions that have arisen from a loose observance of those laws hitherto.

We especially invite your strict application of the public clock law to what is called in the fire department as the "blow," or the test-stroke of the fire bells that publicly proclaim the hour of twelve o'clock meridian, as well as the hour of seven-thirty o'clock post meridian.

This league cannot look with complacency upon any further loose interpretations by city officials of the laws mentioned.

We congratulate you upon the opportunity now afforded you to elevate "The Rose of New England" to a place of high standing as a faithful memorial of the true and worthy son.

standard-time schedule as twice adopted by a majority of the people of the state by their duly elected general assemblies.

We ask the courtesies of a written response to this communication.

As the communication referred especially to the fire department's daily "time blows" the council referred the letter to the board of fire commissioners.

Alderman Crooks said that the matter of arranging the hours of the department's "time blows" is a matter that is entirely in the hands of the fire commissioners and the fire chief.

Department reports were received and accepted as follows. City treasurer's monthly report; monthly report of the street commissioner; quarterly report of the chief of police; quarterly report of the fire marshal.

The fire commissioners reported that they had taken under consideration the application of the Connecticut Engineering Co. for a building permit to erect a warehouse on land of the Richmond Radiator company and had given it their approaval. The application was referred to them for consideration at the March meeting of the council.

New Water Rates Proposed

The quarterly statement of the water department was received and accepted. The water commissioners submitted a communication listing a schedule of new water rates. The council accepted the communication and set Wednesday evening, April 16th, as the date for a public hearing on the rates.

SPEAKER AT MEETING AT RICHMOND RADIATOR

"Children of An Immortal Father" was the subject presented at the Richmond Radiator plant Monday by Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, at the noon meeting under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A.

The address was an exposition of Matt. 25 chapter, verses 31-46. The topic was suggested by the commission on evangelism for pulpit treatment, Sunday, April 6. Particular emphasis was put on verse 34: "Then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Two facts are remarkable here, first, the distinction drawn between the good and the bad, secondly, the misinterpretation and misapplication made of it.

This subject contains one glorious fact that has never been disputed and that is the existence of a vast throng known as the people of God. They are made in God's image, they bear his moral likeness, they do His will, they love and serve Him. Their Father is immortal and according to the scientific law of "like producing like, they, too, must be immortal.

There is a sense in which all men everywhere are children of God, for He loves them and urges those who are bad to reform. Still a distinction is made between the good and the bad; a difference between the obedient son and the black sheep who is constantly breaking his father's heart. Why this difference? The old Calvinistic theory that "God from all eternity elected a certain number to be saved an all the rest to be lost," is very unsatisfactory because it utterly destroys man's free agency, and runs counter to the character of God as love and justice. The only determination in the matter is your will and mine. If we choose we can rise or fall; we can associate with the children of God or with swine herds. Every man is the architect of his own destiny. He can go through life in a mud hut or in a marble palace.

There are some things that God cannot do. He cannot contradict Himself. He will not do other things. He will not force a man to love Him if the man chooses not to. If a man hates the church, despises God's people and tramples upon holiness, honor, justice and other things that the Kingdom of God stands for, can he enjoy the fellowship of the saints? Has a man any claim to heaven as long as he is an enemy to the spirit of heaven? There must be somehow and somewhere a radical change in that man's attitude toward God before he can be adjusted to the heavenly state. I believe Henry Ward Beecher was right when he said, "I refuse to believe that the offscourging and scum of humanity are swept into heaven without some radical change of heart, for it would make a veritable hell out of heaven."

The text represents a sifting process. The sheep are separated from the goats, or in the language of science "the fit from the unfit." The clean from the unclean, the good from the bad, the diseased from the healthy. Is this cruel? Is it cruel to put the insane into asylums? the criminals into jails and prisons? Those afflicted with contageous diseases into isolation wards?

It is much easier to get into the Kingdom of God than it is into an American college today. The college says, "Come unto me all ye that hunger and thirst after an education and I will let you in provided you can pass the examinations." But Christ says, "whosoever cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." There is no excuse for a man getting into the goat class.

VOTE $75,000 FOR USE OF G. & E. DEPARTMENT

It took but six minutes Monday night for the voters of the city to vote the common council autcority to appropriate the sum of $75,000 for the use of the Norwich Gas & Electrical department for current expenses for the remainder of the fiscal year, which ends April 30th.

The meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock by Mayor Milo R. Waters with about 35 citizens present and the warning was read by City Clerk Weston C. Pullen after which a resolution was offered authorizing the appropriation of $75,000 for general expenses.

James L. Case, chairman of the board of gas and electrical commissioners, explained that the department had received an appropriation of $573,000 for general expenses and that the income of the department had been estimated at $575,000. In the past 11 months the department has earned $652,214 or something over $78,214 more than the estimate and there was yet approximately $50,000 to be received during the months of April. The department, he said, now had on hand $87,481 with over $50,000 yet to come in and wanted the right to use $75,000 as the original appropriation had all been expended due to increased business.

A vote was then taken and the resolution passed. The meeting then authorized the department the use of unexpended moneys now held by it to cover the appropriation made by the meeting.

Adjournment was at 8.06 o'clock.

HIGH WATER REPORTED IN SHETUCKET RIVER

High water was reported at points along the Shetucket river late Monday afternoon. At Baltic the first story of the grist mill was submerged and the gymnasium of the Baltic club was under water.

Beaver brook had reached its high water mark in the early evening and water was across the flats at Occum. A 50 foot pole at the Baltic dam had fallen, striking a light pole in the river but not breaking it. The carcass of a deer was seen floating down the river.

At the Rose place dock in this city the water was up over the landing platform about 10 o'clock and a quantity of cord wood that was stacked up there was beginning to float away.

BULKELEY WILL HAVE TOUGHEST FOOTBALL SCHEDULE IN A NUMBER OF YEARS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 7.—The Bulkeley High School football schedule for the season of 1924 has been completed and announced by Herbert F. Fern, football manager. The schedule includes nine games with the leading high school teams in the state. Four of the nine games will be played at New London and five games will be played at other cities.

The entire schedule of nine games will be the toughest yet to be played by any Bulkeley team in previous years. The Bulkeley management intended to have more home games this season, but the Bulkeley team is such a good drawing card in this state, that when the Bulkeley management tried to outbid some of the other teams in the state to have them appear at New London, Stamford High, Ansonia High, New Britain High and Torrington High retaliated with a much higher guarantee to have the Bulkeley team appear in their city that the Bulkeley management could not reach this figure and had to agree to play away from home.

However, the Bulkeley management will expend over five hundred dollars in bringing four teams to play in New London. The teams that will appear in New London are the Connecticut Aggies Freshmen, Springfield Technical High of Massachusetts, Naugatuck High and Crosby High of Waterbury. In bringing these teams to New London, it will be the first time in the history of New London high schools that such good football teams will appear in the Whaling City. New London has an open field, Morgan Park, and the majority of the people that attend are inclined to miss the ticket seller, because New London has not a closed field, where they can charge admission, to their games, is only another reason for the Bulkeley team taking to traveling.

Bulkeley will begin its season on Saturday, September 27th, with the Connecticut Aggies Freshmen as its opponents. It is the first time that this school has appeared on the Orange and Black schedule in either football or baseball. The frosh at the upstate institution are composed yearly of the cream of high school players. This game will be one of the toughest on the entire schedule for the Bulkeley team.

The second game on the Bulkeley schedule is Ansonia High school on Saturday, October 4th. Ansonia appeared on the Bulkeley schedule last season, Ansonia winning by a 14 to 0 score. This game is no setup, either especially considering the game that follows this one. Although Bulkeley has been defeated in football by Ansonia for the past three years, the local institution expects to turn the tables this time.

No matter how the rest of the Bulkeley schedule runs the hardest contest of the entire nine, is the one with the Springfield Technical High School eleven of Massachusetts on Saturday, October 18. It comes a week after the game with Ansonia and the Bulkeley team will do well to come out of this contest in a good physical condition. Springfield defeated Bulkeley last season at Springfield by a 26 to 0 score.

The fourth game of the season will be with the Naugatuck High School team coming to New London on Saturday, October 18. Naugatuck was considered one of the best elevens in the state last season, defeating many teams that had a good chance for the state title until they met up with Naugatuck. Naugatuck is no new comer on the Bulkeley schedule, appearing second on last season's schedule. This high school, however, opposed the Bulkeley team last season for the first time and in view of the fact that Bulkeley lost to Naugatuck last season by a 1 to 6 score a victory now would even matters for both teams.

The last home game on the Bulkeley schedule is with Crosby High School of Waterbury at Morgan Park. This will be the first time in the history of the Waterbury High school that that team will play Bulkeley away from its own grounds in football. In baseball Crosby was seen in action at Morgan Park, hunting grounds of the Bulkeley team, two years ago. Bulkeley won that game and the state championship. In football the Bulkeley team has traveled to Waterbury to meet that team in the past three years. A 34 to 0 score was the result of the first contest, 13 to 6 the second and a 6 to 6 tie score was the result of the last game played between these teams. Maybe Bulkeley can defeat Crosby at least once on the gridiron when these teams meet in New London next season.

Where New Britain High appeared on the Bulkeley schedule first of last season at New London, this season this high school team will be played on November 1st at New Britain. New Britain has defeated Bulkeley in the last two meetings of these teams and the local gridiron players can get some of their lost prestige back again if a victory can result out of the 1924 game. Both teams appear to be about equally matched judging from the amount of players that will be lost through graduation.

Norwich Free Academy appears on the Bulkeley schedule for Saturday, November 8. Bulkeley and Norwich Free Academy have abolished the home and home policy that was prevalent in earlier years. One game a year is now on the schedule for both teams, and one year Norwich Free Academy plays at Bulkeley and the next the Bulkeley team travels to Norwich to play there. Last year the Academy team traveled to New London and this season it is Bulkeley's turn to return the game at Norwich. It is singular to note that the Norwich Free Academy eleven will be the only high school team in the Eastern Section of the state that appears on the Bulkeley schedule. Westerly High school will not appear on the Bulkeley schedule this year either in baseball or football.

Torrington High, which will be played on Saturday, November 15, is the eighth game on the Bulkeley schedule. This game will be played at Torrington as Torrington played at New London last season, the agreement between these two schools was to have the Bulkeley team play in that city last year and the year following Bulkeley would travel to Torrington. Bulkeley defeated this team last year by a 6 to 0 score after a good hard fought game. Another hard battle faces Bulkeley when these teams meet again on the gridiron.

The last game on the Bulkeley schedule is with the Stamford High School at Stamford on Saturday, November 22. When the Bulkeley team plays this game and lays away its moleskins for a rest it will be a much deserved rest. The schedule that will be undertaken by the Bulkeley team will be as stiff as any played by leading high school teams of the state. Stamford has defeated Bulkeley in all branches of sports except once in baseball last year for the past eighteen years these high schools have played each other. It is about time that this long spell is broken and if the 1924 team can not do it, this will never be accomplished.

On Thanksgiving day Bulkeley has no game scheduled although a game may be played either in this state or in some other state adjacent to Connecticut.

Robert T. Aldrich will again be back as football coach. Herbert F. Fern is manager of the team and George H. Sheffott is captain. Very few men will be lost through graduation and a good season is expected by the players.

Saturday, Oct. 4—Ansonia High School at New London.
Saturday, Oct. 25 — Crosby High School at New London.
Saturday, Nov. 1—New Britain High School at New Britain.
Saturday, Nov. 8—Norwich Free Academy at Norwich.
Saturday, Nov. 15—Torrington High School at Torrington.
Saturday, Nov. 22—Stamford High School at Stamford.
November 27, Thursday (Thanksgiving Day) this date is held open to decide the state championship with some other school if a situation such as this arises.

MORIN CLASHES WITH BARBER TONIGHT AT TAFTVILLE

Mike Morin of Tatville will clash with Frank Barber of Danielson at the Olympic alleys in Taftville tonight. This match will be watched with no little interest as there was talk of a mixed match between these two bowlers early in the season but it did not materialize. Barber wanted to roll duck-pins and ten-pins while Morin insisted on candlepins and duck-pins. This will be Barber's second opponent in the Eastern Connecticut bowling championship tournament.

SPAIN TO BID FOR HONORS IN OLYMPIC TENNIS

Paris, April 7.—Spain, through the 18-year-old Senorita De Alvares, will probably make a strong bid for honors in the women's singles championships at the Olympic games lawn tennis tournament. So greatly has the Spanish girl improved her game this winter that it is believed in many quarters that the finals may not prove to be a controversy between Suzanne Lenglen and Helen Wills, the American champion, as was generally expected.

Senorita De Alvares in the recent Cannes tournament, defeated Mrs. Covell, of England, 9-7, 2-6 and 6-4 after she had disposed of Miss Elizabeth Ryan of California 4-6, 6-4, 6-4 in the semi-finals.

Senorita De Alvares developed a powerful service and showed that she had greatly improved her ground stroke which proved her weakness last year. Her overhead game was second to none, not excluding that of Mlle. Lenglen.

COLUMBIA WILL NOT PLAY OFF WATER POLO TIE

New York, April 7.—Columbia will not meet Yale to decide the water polo championship of the Intercollegiate Swimming league, which had arranged for a play-off of their tie next Wednesday at the New York Athletic club. This became known today when it was announced the Columbia faculty committee on student organization would not alter its decision barring the local team from further competition on the ground that it would not be for the best interests of the players.

As a result, the title, under league regulations, will be forfeited to Yale if the Elis make an appearance Wednesday night, prepared to go through with the game. Yale had agreed to the play-off arrangements. The rival teams each had won seven games and lost one.

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch
Fordham, New York Giants

Any inning. Runners on first and second. None out. Batter hit ball to pitcher on a bound.

To what base should the pitcher throw the ball?

A great many pitchers forget themselves when this play comes up and throw the ball to third base. Second base is where they should throw it to insure a double play. You see in order to make sure of completing a double play of this kind the shortstop must cover second, instead of the second baseman, as he can relay the ball to first on the run, whereas the second baseman cannot. Obviously time is gained in playing the ball from second to first than in playing it from third to first, as the distance is shorter. And when you take into consideration that the third baseman has set himself to throw to first on such a play, the only sure way to make the double is for the pitcher to peg such a ball to second.

PACIFIC PLAYERS MAKE UP AMERICAN RUGBY TEAM

New York, April 7.—The American Olympic rugby football team, made up entirely of Pacific coast players, arrived in New York today and will sail Wednesday on the America to defend the title which this country captured in the 1920 Olympics at Antwerp.

The squad will go to England for several exhibition contests before proceeding to Paris for the Olympics. France and Roumania are America's only opponents in the rugby con petition. The schedule calls for this country to face Roumania on May 11 and France on May 18. France and Roumania open the play on May 4.

New York, April 7.—Negotiations for the heavyweight match between Harry Wills and Bartley Madden at the Queensboro stadium, May 13, were closed today when the negro signed a contract to box the veteran Irish heavyweight in a 15-round encounter.

Promotion of the match in the outdoor arena was agreed upon by arrangement with Newark promoters who originally signed the bout as an indoor attraction last February.

An injury to Wills' left hand forced several postponements. Providing this is mended satisfactorily, the negro also will go through with a previously arranged bout with Jack Taylor, Omaha, negro, at Hartford, Conn., on April 20.

Paul Berlenbach, hardhitting New York middleweight, will meet Jack Lynch, of Oklahoma, in a 10-round match, semi-final to the Wills-Madden affray.

B. A. Green, of Princeton was elected secretary-treasurer. Williams college was admitted to membership.

It was suggested by Captain Stout, of the Princeton hockey team that the fall meeting take up the matter of widening the goals in order to strengthen the defense and eliminate chances of winning by luck. Captain Mauran Beals, of Harvard, asked that the time of play be extended to two 20-minute periods and one 15-minute period instead of three 15-minute periods as at present.

STRIBLING HAS SIGNED FOR TWO BOUTS IN METROPOLITAN DISTRICT

New York, April 7.—Young Stribling, Georgia light heavyweight, signed today through his father-manager, "Pa" Stribling, for two fights in the Metropolitan district. The first will be on April 29, probably against Mike Burke, of New York, for the benefit of the Olympic fund and the second in Newark, probably May 26, against Jimmy Slattery, of Buffalo.

Newark promoters announced they had signed Stribling and Slattery, who gained a decision over the southerner in a recent six-round match at Buffalo, but said the date would depend on plans they also have afoot for May in which Mickey Walker, of Elizabeth, N. J., will defend his welterweight title. If no opponent is obtained for Walker in the near future, the Stribling-Slattery match will be held May 26. Otherwise it may be deferred.

"Pa" Stribling consented to the Olympic fund bout after Atlanta promoters relinquished a prior claim to the youngster's services on April 29.

This match, feature of a card to be held in Madison Square Garden, will mark Stribling's first fight in this city and probably his last before he becomes 21. The state athletic commission turned down the request of the 19-year-old Georgian to waive the age limit which prohibits boxers under 21 from fighting over six rounds. "Pa" countered with a declaration that he would not permit his walloping son to battle in six-rounders but made an exception to aid the Olympic fund.

RANGERS HAVE BANQUET FOR MEMBERS AND FRIENDS

New London, April 7. — The New London Ranger soccer club gave a banquet to the players and a number of ladies who participated in the minstrel show that was presented at Groton by this club. The banquet which was given at the auditorium of the All Souls' church was a success from every point of view, about 40 people attending the affair.

During the course of the evening Jack Russell acted as toastmaster. He called on several men for short speeches, George Fisher, Mr. Rice, R. W. Fistere and Jack Cruise each responded with a short extemporaneous speech. The record of the match in the outdoor arena was agreed upon by arrangement with Newark promoters who originally signed the bout as an indoor attraction last February.

An injury to Wills' left hand forced several postponements. Providing this is mended satisfactorily, the negro also will go through with a previously arranged bout with Jack Taylor, Omaha, negro, at Hartford, Conn., on April 20.

RICHARDS WILL STICK TO WRITING FOR PAPERS

New York, April 7.—Vincent Richards, national indoor tennis champion, will follow the course planned by William T. Tilden and withdraw from competitive play in favor of a journalistic career if the United States Lawn Tennis association rules that he is barred as an amateur under its interpretation of the player-writer rule, effective January 1, 1925.

In making known this attitude today, however, Richards asserted he did not consider that the U. S. L. T. A. would rule that his writing activities were such as to make him ineligible for amateur play. He expects to be released from his newspaper writing contract this summer to join the American Olympic team on which player writers also have been carried.

GENARO HAS SIGNED FOR THREE BOUTS

New York, April 7.—The Queensboro A. C. announced today it had signed Frankie Genaro, American flyweight champion, to three matches during the summer, including a title contest with Pancho Villa, world's champion, in September. The others are with Bud Taylor, of Terre Haute, Ind., in May and "Cannonball Eddie" Martin, of Brooklyn, in June.

PLANS NEARLY COMPLETED FOR RENAULT-JOHNSON BOUT

Negotiations have also been opened for a match between Jack Delaney Bridgeport, Conn., middleweight and conqueror of Paul Berlenbach, and either Young Stribling, Macon, Ga., schoolboy or Mike McTigue, world's light heavyweight champion.

MERRIMAN STILL LEADS FIELD AT PINEHURST

Pinehurst, N. C., April 7.—E. P. Merriman, Waterbury, Conn., who went into the lead on the first eighteen last Thursday, was leading with a score of 150 for 36 hole qualifying round of the north and south amateur golf tournament today, with half of the field finished. He shot another 75 today.

F. C. Newton, Brookline, Mass., titleholder finished the qualifying round with a 79 which gave him 16th and probably will qualify for match play which begins tomorrow. He turned in an 82 Thursday.

BOSTON NOT TO GO INTO PRO. HOCKEY LEAGUE

Montreal, April 7.—Boston will not be represented in the International Professional Hockey league which will get under way in the 1924-25 season, according to Tom Duggan, Canadian promoter who is co-operating with Tex Rickard, of New York, in organizing the circuit.

The Boston arena, he said, has turned down the professional hockey plan and the league franchise held by Charles F. Adams, of Boston, will be transferred to Brooklyn, thus giving New York two entries. It is expected that Boston will join the league in 1925-26.

BERLENBACH KNOCKS OUT STONE IN FIFTH ROUND

Buffalo, N. Y., April 7.—Paul Berlenbach of Yorkville, knocked out Jack Stone of Yonkers, in the fifth round of a bout scheduled for 12 rounds here tonight.

New London Sport Comment.

The New London Ranger soccer team is anxious to meet the Westerly team in a three-game series for the Bulletin cup. The New London Rangers are entered in the state soccer meet and were to meet the Portuguese team this Sunday in the first game. This team has disbanded since the Rangers were matched to meet them. Now the Rangers are entered for the semi-finals and this game will be played a week from this Sunday. If the Rangers are successful in winning out in the final game of the northern section of the state it will then meet the winner of the southern section of the state for the state title.

Johnny Dwyer broke into collegiate circles in real big time manner when he held the Yale nine to a single hit at New Haven Saturday. Too much cannot be predicted of Johnny but if he can give as good account of himself throughout the season as he did Saturday, his name will be written at Fordham as one of the best yearling twirlers entered at that institution for many a moon. Dwyer plays the infield also, but he may be of more value as a pitcher than an infielder, although Fordham is in need of later defense men.

The baseball games scheduled for the Submarine Base Dungaree league had to be postponed yesterday on account of the wet grounds. This makes the second postponement for this league within the last week.

The Military Basketball league will come to an end on Thursday of this week. With this league out of the way, the sporting element will then turn their entire attention upon baseball. The two baseball leagues, the Industrial and City leagues, should once again get underway, for New London will once again advance its clock an hour ahead.

The wet and cold weather spoiled the baseball practice for both the high school teams. If the weather is warm today, squads of both schools will again be out. Chapman Tech will probably meet Wheeler High today at Morgan park.

White Rock Team Organized

From the little village of White Rock comes a challenge to any baseball team in this section of the state averaging 18 years. The White Rock A. A. has put what they consider a strong team into the field and are anxious to get games. Write to Manager Ted Markoff, 5 Main street, White Rock, R. I., (tel. 26-31 Westerly) concerning dates and guarantees.

Scalpers Challenge.

Hoppe-Horemans Match Today.

New York, April 7.—Willie Hoppe, world's 18.2 balkline billiard champion, will defend his title against Edouard Horemans, Belgian cueist, in a 1500-point match beginning tomorrow and continuing Wednesday and Thursday. The match will be played in blocks of 500 points each night at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

Winters Elected Captain.

New Haven, April 7. — The Yale wrestling team tonight elected Hyman Winters of New Haven, a junior, captain, and Robert Austin of Hopedale, Mass., also a junior, manager, for the ensuing year.

The present year marks the 85th anniversary of the Henley Regatta, the most famous rowing meeting in the world. During the early years of the regatta there were only two cups offered—one for four-oared boats manned by Henley amatgur rowers, and the other for eight-oared boats, open to all comers. The former, known as the Town Cup, was abolished in 1883; but the latter, now termed the Grand Challenge Cup, is still the most coveted prize at Henley, although several others have been added at intervals.

BROADWAY THEATRE NOTICE

We wish to call the attention of the public to the fact that all acts presented at the Strand or Broadway Theatre appear under the B. F. Keith banner and always use their established name, which means something in the theatrical field.

The Duponts, a wonderful act now playing at the Broadway had an occasion this week of stopping another act in a local theatre from using their name.

It hardly seems possible, that in order to gain recognition an act will masquerade under the name of a proven successful act, yet this is what happened.

At the Palace Theatre.

Two exceptionally good acts feature the bill at the Palace theatre for the first half of this week while the other three acts on the programme are not by any means poor, but they do not measure up to the standard of the headliners. The headline act is a novelty aerial act that is sensational in every sense of the word. This act is put on by The Three Wildanos, who perform on a revolving trapeze, taking the full stage to execute their breath-taking stunts.

The other feature act is Barry and Lancaster, who present a laughable skit entitled, "Yes; We Have No Bologna." Mr. Barry is really funny in his comedy role of waiter and his lines are bright and snappy and there is genuine humor in the act that was thoroughly appreciated by the audiences on Monday.

Mlle. Latoy's models is a very pretty and attractive act featuring Miss Latoy and her three dogs. The dogs are exceptionally well trained and execute their parts with wonderful intelligence.

Mauro Romaine and the Romaine Twins have a singing and dancing act that appeals to some.

The last act on the bill is Phil Romano, billed as the Sheik of Comedians.

Twelve capable men, friends of Messrs. Lester and LaFontaine, will act as ushers.

PASSION PLAY PICTURES AT GRACE CHURCH

Next Sunday being Palm Sunday, Pathe's Passion Play will be shown at Grace church at Yantic at 7.00 p. m. It will be a seven reel feature depicting the Biblical narrative as seen in the Passion Play. Beginning with the annunciation, the journey to Bethlehem, the shepherds following the star and the Christ child in the manger, followed by the massacre of the innocents at Bethlehem and the flight to Egypt. Then begins the story of Christ at twelve taking part in the debates of the learned men, and as a young lad assisting in the work of the carpenter's shop.

Very interestingly are shown the performing of the miracles at the marriage of Cana, curing the blind and the paralyzed, raising the dead, walking on the water and the transfiguration. Then come the details of the last days of the Master, beginning with the entry into Jerusalem. Driving the money changers from the temple, the last supper, Christ on the Mount of Olives, the betrayal by Judas, the arrest of Christ, the denial by Peter, Christ before Pilate, the scourging and the crown of thorns. Closely following is the presentation of Christ to the people, the miracle of St. Veronica.

The closing scenes of the film show Christ meeting His mother, the arrival at Calvary, the crucifixion, the agony and death of Christ, the descent from the cross, the burial, His resurrection and ascension.

This will bring vividly before the eyes of those who have the opportunity of being present the dramatic and tragic scenes which Holy week would remind us of.

Robert Otis will preside at the organ to render appropriate musical accompaniments to the pictures, the choir will also be present.

No admission will be charged but it is hoped to defray the expense by a voluntary collection on entering the church.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

BREED THEATRE

Not only has the famous Technicolor process been used to photograph the luxuriant wonder of tropical seas and South Sea islands, but the Williamson Submarine Tube System has made possible the startling scenes of undersea life, of which the realistic battle between a man and an octopus is a thrilling example.

Under the skillful direction of Ralph Ince, an excellent cast moves convincingly through this Submarine Film production, which is a dramatic story of love and intrigue, written by Curtis Benton, Mary MacLaren and Jean Tolley play the leading feminine roles, and Maurice "Lefty" Flynn, William Safley and Louis Wolheim share honors in their respective heroic and villainous characterizations.

BROADWAY THEATRE

Running true to form, the B. F. Keith vaudeville at the Broadway Theatre for the first half of this week made an instant hit.

The Duponts, a syncopated juggiers, started the program with a clever combination of juggling and steps which proved a welcome variety.

Melva Talma, the sunshine girl followed with her darky blues and comedy songs. A large and gorgeous wardrobe was also a feature of this act.

Harry Laughlin & Clare West, two capable players followed with a comedy skit "The Little Speculator." Song, dance and comedy put this act over in great style.

"Blackface" Edwin Nelson, the twentieth century comedian, kept the house in an uproar. As a delineator of blackface comedy he stands foremost.

Harry Carson's Revue topped off this great show presenting "The Gypsy Idyll." Mr. Carson is ably assisted by six clever players, who present melodious music, ingenious dances and humorous dialogue. It's the type of entertainment all will like.

That in the shadows of the drab buildings that flanked the elevated tracks of New York's Bowery of a generation ago, there shone a light clearer than the glaring electric lights of modern times is graphically presented in the beautiful love story of Mary Philbin's new Universal-Jewel production which opened last night at the Broadway Theatre.

The picture, titled "Fools Highway," is a screen version of Owen Kildare's famous life story, "My Mamie Rose," and in its is combined all of the colorful romance and human appeal of the original story. The novel presented a word visualization of life and love in the Bowery; the play picturizes it.

AT THE BROADWAY

Almost every person from the city who visited New York during the past season saw or tried to see "The Gingham Girl" which was the reigning musical comedy success of the year. The show ran an entire year, just closing to permit the principal players to enjoy a brief vacation after delighting Broadway since last summer.

The reports of "The Gingham Girl" brought back by the visitors to the metropolis has created a great deal of interest in this production and it is therefore pleasant to announce that this attraction will come to the Broadway Theatre Friday night, April 11. The reviewers who came to be bored with "just another musical comedy" remained to be charged by the freshness and beauty of the offering and the unanimous verdict of the New York press was that "The Gingham Girl" was the best musical show Broadway had seen in years. This estimate was cordially endorsed by critical writers in Chicago, where the play ran for six months.

AT THE STRAND

The new Paramount picture which opened at the Strand Theatre yesterday "Big Brother," an Allan Dwan production of the story by Rex Beach is no bear for thrills; there is not a lagging moment throughout its entire length. This is the greatest of Rex Beach's works—greatest because he wrote it from his heart.

It is an altogether unusual production, in that it depicts graphically just what the Big Brother Movement is endeavoring to accomplish throughout the world—the proper raising of the boys and youths—the future men of the land on whom the destiny of their country rests.

To miss this picture is to miss the finest offering of the year we earnestly advise you to see it.

The short subject program included a comedy and news weekly.

New London, April 7—The fire department was called out about 7 o'clock this morning when a lively blaze was discovered in the chimney of the residence of Mrs. Nellie Dart, off Evergreen avenue. The house became filled with smoke and with the fire threatening to reach the interior of the place, an alarm was sent in from Box 514, corner of Ocean avenue and School street. With the arrival of the department the blazing soot was quickly extinguished with chemicals and without much damage resulting. One of the first companies to reach the fire was the Ockford Hose Company and with an occupant of the house informing the firemen that the entire house was doomed to destruction the machine was speeded toward a hydrant to make a hose connection. Ignes, colored and the sole occupant of the Randolph gave the warning that the cargo of the barge had shifted and that the seams had been opened, causing the craft to leak badly. ## POETRY

The Chambered Nautilus

This is the ship of pearl which, poets feign,
Sails the unshadowed main,—
The venturous bark that flings
On the sweet summer wind its purpled wings
In gulfs enchanted, where the Siren sings,
And coral reefs lie bare,

Its web of living gauze no more unfurl;
Wrecked is the ship of pearl!
And every chambered cell
Where its dim dreaming life was wont to dwell,
As the frail tenant shaped his growing shell,
Before thee lies, revealed,—

Year after year beheld the silent toil
That spread his lustrous coil;
Still, as the spiral grew,
He left the past year's dwelling for the new,
Stole with soft step its shining archway through,
Built up its idle door,

Thanks for the heavenly message brought by thee,
Child of the wandering sea,
Cast from her lap forlorn!
From thy dead lips a clearer note is born
Than ever Triton blew from wreathed horn.
While on mine ear it rings,
Through the deep caves of thought I hear a voice that sings:—

Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul,
As the swift seasons roll!
Leave thy low-vaulted past!
Let each new temple, nobler than the last,
Shut thee from Heaven with a dome more vast,
Till thou at length are free,
Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea!

—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

The Things I Love

The things I love are lovely—
How fair in gleam and flow
On land and sea they are to me
No heart will ever know;
No other heart but mine;
And it may never be
That in the verse I twine,
For you
Their beauty you may see.

The things I love are lovely—
They never pass away,
For when they wander to my heart
Their beauty bides for aye,
Abides for me, all mine!
And so 'tis that it shine
That I can make it shine
For you,
The way it shines for me.

—Samuel Minturn Peck in Boston Transcript.

Johnny—'Cause he knows so exactly what questions to ask me when he wants to know what I've been up to.—Boston Transcript.

Little Lester visited an old lady recently, who in commenting upon his likeness to his father, said "Well, you are a full-blooded Jones, and no mistake."

In her own crisp dialect the Lancashire housemaid explained to her sympathizing neighbor what happened when the canvasser called. "First 'e knocked at t' door," she said. "Then 'e talked an' talked until I was tempted—"

"Dear me," interposed the other "an' ye fell for him!"

"Sweet mercy, nay!" answered the other shaking her fist. "'Twas 'e that fell. I 'it 'im."—London Tid-Bits.

The phrase "showing the white feather" is derived from the cockpit. It arose, says one authority, from the belief of certain patrons of the cockpit that birds having a white feather in their wings were apt to show cowardice in fight. Many such phrases are incorporated in the English language from the same source, such as "to turn tail," "to stand steel," "cock of the walk," "to die game"—to enlist some other of the fifty or sixty such words.

Due to the lack of care since the war, the famous Cologne cathedral, which was begun in 1248 and required more than 600 years for completion, is menaced by the ravages of the weather, according to the Central Cathedral Building association. It will cost about $15,000 a month to do the repair work, and the only way the association can see to raise that amount of money is through a lottery, so permission to run one for that purpose is asked.

MARKET WAS REACTIONARY.

New York, April 7.—Renewal of bear selling apparently due to speculative disappointment over the delay in the publication of the Dawes report, imparted a reactionary trend to today's stock market, net losses in the active issues ranging from 1 to 3 points. Selling pressure was most effective in the steels, equipments, motors and rubbers, many of which sold at their lowest prices of the year. Baldwin was one of the principal targets for bear attacks, being hammered down to 114 3-4, a new 1924 low, but rallying later to 115 7-8, where it was off 1 1-8 on the day. Additional new low records were established by Chandler Motors at 45 7-8, Gulf States Steel at 70 3-4, Crucible Steel at 53 1-8, Kelly Springfield at 14 3-4, U. S. Rubber at 28 and 2nd American Agricultural Chemical Preferred at 18 3-4, but all closed above their low prices of the day.

Rails offered stubborn resistance to selling pressure with pronounced strength developing in Norfolk & Western which touched 131 3-4 and closed slightly below that figure for a net gain of nearly 3 points. An active demand also was noted for Chesapeake & Ohio, which sold as high as 78 and closed at 78 1-4, up 7-8. Several of the Western carriers yielded fractionally on profit taking.

Selling of the steel shares apparently was influenced by reports of a lessening of activity in the industry. U. S. Steel common closed a point lower at 98 7-8 and losses of 1 to 2 points were recorded by Bethlehem, Republic and Gulf States Steels.

There was nothing in the day's news to account for the renewed selling of the motor shares. Studebaker was hammered down nearly two points to 93 1-4 and losses of a point or more were recorded by Stewart-Warner, Mack Truck, Hayes Wheel and Maxwell Motors A. One transaction in Fisher Body was recorded at 213, or 4 3-4 points below the previous sale.

Dupont broke nearly 8 points on the publication of an unfavorable U. S. supreme court decision against that company. Other outstanding weak spots were Corn Products, American Radiator, American Tobacco B, United Fruit and Woolworth, off 2 to 3 points. American Water Works and electric issues moved against the current trend, the common closing 2 1-8 higher at 47 and the 6 per cent preferred moving up 1 5-8 to 72 1-8.

Call money opened at 4 1-4 per cent and advanced successively to 4 1-2, 5 and 5 1-2, where it closed. A firmer undertone was noted in the time money market, but the ruling rate unchanged at 4 1-2 per cent. Prime and commercial paper was steady at 4 1-2 per cent.

Foreign exchange turned reactionary after a firm opening. Demand sterling advanced about a cent to $4.34 and then fell back to 4.32 3-8. French francs held fairly steady just above 5 3-4 cents. South American exchanges were higher.

CURB MARKET.

New York, April 7.—A sharp break in Durant Motors, which fell from 28, Saturday's closing price, to 18 1-4 and then rallied to 19 3-4, was the feature of today's irregularity low curb market. Trading was in reduced volume.

Most of the active oils slipped off fractionally while losses of 2 to 6 1-2 points were recorded by such ordinarily inactive issues as Borne & Scrymser, Magnolia Petroleum, Ohio Oil, Solar Refining, Standard Oil of Ohio and Swan & Finch.

A brisk rally in Dubilier Radio, which was run up nearly two points to 31 7-8 and then dropped back to 31, was attributed to the running-in of a short interest. Glen Alden Coal moved up 1 3-8. Lehigh Power securities established a new 1924 high at 61 3-4 and then dropped back to 60. Grand Stores advanced more than a point on reports of substantial increase in the sales in the first quarter of 1924 over 1923.

Speculative interest in the mining group was confined largely to Ray Copper, which held steady around its recent high level.

BOND MARKET.

New York, April 7.—After a period of irregular price fluctuations, active selling developed towards the close of today's bond market, carrying a variety of industrial issues down to new low levels for the year. Unfavorable trade reports were the basis for an attack against Rubber and Chemical company liens with the downward trend accentuated by the renewal of bearish operations on the stock market.

New minimum figures for the year were established by Virginia Carolina 8s which declined 2 5-8 to 60 1-8, American Agricultural Chemical 5s, Kelly Springfield 6s, Fisk Rubber 8s and Wilson convertible 6s. Heaviness developed in International Mercantile Marine 6s, Cerro De Pasco 8s and New Haven, Erie and St. Paul issues, losses of 1 to 3 points in the rail group being attributed to profit taking.

Recoveries of more than 2 points were registered by American Agricultural Chemical 7 1-2s and Wickwire-Spencer 7s, both of which recently suffered severe losses. Banking interests identified with these companies said both issues had been singled out as targets for bear attacks and that a natural recovery was now taking place.

Four syndicates, comprising virtually all the city's largest banking institutions, will compete for the $46,000,000 New York state soldier bonus bond issue on which bids will be opened tomorrow. Other banks are submitting individual bids.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, April 7.—Wheat underwent a setback in price today, largely as the result of a decline at Liverpool this morning despite strength here on Saturday. Chicago closing quotations were weak, 3-4 to 1c net lower, May $1.02 3-8 to 1.03 3-8 @1-2 and July 1.03 7-8 to 1.04. Corn finished 1-4 to 1-2 down, oats a shade to 1-4 off, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to 10c decline.

Although the setback in values of wheat at Liverpool was associated with an advance in sterling exchange, the apparent absence of any demand from wheat exporters on this side of the Atlantic had a restraining effect on other buyers, and there was a noticeable lack of aggressive purchasing which characterized Saturday's market. Furthermore the fact that wheat was being sold to go into store here and was being bought in the west for shipment to Chicago had an evident bearish influence.

Fine weather favorable for winter wheat growth and for spring wheat seeding tended also to ease values, little recovery taking place in the final transactions notwithstanding 892,000 bushels falling off in the United States visible supply. Additional handicaps on buyers were stock market weakness and gossip current that Europe had cancelled a previous purchase of some wheat.

Corn and oats sympathized with wheat weakness, but steadied after announcement of a larger visible supply decrease in corn than had been looked for. On the other hand today's receipts of corn showed some increase, eastern demand was still slow and field work was said to be making rapid progress.

Provisions had a downward slant, influenced by the course of hogs, grain and cottonseed oil.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

Local building operations progressed fairly well during the past week considering the severe snow storm and rain that held up outside operations to some extent in the week. The work on buildings that had passed the boarded-in stage was not materially decreased by the inclement weather and good progress toward completion was made by the local contractors. Several of the next contracts for houses and garages that were awarded last month were started during the past week and much of the excavation work was completed although very little was done on the foundation work.

At the office of Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton four building permits were issued during the past week. The total valuation on the permits is practically $7,000 the largest item being the receiving vault at St. Mary's cemetery which will cost in the neighborhood of $4,000. The other permits were for garages which will be erected in various sections of the city.

To John H. Teft to erect a garage, 24x28 feet, on Summit street. The garage will be of frame construction with stone foundation and concrete floor. The sides will be finished in novelty siding and the roof will be tar and gravel.

To Herman Retkoske to erect a frame garage at 176 Boswell avenue. The garage will be 20x20 feet and will accommodate two cars.

To P. F. Sweeney to erect a receiving vault at St. Mary's cemetery for St. Patrick's Parish Corp. The vault will have a steel frame with stone walls, concrete front and roof. The door will be of heavy bronze.

To P. F. Sweeney to build a two-car garage on Rockwell street, 22x22 feet, for Michael Levine. The garage will have a stone and concrete foundation and the sides and roof will be covered with wood and shingles.

NEW LONDON

A. T. Keeke, Plant building, has awarded the contract to H. R. Douglas & Son, State St., for the erection of his proposed residence on Hillside avenue. The house will be 27x45 feet, with a service wing, 10x22 feet. It will be of hollow tile and stucco construction and will contain fourteen rooms. The foundation walls are now being poured.

Plans for an addition to the battery station owned by Edward L. Benson on Hobron street, have been completed and are now being figured. The architect will receive the bids for the new construction, which will be a brick addition, 24x34 feet, one story high. There will be a pressed brick front, with a modern plate glass and cooper store front, with artificial granite trim.

The following bids were received for the proposed alterations to the residence of Chester W. Bliss, on Pequot avenue: H. R. Douglas & Son, $20,958; Joseph A. St. German, $21,000; John B. Leary, $25,700; Miller & Symington, $27,418. The awarding of the contract has been held up due to the absence of the owner from the city.

Oak Grove Beach has been incorporated by New London business men who are to develop the property, which is on the shore of the sound, between Crescent Beach and Black Point, for summer residents. There will be electric lights, artesian wells and other improvements. The incorporaters are J. B. Bailey, George M. Chapin, George Goss, John P. Pendleton, William T. White, Frederick Goss and George E. Fisher.

Victor Ganska, addition, 40 Eastern avenue $200.

Nameaug Boat Club, garage $100.

C. K. Crandall, addition, 100 Golden street $300.

Numbe of permits issued for the week, 9; estimated cost of buildings, $21,800.

Stafford Springs

Work has been started on the addition to the Warren Woolen Company mill, in charge of the Aberthaw Construction company of Southampton street, Boston, Mass. The new addition will be four stories high on the north side, connecting the brick mill with the old stone mill. It will be about as wide as the present brick mill, and constructed of reinforced cement.

EAST LYME

The plans for the Catholic church to be erected in East Lyme, which are being prepared will be completed and ready for figures about April 15. It is hoped to start work by May 1. The proposed church, which will be 35x70 feet, of frame construction, has been described before in these columns

MECHANICSVILLE

Plans for a school building for the Town of Mechanicsville, Conn., are now being figured. The building will be 30x60 feet, one story and basement, arranged for two classrooms, a library and teachers' room. It will be of brick construction.

STATE BUILDING SITUATION

This is the season of the year when there is usually some uneasiness in the building trades, but with wages at peak it is very likely that there will be but few demands for higher wages. Contractors are not over-anxious to figure plans at present, labor conditions and deliveries both being uncertain. Statistics of new work now being permitted for show a substantial increase over previous years. For the past week, in the Connecticut towns reported in The Commercial Record, 341 permits were issued for structures costing $1,646,424, against 287 permits a year ago, for buildings costing $960,512, and 221 permits in 1922, the buildings costing $649,930.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were 36 sales of real estate as compared to 13 sales for the corresponding week in 1923. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $179,100 and $27,700. Included in the mortgage deeds is one of $130,000 from Peter Sellas to Charles Richards et al.

In New London there were 7 sales of real estate during the past week as compared to 4 sales for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $17,580 and $4,500.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

The Jay Bird In His Airship

"Oh, the lollypop tree is a wonderful tree,
Did you ever see it grow?
The lollypops first are candy buds
On little sticks all in a row.

And when the lollies turn pink and blue
And yellow and mellow through and through,
The candy man comes with a great big sack

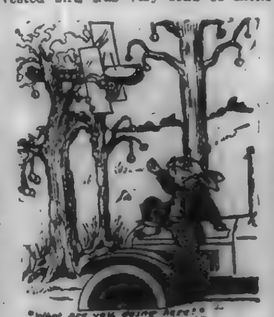
sang Bobbie Redvest at Little Jack Rabbit's window, one morning, Oh, so early. You see, this little redvested bird was very fond of Little



"What are you doing here?"

Jack Rabbit and told him lots and lots of things which were going on in the Shady Forest and the Sunny Meadow. Sometimes Bobbie Redvest flies over to my house and pecks on the window pane till I open the window.

"The lollypops must be ripe," said the rabbit and, away he hopped, to call on Uncle Lucky. In a few minutes they started off in the Lucky-mobile, but who do you suppose they found in the lollypop orchard? Why, the Jay Bird in his airship. He was busily gathering those lovely lollypops, but when he saw the two little bunnies he was dreadfully ashamed of himself, for the lollypop orchard belonged to Uncle Lucky, you know.

"What are you doing here?" inquired the old gentleman rabbit, honking the horn of the Luckymobile three times and a half to frighten the Jay Bird.

"I want to take home some lollypops to my little birdies," answered the Jay Bird looking sorrowfully at Uncle Lucky, for he was so kind-hearted that he always took home candy at night to his little bird children.

"Well, I should say you had enough lollypops for an orphan asylum," answered Uncle Lucky. "You might leave a few, you know, for the rabbit who owns the lollypop orchard."

Just then who should fly by but Grandmother Magpie. And, Oh dear me, wasn't she upset. Her bonnet strings were flying in the air and her black silk mitts were half off her claws.

"I think it's a shame these hard times for you birds and rabbits to be eating lollypops," she said. "Don't you know it raises the price of sugar?" and she picked a raspberry lollypop off a little tree and flew away with it. Wasn't that mean of her? And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

In loving memory of CHARLES A. TROLAND Who passed away April 8, 1923

Safe and lonely, softly sleeping,
Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies the one we love so dearly,

But they little know the sorrow
That lies within our hearts concealed.

Members of the parish and friends were most liberal in contributing both money and food as the proceeds are to be used for interior decorating of the church.

At the close a quantity of cake and rolls were sold, the net proceeds from all amounting to $55. The chapel was prettily decorated with laurel while pussy willows and daffodils in loose bouquets were arranged on the tables. The decorating was done by Mrs. Charles Learned. Following the supper many of those present gathered around the piano and enjoyed a social time.

The Lathrop Memorial Foreign Missionary society is to meet in the First Congregational chapel, Wednesday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock, when the opening of the mite boxes will take place.

At the Sunday morning worship at the First Congregational church the pastor, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey preached from II. Peter 1-8. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. During the service Rev. Mr. Bailey read the names of about 40 people who, it is expected will unite with this church Easter Sunday, including several from other churches.

A. Honline of Pasadena, California, who gave the series of lectures on the Bible and Religious Work.

The topic at the meeting Thursday evening at 7.30, will be, Life Eternal. Matthew 10:24-42.

Rev. James B. Aldrich, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, preached Sunday morning from St. John 21:21-23. Peter seeing him saith unto Jesus, Lord and what shall this man do? Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? Follow thou Me.

At the evening service, Rev. Mr. Aldrich preached from John 17.4. I have glorified Thee on the earth, I have finished the work which Thou gavest Me to do. The Young People's Christian Endeavor service was in charge of Miss Gladys Cruthers. The topic was, How Jesus Loved and Served, with a number of Scripture references.

The Dorcas Home Missionary society of the First Methodist church, is to hold its April meeting Thursday afternoon at 2.30, with the president, Mrs. James B. Aldrich.

Representatives from the Norwich Town Congregational church attended the meeting at Park church Monday evening, when the speaker was Rev. Dr. John L. Davis, leader of a men's club of 1500 in New Britain Methodist church.

CHAUFFEUR RYDEL BOUND OVER ON CHARGE OF MANSLAUGHTER

John Rydel, of New London, where he has been employed as a chauffeur, was bound over to the May term of the criminal superior court on a manslaughter charge by Justice Appleton Main of Preston after a hearing Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the justice's home in Poquetanuck. Bonds were fixed at $3,000 which were furnished by Rydel, who was represented by Attorney V. P. A. Quinn who entered a demurrer to the charge, which the justice overruled.

Rydel was the driver of the automobile which overturned on the Norwich-Westerly road near Fox Hill late on the afternoon of Sunday, March 23, when Peter Stempnick, who was in the machine was instantly killed and five year old Eleanor Isbicki died at the hospital from her injuries. These two were members of the party of six adults and five children who were riding to their homes in this city after attending a christening at a farm in Preston about 6 miles from the city.

Attorney Edwund W. Perkins prosecuted the case for the state at the justice's hearing with state policeman Charles Myatt who made the investigation at the time of the accident. Dr. W. T. Driscoll of this city testified to the injuries received by Stempnick and the Isbicki girl and Dr. Paul A. Schwartz of this city, a dentist, told of seeing the car driven by Rydel following an erratic course in the highway, while Murray Siegal of this city testified that he had followed the Rydel car for a mile or more and had not dared to try to pass it because of the wild way it was careening over the road. He finally came to a wide spot where he took a chance to get by and soon thereafter heard the crash, stopped his car and went back to the upset Rydel machine. In his opinion the driver was intoxicated.

Joseph Polinski, who was driving from Norwich to his home in Hallville, said he saw the Rydel car approaching and it was being driven so wildly that he brought his own car to a stop in order to let the other car get by. Other witnesses added accumulative evidence and the state introduced a bottle of "white mule" that had been found under the upset Rydel machine. Testimony was given that this tested 65 per cent. alcohol.

Officer William Sharvon of the Norwich force and State Policeman Henry and Kenerson were also witnesses.

The hearing before the justice occupied about two and a half hours.

PARK CHURCH BROTHERHOOD HEARS NEW BRITAIN PASTOR

Nearly two hundred people attended the meeting of the Brotherhood of Park Congregational church, held on Monday evening at the church and heard a most inspiring talk by Rev H. L. Davis of New Britain, organiser of the Every Man's Bible Class, nondenominational, of that city, which at present has a membership of over 2,000 men of all religious beliefs and all nationalities.

Rev. Mr. Davis explained that the idea was conceived after attending a men's Bible class in Brooklyn, comprising over 1,000 members. At that meeting, he said, 635 men were present. This made him determine to have a similar class in his home city At that time the men's class of his church numbered 50 members and they started out to get a members'ho of 150. In one year they had 1,000 members all due to organization and personality of leaders.

Four things, said Rev. Mr. Davis, count most in organizing a men's Bible class. First, its organization: second, personality and character of leaders and officers; third, lively singing; fourth, good speakers and programs.

The class, he said, is divided into armies, for instance, the Red and Blue armies. Over each army is a general. These generals appoint a major head over each batallion and the majors appoint five captains, each captain having five men to care for. The idea is to have the officers see that their men attend every meeting and contests are always on, each army trying to outnumber the other in attendance.

Then there is the civil organization with president, vice presidents, and other officers. This class, he said, has been the means of stopping much of the evils in the life of men. Men now attend churches who had not been in church for years. Many have given up swearing, gambling and like habits.

Asked how it affected church attendance by men, Rev. Mr. Davis said wives reported that their husbands now went to church, they got back of church movements, and in his church where Sunday school is held at the same time the men's class meets, the children's department has trebled in attendance as men now bring their children to Sunday school who never before dared allow them to come alone.

Before and after the address by Rev. Mr. Davis the audience was treated to groups of songs by Robert Young of Providence. Possessing a tenor voice of unusual quality Mr. Young delighted his audience with every number and was forced to respond for several encores.

The meeting was in charge of James N. Morton, leader of the men's class of Park church.

The General Conference meets in Springfield, Mass., for the month of May.

CONSTABLE GUS LAMBERT RECOVERING FROM INJURIES

The many friends of Constable Gustave Lambert will be pleased to learn that he has been discharged from the Backus hospital, and that the injuries he received to his face in a delayed blast of March 31st are rapidly healing.

Mr. Lambert left the hospital Monday morning and upon his appearance downtown was congratulated by friends upon his lucky escape. He wears a bandage about his chin but as soon as the wounds heal he will be little the worse for the adventure.

Physicians at the hospital speak highly of Constable Lambert, crediting him with remarkable courage. On the day of the accident, despite the painful injuries to his face he walked from the car to the hospital, up two flights of stairs and helped the surgeons in every way possible to patch up his face. When this was done he calmly washed his hands, which were covered with blood.

Paul Millet, who was injured in the eye at the same accident is recovering nicely, and will soon be discharged. The sight of the eye has been saved to him by the careful attentions of the physicians on the case.

CENTRAL BAPTIST CLASS INTERESTED IN MISSIONS

The regular meeting of the G. G. G. class of the Central Baptist church, taught by Mrs. C. C. Gildersleeve, was held Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Daniel Wadsworth on Spring Garden avenue with a large attendance. There was a brief business meeting, opened by the president, during which the secretary and trasurer read their reports. The class voted to spend a certain amount of money for missionary purposes. A visiting committee of two, Miss Harriet Williams and Mrs. Wadsworth, were appointed to visit new members. Miss Emily Gallup was appointed chairman of the publicity committee.

A social time followed the business meeting, home-made cake and candy with cocoa being served by Mrs. Wadsworth. The meeting closed at 9:45.

council committee. The G. and E. board's report was accepted, without reading, owing to its length. The report of the special council committee composed of Mayor Waters, Corporation Counsel W. H. Shields, Jr., Alderman E. LaRue Bliven, Councilman William H. Aldrich and Councilman John E. Fitgerald will be found in this issue of The Bulletin.

The next matter taken up was the offer of the Eastern Connecticut Power Co., to purchase the municipal gas and electric plant on North Main street. Two propositions, the details of which have already been published in the local press, made by the Eastern Connecticut Power Co., were read by the clerk.

Upon motion of Alderman Henry Gebrath it was voted that a committee of five members of the council, including Mayor Waters, be appointed to take the two offers of the power company under consideration and report back to the council. Mayor Waters was authorized to appoint the committee and he named the following council members to serve with him: Alderman Henry Gebrath, Alderman Edward Crooks, Councilman William S. Aldrich and Councilman Alfred G. Gillibridge.

The annual report of the playground commission was received and accepted.

The police committe through Alderman Patrick F. Sweeney reported that in response to petitions they had granted an arc light at Sturtevant and Tyler avenues, a bug light at Dunham street and Potter place and a bug light in front of No. 16 Penobscot street. The reports were accepted.

Reports On Petitions.

The public works committee made the following reports: On petition to accept Howard street as a public street; that petitioners be given leave to withdraw. On petition for culvert at Tenth and Prospect streets; recommended that a grade be established there. On petition to accept Whittington avenue as a public street from the point to which it has already been accepted; recommended acceptance if street is put in proper condition. On petition to accept Yerrington avenue as a public street; recommended that petitioners be given leave to withdraw. The reports were accepted by the council.

The public works committee also reported that the petition of D. J. Barry for the removal of three trees on Penobscot street has been attended to and in response to a petition a stone fence had been erected at the Laurel Hill bridge to safeguard traffic on the hill.

Alderman Bliven, reporting for the amusement committee, stated that with regard to the petition of the Murphy Shows to hold their carnival on the Duwell grounds, the majority of the committee recommended against giving the permit asked for. A motion to accept the report was lost. Councilman William B. Shea, the minority member of the committee, recommended that the permit be granted. A motion to accept his report was passed.

The Edward Chappell Co., in a communication to the council, complained that material from the city dump washes down the Yantic river filling up the channel in front of their dock. The complaint was referred to the public works committee.

American Legion Invitation.

The council accepted an invitation from R. O. Fletcher Post, No. 4, American Legion, to attend a special meeting of the post Tuesday evening at which time State Commander Eugene P. Armstrong will be present.

John P. Sullivan in a communication entered a complaint that water from Meyer avenue flows into his lot and interferes with the use of his garage on Palmer avenue. Referred to the public works committee with power.

Mrs. Anna Wood complained in a communication that during the storm of March 11th snow laden branches of a tree banged against the chimney on her house, dislodging some of the bricks. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

Will Restore Norwich Welcome.

Councilman Lee Clegg brought up the matter of the Welcome to Norwich signs, some of which have disappeared from their fastenings. He made a motion that the public works committee be instructed to have them placed back where they belong. The motion was adopted.

The council then adopted a resolution authorizing the appropriation of $75,000 for the expenses of the Gas and Electric department for the remainder of the department's fiscal year, the money to be taken from the department receipts. This was the appropriation voted at the city meeting held in the town hall prior to the council meeting.

The council authorized the city clerk to cast one ballot for the election of Frank P. Tuttle, a night watchman at the Max Gordon plant, as a special constable, and he was so elected.

Department bills were approved as follows:

Finance department, $11,283.45; department cemeteries $426.43; gas and electric department, $80,228.04; water department, $2,648.58; police department, $5,109.32; street lighting, $5,877.57; fire department, $6,916.53; park department, $233.27; public works department, $3,846.21; permanent street improvement, $246.59.

The council adjourned at 10.15 o'clock until Wednesday evening, April 16th, at 8 p. m.

COMMITTEE REPORT ON GAS AND ELECTRIC

The following was the report made by the special committee of the common council:

Your special committee who were appointed to confer with the Board of Gas and Electrical Commissioners beg leave to report as follows:

We have met with the said Board of Gas and Electrical Commissioners and discussed at length the various matters that have been brought to the attention of the committee.

It is the opinion of your Committee that the Council should in no way interfere with the employment or the discharge of employes of the Department. We believe that is a matter that rests entirely with the Commissioners and their General Manager, and that interference therewith would be unwise and against the best interests of the city.

The Board of Gas and Electrical Commissioners have submitted to your committee at their request a tabulation of the rates charged in many cities in New England for gas and electricity for lighting purposes. These prices for the first one thousand feet of gas range from $1.40 per thousand feet in Meriden to $2.80 per thousand feet in Marlboro. The average charge for the first thousand feet of gas in the cities is $1.89 per thousand feet, in Norwich the cost to the consumer is $2.35 including the service charge of 20 cents. The minimum charge in the various cities range from 50 cents to $1.00 per month, in but one other city than Norwich is a service charge made, but in the majority of the cities an addition charge of from 50 cents to 84 cents is made for the first 100 feet of gas.

The cost to the consumer for electricity for lighting purpose in the cities tabulated varies from 10 cents per K. W. H. in Meriden to 14 cents per K. W. H. in Rockville. The average charge to the consumer in the fifteen cities tabulated is .1196 cents per K. W. H. The charge in Norwich is 13 cents per K. W. H. It would seem that while our city may be paying a high price for gas it is paying but the average price for electricity and is saving approximately $25,000 a year on street lighting.

Regarding the service charge of 20 cents per gas meter we quote from the special report to us as follows:

Consumer charge, Gas:

The revenue to which the Department is entitled is a fixed sum to be paid by consumers, in one form of rate or another, and the question involved is but one of distributing the Fixed Burden among the consumers equitable and without discrimination.

The Commission before placing in effect the present rate schedule gave the matter of rates most careful consideration, and from the fact, that most favorable comment has been made on the schedule by prominent gas men in the state we have felt that we "builded well" when we established the present schedule, effective January 1st, 1923.

In fixing a rate there are two distinct kinds of charges to be considered. The one is the manufacturing cost of gas in the holder, ready for distribution to the consumer, and consists of the following items of cost, labor, coal or coke, oil, material used at the works and expense of its maintenance. This cost is easily calculated.

Among the expenses of the business after the gas leaves the holder are the following. The figures given are for the months of May, June, July, 1923.

Distribution Expense—Gas

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Distribution Supt. | $ 560.50 | |
| Distribution Supplies and Expenses | 185.50 | |
| Maintenance Installations | 210.55 | |
| Work on Consumers' Premises | 212.38 | |
| Setting and Removing Meters | 851.19 | |
| | | $2020.12 |

Maintenance Expense—Gas

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Maintenance of Mains | $1162.00 | |
| Maintenance Services | 527.34 | |
| Maintenance Meters | 802.40 | |
| Maintenance Accessories | 8.96 | |
| | | $2501.79 |

Commercial Expense—Gas

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Commercial General Labor | $ 502.00 | |
| Commercial Bookkeeping | 518.00 | |
| Meter Reading | 459.47 | |
| | | $1479.47 |

General and Miscellaneous Expense

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Salaries | $ 327.50 | |
| General Office Salaries | 393.32 | |
| Office Supplies and Expenses | 394.56 | |
| Stationery and printing | 391.58 | |
| Insurance | 1439.63 | |
| Other Misc. Gen'l Exp. | 259.00 | |
| Transportation Exp. | 840.08 | |
| | | $4153.68 |
| Interest | | 2599.72 |
| Dereciation | | 2751.30 |

Total Readiness to Serve Expense $15,508.08

During this period (May, June, July) 1923, there were 12,635 consumer months. Since the above costs are as much for one consumer as another dividing the total expense of $15,508.08 by the number of consumer months gives an average expense of $1.23 per consumer. This expense exists, whether or not any gas is supplied. The readiness to supply gas when it is wanted is a necessity; without it, no gas could be delivered. Although the expense is not a part of the cost of making gas it must be met, just as lodge or club dues must be paid whether you attend or stay away.

Our present consumer charge is 90 cents, from the previous statement you will note that the cost to the department was $1.23. The consumer charge is a just and reasonable one and should be maintained.

Rate Structure.

First—"Produce the desired revenue."

Second—"Distribute the burden equally among the various customers and do so without unnecessary complication in the schedule or its application."

Third—"Recognize local conditions, retain and develop existing business and attract desirable new business.

In the block rate schedule for gas service (plus service charge) such as we find in very general use today, we have a rate which fulfills very closely these requirements. Some form of this schedule is said to be in effect in 38 states in the Union.

It is generally recognized and generally agreed to that an analysis of the costs of gas service will disclose three distinct and definite elements of cost, viz:

"A" Consumer Cost.
"B" Demand or Capacity Cost.
"C" Commodity or Output Costs.

Consumer Costs "A"

This group includes costs that are particularly proportional to the number of consumers and that are not affected by variation in the consumption or in the demand, such as the cost of reading meter, billing, collecting, etc., maintenance of meter, maintenance of services and the fixed charges thereon, as well as some portion of the miscellaneous office expense.

Demand Cost "B"

This group included costs that vary with the demands made upon the plant and system by the consumer and that are not affected directly by the quantity consumed, and that do not vary directly with the number of consumers. In a large measure, these costs are made up of certain portions of the costs of operation and of interest and depreciation charges on a large portion of the property.

Output Cost "C"

Included in this group are costs that are practically proportional for the cubic feet of gas delivered and that do not vary with the demand of the consumer or with the number of consumers of the company, such as all or a large portion of the costs of production, some of costs of distribution and the fixed charges, or a portion, depending upon the circumstances of the plant and the distribution system.

The three part schedule outlined above is considered to be the ideal schedule, it is in very general use by electric companies but has not been adopted by many gas companies due to the lack of necessary instruments for determining the demand.

I believe that many laymen look on rate schedules as a bit or mine proposition, this is not the case, for the past twenty years intensive studies have been made by representatives of various state regulatory bodies until now we have a large store of rate making material available. By analyzing this material carefully we are able to determine the fundamental principles upon which rates should be based.

Before any utility makes a radical change in rates it is customary for them to carefully study the effect such a change will make on their business, such study sometimes discloses rather startling facts. Some years ago a state commission found a large gas company was serving seventy per cent. of all its consumers at a rate yielding less than the cost for service rendered, and that this 70 per cent. were consuming less than one-third of the gas distributed; that 5 per cent. of the consumers were using 30 per cent. of the gas and were as a matter of fact, largely contributing to whatever return the company made. Another case investigated recently in Massachusetts disclosed that 85 per cent. of the consumers were using but 55 per cent. of the output and were not bearing their fair share of the costs. The loss in return was made up by the other 15 per cent. who were overcharge.

It has been held that the service charge unjustly falls on the poor man who is unable to pay it. Assuming that the poor man uses no gas in any month his bill of 50c. and 75c covers mere actual costs that have been incurred in maintaining gas service at his disposal. If he uses gas he pays only the cost of that commodity in addition. Justice as such demands that he pay a fair price for what he gets. He gets the "readiness to serve" with gas at all times. The service charge is therefore just. The "ability to pay" theory is in a measure "charging what the traffic will bear" which theory finds little place in the utility question of today.

It is often said that the gas industry is a monopoly, but do not overlook the fact that it is a gas monopoly, and is not a fuel and lighting monopoly. It is important to keep this fact clearly in mind. If a customer will not pay his just share of the costs which he has caused he must be able to obtain a like and similar service for fuel or lighting from some other source at a lower cost. This applies to the large as well as to the small consumer. Coal, coke, oil and wood are in active competition in all phases of the gas industry. It is therefore, highly important that gas rates should be founded on an equitable basis for all classes of consumers of the business is to maintain itself and grow as is demanded of it by the economic position in the welfare of society.

"Rates should be Just Reasonable,
Sufficient,
Non-Discriminatory,
Noie-Preferential."

"A reasonable and just rate is one that is just to both the utility and to the consumer."

"It must be sufficient in that the income will at least equal the outgo."

"It must be reasonable in that the items of outgo are fair and warranted for the circumstances and condition under which the utilities operates."

"It must be sufficient to encourage additional investment in the service of the public."

"A rate must be not preferential or unjustly discriminatory by being greater or less than that charged for a like and contemporaneous service. A rate must not be unjustly discriminatory by requiring a certain class of customer to pay for the costs caused by another class or classes."

In the opinion of your committee this service charge is entirely too high and that it would be to the benefit of the department to eliminate this charge and to make, as in other cities, a small addition to the first 100 feet of gas used it does not seem proper to your committee that he should be held responsible for the overhead expenses with the large who pays a greatly reduced price for the gas he uses.

Your committee have recommended to the commission that all matters of the department be given the greatest publicity possible in view of the fact that every citizen of Norwich is necessarily a stockholders in the corporation. With that in view this special report, comprising about 50 typewritten pages has been given to the press.

We hand you herewith the special report of the board of gas and electrical commission and would recommend that it be printed in the appendix to the Journal and that 500 copies be printed for distribution.

We also hand you herewith a proposition from the Eastern Conn. Power Co. regarding:

First—The purchase of power by the City of Norwich from said company.

Second—The purchase of the Gas and Electric plant from the city by the said company, and recommend that it be referred to a special committee for investigation.

New Way to Banish Rheumatic Pains Discovered By Alessandro Volta

Rids You of Rheumatic Pain Without Drugs or Medicines.

Until recently, the real cause of Rheumatism has evaded scientific inquiry. And, naturally, the old fashioned methods of treatment with internal remedies were uncertain and sometimes dangerous.

Now it has been definitely established that rheumatic pains are caused in many cases by the absorption of poisons into the blood.

Alessandro Volta, the well known physicist, for whom the electric volt was named, has produced an entirely new and revolutionary method of treatment for Rheumatism. He discovered a scientific combination of certain ingredients that produces a fine powder which, when shaken into the shoes or stockings, is intended to be immediately absorbed into the blood. This is due, no doubt, to the fact that the soles of the feet contain 10 times as many pores to the square inch as are found in other parts of the body.

He has called this powder Volta. Its use has given immediate relief, in many instances, from the terrible crippling, torturing pain even in stubborn, long-standing cases.

The use of Volta powder has demonstrated such astonishing results in literally thousands of cases, many of which were considered hopeless, that the American distributors have authorized local druggists to dispense Volta to rheumatic sufferers in their city with an unqualified guarantee to return the full purchase price of the first box in any rare case where the rheumatic pains are not wonderfully relieved.

All who suffer from rheumatic pains, no matter how long-standing their case may be, should take immediate advantage of this liberal offer. You can get Volta from

U. S. SENATOR B. K. WHEELER INDICTED BY A FEDERAL GRAND JURY IN MONTANA

Chairman of the Daugherty Investigating Committee is Accused of Having Accepted a Retainer Fee to Influence the Granting of Oil Land Permits—Bond of $1,000 Will Be Asked of Senator Wheeler and the Warrant For His Arrest Will Be Telegraphed to Washington From Great Falls—Geologist Gordon Campbell and Oil Promoter L. G. Stevenson Were Indicted With Senator Wheeler.

Great Falls, Mont., April 8.—(By The A. P.)—United States Senator B. K. Wheeler, was indicted by a federal grand jury here today on a charge of having accepted money as a retainer fee after he became United States senator to influence the granting of oil and permits.

Gordon Campbell, noted in the western oil states as a geologist, and L. C. Stevenson, an oil operator and promoter were indicted with Senator Wheeler.

Charles L. Blumhoff and E. D. Dailey, oil men were indicted in a third separate indictment charged with sending fraudulent matter through the mails.

The fee, it is charged, was paid by Gordon Campbell. Stevenson and Campbell formerly were associated in the oil promotion business, but later became business rivals, dividing their acreage in the Kevin-Sunburst field.

Dailey, who was caught in the Texas oil probes in which Dr. Cook was a defendant, is at present serving a prison term of one year on that charge according to federal officials.

Some of the department of justice operatives who took part in the Texas oil round-up were among those who assembled the evidence which led to Senator Wheeler's indictment here today.

When asked if it would be possible to effect the arrest of Senator Wheeler during the time Congress is in session, United States District Attorney Slatery said:

Slattery made his statement in answer to a hypothetical question without admitting that Wheeler had been indicted.

Bond of $1,000, will be asked of Senator Wheeler and the warrant for his arrest will be telegraphed to Washington, it was stated.

Senator Wheeler represented Gordon Campbell before the department of the interior in an application for an oil permit, officials here declared. He appeared once for Campbell in a Montana court in an oil litigation.

T. T. Lease, former mayor of Great Falls, and a member of the state legislature at the time, was the foreman of the grand jury. He has been a resident of Montana 35 years and is one of the state's foremost contractors. He was elected to the legislature as a republican, and mayor of Great Falls, as a progressive during the "Bull Moose" campaign.

Judge Pray who was appointed to the federal judgeship by President Coolidge two months ago, reconvened the grand jury Wednesday, April 2. It had recessed only a day or two previously after returning indictments in liquor cases and adopting resolutions which critized the attorney general of Montana for alleged laxity in enforcement of prohibition laws.

Judge Pray thanked the jurors and permanently excused them today. After the court had retired to chambers District Attorney Slattery made a plea that the names of the indicted pending serving of the warrants, be made public and Judge Pray consented.

Judge Pray before coming to Montana 27 years ago, was a reporter in Chicago. He was county attorney of Cascade county, Montana, in 1898 and was elected to congress in 1906, 1908 and 1910, defeating Senator Thomas J. Walsh. In 1912 Senator Walsh defeated Judge Pray for the United States senate.

The indictment against Senator Wheeler is entitled the "United States of America versus Burton K. Wheeler."

Striped of its legal verbiage the indictment, which is divided into three counts, charges that Senator Wheeler, after he had been elected senator but before he had qualified for office, accepted money for his services to influence the granting of oil and gas prospecting permits in matters pending before the department of the interior and commissioner of the general land office.

The first sum of money which the jury finds Senator Wheeler accepted was in a sum unknown. This was alleged to have been paid him January 3, 1923, at a place unknown. The second sum of money is alleged to have been $2,000 paid to him at Butte, Mont., January 10, 1923. The third sum, $2,000 is alleged to have been paid him February 16, 1923, at Butte.

WHEELER NOT TO RETURN IMMEDIATELY TO MONTANA

Washington, April 8.— Senator Wheeler declared tonight that he would not return immediately to Montana as a result of indictment at Great Falls but would remain here and proceed with his work as prosecutor for senate Daugherty investigating committee.

Any steps necessary in meeting the indictment, he indicated, could be taken in the first instance in the District of Columbia, so that he could continue actively in his committee work and not go to Montana, immediately.

"There is absolutely nothing to the charges," he asserted in a brief formal statement. "This indictment is simply the result of my activities here on the investigating committee trying to show up the corruption in the department of justice."

The Montana senator at one time reached the decision to return to Montana immediately and demand an early trial but after consultation with several of his colleagues he declared that he had decided to remain here for the time being.

RUM-LADEN SCHOONER IS POUNDING TO PIECES

Chatham, Mass., April 8—The Spanish schooner Expresso, rum-laden which drove ashore on Handkerchief Shoals, two miles from the Monomoy point coast guard station, during Monday's storm, was pounding to pieces tonight in the heavy surf, while along the shore hundreds waited for a share of the cargo, washed up in tins and cases by the waves. The coast guard crew had recovered 1,000 gallons of tinned alcohol while battle fishermen in dories, and the beachcombers on shore had retrieved an unknown amount.

The captain and crew of the Expreso quartered at the coast guard station, watched their vessel slowly breaking up while Captain Ellis, in charge of the Monomoy Point crew, sought to discover their status. The papers of the schooner indicated that the vessel was bound from Havana to St. Pierre, Miquelon, but both the Spanish and Cuban consulates at Boston declared they had no interest in the matter and no responsibility regarding the crew, coast guardsmen said. Liquor was floating ashore in vast quantities today, and boats came from Provincetown and other cape points to share in the salvage. It was said that the cargo consisted of 40,000 gallons of liquor, chiefly tinned alcohol.

RHODE ISLAND DEMOCRATS FAVOR GOV. AL E. SMITH

Providence, R. I., April 8.—Fourteen delegates to the convention in New York next June were elected today by the democratic state convention here which also adopted a resolution "that it is the opinion of this convention that the nomination of Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York for president by the democratic national convention would insure success of our party in the approaching election.

"The convention adopted a platform condemning "the Saturnalia of official debauchery now being exposed in Washington," and declaring that "these scandals" coming "as they have at more or less definite periods in the history of that party, prove quite conclusively that the republican organization is not to be entrusted with the government of this country."

DISCHARGED FOR DELAYING THE DELIVERY OF MAIL

Lawrence, Mass., April 8.—Postmaster Robert R. Tetler announced today that Albert Smith, a rural carrier in Methuen, had been discharged for delaying the delivery of mail. A few days ago a fire did considerable damage to Smith's house and firemen reported that they found several sacks of mail in the ruins. None of it was first class matter and there was apparently no intent to commit larceny, Postmaster Teller says. He stated that Smith gave as his reason for the non-delivery of the mail the condition of the roads, stating that he intended to deliver it when the roads were in better condition.

TO ELECT PRESIDENT NEW YORK CENTRAL

New York, April 8.—A successor to A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central railroad who was killed in Central Park a month ago in a fall from his saddle horse, will be elected by the board of directors in special session tomorrow.

Reports that George F. Baker, veteran railroad financier and chairman of the First National bank, virtually would name the new president, and that his choice would fall upon Albert Hall Harris, of Syracuse, N. Y., were current in financial circles tonight, although little credited by operating officials of the road.

Mr. Baker has been at his winter home in Jekyl Island, Ga., but is expected to attend the directors' meeting tomorrow.

Presidency of the New York Central is generally conceded to be the prize railroad executiveship in this country, for the road controls 12,00 miles of roadbed in the most thickly settled sections of the country

Mr. Harris has been vice president of the company, in charge of corporate relations. He entered the services of the New York Central as an attorney in the 90's, and since has been closely identified with its finances.

CHASE CORP. BIDS IN NEW YORK BONUS BONDS

Albany, N. Y., April 8.—New York states recently enacted soldier bonus machinery was put in motion today with the sale of the $45,000,000 bond issue to a syndicate of ten banking firms headed by the Chase Securities Corporation of New York city. The sale took place in the office of the state comptroller, James W. Fleming, and was attended by a score of representatives of leading eastern financial companies. In all 26 bids were received.

The bid of the Chase corporation was 101.4657, which will net the state a premium of $659.565, or enough to administer payment of the bonus. In its bid the Chase syndicate guaranteed to take all or none of the bonds, a provision also made in the offerings of four other bidders. The securities bear 4 1-2 per cent. interest and are exempt from taxation. The price is said to be the highest paid for bonus bonds of nay state in athe Union.

CHILDREN MAY HAVE BEEN SWEPT AWAY BY FLOOD

Methuen, Mass., April 8—Rosina Corsey, aged 12, and her brother Carlino, 9, missing from their home in the Pleasant Valley section of Methuen since 5:30 yesterday afternoon, may have been swept away in the Merrimack river, the police say. The river runs in the rear of the family home and at 5.30 yesterday the little girl was sent into the yard to call her brother to supper. Neither child has been seen since. The police have searched the vicinity but say that the current is so swift that if the children fell in they were probably carried quickly down stream.

MAY COMPROMISE ON THE MELLON INCOME TAX PLAN

Washington, April 8—A movement within the ranks of senate republican regulars for a compromise on the Mellon income tax plan developed today as the reveune bill, carrying the rates in this plan, was ordered sent to the senate by the finance committee.

Senator McCormick of Illinois, a republican member of the finance committee, announced he soon would call a conference of some republican leaders, particularly those of the farm bloc, with a view of working out a substitute schedule for the Mellon rates. Proponents of the Mellon plan have admitted, Senator McCormick said, that it cannot be adopted in the senate.

The fight on the bill will center on the income tax rates, as in the house where the Mellon plan was rejected in favor of the Longworth compromise. A schedule similar to the Longworth plan is predicted by some republicans as the compromise that will be agreed upon.

The only other contest of consequence looked for now by leaders of both parties will be in the miscellanous and excise rates, some of which were restored to the bill by the finance committee after their repeal had been voted by the house.

A bitter contest is anticipated on the income schedule, however, and Chairman Smoot of the finance committee predicted today that a minimum of three weeks would be required for disposition of the bill by the senate. It will be reported to the senate Thursday, he said, with the majority report on the bill to be made probably by Friday. A minority report by the democrats will be submitted by Senator Simmons, North Carolina, ranking democrat on the committee, probably at the same time.

Meanwhile, Senator Smoot expects to call the committee together Thursday, so as to take up the soldier bonus bill sent to the senate by the house. Not more than two days is expected to be consumed by the committee in consideration of this measure and it is likely the bill will be before the senate before the tax measure actually is taken up. Mr. Smoot said it was not probable that the latter bill would be taken up by the senate before the middle of next week, while some senators have indicated they will seek to have the bonus bill disposed of first.

JOHNSON IMMIGRATION BILL DEBATED IN HOUSE

Washington, April 8.—The house held a session tonight to wind up general debate on the Johnson immigration bill. Tomorrow and Thursday the measure will be laid aside for other business but will be taken up again Friday with amendments in order.

For a time today, immigration also was under discussion in the senate, advocating his amendment to the immigration bill pending in the senate for exclusion of Japanese on lines similar to the Johnson bill, Senator Shortridge, republican, California, assailed "gentlemen's agreement," with Japan and declared it had failed to work to the best interests of the Pacific coast.

In the house, Representative Raker, democrat, California, and Miller, republican, Washington, expressed similar views. They contended that the provision in the Johnson bill which would bar entry for permanent residence, of aliens ineligible for citizenship was needed to cope with the vexing racial problem on the west coast.

Late in the day the senats adopted, without a record vote, an amendment, approved by the immigration committee, to restore students to the class exempted from the quota count. It was opposed by Senator Shortridge, and other western senators.

The lesser charge was made against the man when he agreed to plead guilty of assault with intent to kill. He had first been charged with assault with intent to murder.

Connolly entertained a grudge against the physician because the latter in a compensation case testified that he did not find on the man evidence of serious injury such as he had claimed.

Testimony Before Daugherty Committee

Included Prohibition Conditions in Illinois, War Contracts, and a Mail Fraud Case in Boston.

Washington, April 8—Conditions surrounding the enforcement of prohibition in Illinois, department of Justice action in relation to war contracts of the Old Hickory Powder Company, of Tennessee and a mail fraud case in Boston were discussed by witnesses who appeared today before the senate Daugherty investigating committee.

As a result of testimony concerning "protection" declared to have been acquired by Chicago breweries and bootleggers, which Brice F. Armstrong, a prohibition agent at Chicago, continued from his first appearance yesterday, E. C. Yellowly, chief of federal general prohibition enforcement agents, was called before the committee and submitted some official records asked for by committee members. His examination had not been completed when the committee adjourned for the day.

As a result of testimony concerning "protection" declared to have been acquired by Chicago breweries and bootleggers, which Brice F. Armstrong a prohibition agent at Chicago, continued from his first appearance yesterday, E. C. Yellowly, chief of federal general prohibition enforcement agents, was called before the committee and submitted some official records asked for by committee members. His examination had not been completed when the committee adjourned for the day.

Details o fthe Old Hickory case and mention of the mail frauds were given the committee by George W. Storck, now an accountant for the department of justice, who told of recommendations that the return of $15,000,000 be sought from the Du Pont interests, as owners of the Old Hickory plant, on war contracts for powder, and that an investigation of the "Green case," at Boston, had discloced extensive mail frauds, but had resulted in no federal prosecutions.

Committee members evinced deep interest in Stock's testimony, and when it appeared that he had made audits for the government in alien property investigations particularly in the case of the Bosch Magneto company he was directed to get his records from the bureau of investigation and return for further examination tomorrow.

When he named the Standard Beverage company, as one still in operation and for whom the department of justice had "interceded," to prevent its being closed, the committee asked for Mr. Yellowley who appeared with records in the case.

Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney general in charge of prohibition enforcement, Armstrong insisted, was anxious to press prosecutions.

Storck said war department auditors had made three reports on the Old Hickory accounts, but had been "stopped," and that John W. H. Crim, assistant attorney general, had ordered him to go to Nashville in the summer of 1923, and "survey" the situation. He said he recommended that forty men, accountants, and investigators, be put on the work after his preliminary survey, and he turned in a report to Mr. Crim explaining the points which he considered should be brought out by the accounting force.

In later conferences with war department and department of justice officials, Storck continued, he found his report was in the possession of attorneys for the Du Pont interests. No action resulted, although he remarked that after the senate committee began its investigation two special assistants had been assigned to the case.

A "Captain Foulke, son-in-law, of one of the Du Ponts," had superintended performance of the Old Hickory contracts, he said and "padding" of freight accounts, disregard of shortages in deliveries to the government, and other matters had been shown to the degree that the "Du Ponts have $1,500,000 on deposit to pay over if they can get a clean bill of health in the matter."

"I can show you where the money was made," he asserted. "The Du Ponts only paid $2 for this contract. But between $130,000,000 and $140,000,000 was spent for materials with the Du Pont subsidiary companies."

The furnishing of his report to the Du Pont attorneys, Storck told Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, the committee prosecutor, had made it possible for them "to cover up if they have the disposition."

In a brief sketch of the "Green Case," Storck said that in February, 1921, he had been ordered to audit records which showed $30,000,000 involved in stock selling operations. H. V. Green, whom he named as head of the firm, warned him, he said, that "H. M. Daugherty is my attorney," and he reported this to the department of justice. No federal prosecution was instituted, he said, but two years later Massachusetts State officials took action against Green.

Task of Reparation Experts Completed

Meeting of the Commission Today Will Be a Mere Formal Delivery of the Report.

Shortly after 8 oclock tonight the last correction was made in the text of the report and marked the end of the formidable work undertaken January 14. As tomorrow's meeting with the reparation commission will be a mere formal ceremony for the delivery of the report, the three months' investigation and discussions may be regarded as officially terminated tonight.

When the committee convened in January it was confidently expected that six weeks would suffice in which to draw up a report, and two months was given as the extreme limit of time in which the experts would be ready to present their conclusions. The work lasted longer than was originally expected because the experts made the most of the scope allowed them in the investigation of the various problems involved and went into every detail with careful scrutiny, consulting numerous specialists, railroads and banking monopolies as well as representatives of the German ministries interested.

The French press is practically unanimous in praise of the businesslike manner in which the experts conducted their work, saying that the conclusions reached constitute serious bases for a general settlement of the reparation problem.

FEAT OF TELEGRAPHY BY WESTERN UNION CO.

New York, April 8—In transmitting today directly from Paris into the office of The Associated Press at 383 Madison avenue, the report of the committee of experts to the reparations commission of about 44,000 words a feat unparalleled in transoceanic communications was accomplished by the Western Union Telegraph company, according to Newcomb Carleton, its president.

Not only was this the largest single despatch ever received, traffic officers said, but it was the first time an ocean cable was operated directly into a newspaper or news association office. Four such direct cables were used in speeding up the delivery in order that the full text of the report might be available for publication in the United States, simultaneously with its presentation to the full reparation commission.

COOLIDGE LEADS JOHNSON IN THE ILLINOIS PRIMARY

Vote For Republican Presidential Preference in Chicago Was Very Close—Outside of Chicago Indications Are That Coolidge is Leading Johnson Apparently Two to One—Disorders in Several Districts Marked the End of Bitter Political Campaign.

Chicago, April 8.—(By The A. P.)—A record vote was reported tonight as officials began tabulating returns in today's statewide primary election.

Disorders in several districts marked the culmination of one of the bitterest primary campaigns in Illinois' political history.

Overshadowing in state interest, the race between President Coolidge and Senator Hiram Johnson, for the republican presidential preference was that for the republican gubernatorial nomination between Governor Len Small and State Senator Thurlow G. Essington.

The closeness of the republican presidential preference vote in Chicago was shown by the returns from 700 precincts out of 2,067, giving Johnson 49,857 and Coolidge 49,618. These figures indicated a total republican vote in Chicago on presidential preference of approximately 300,000. The total registered in Chicago is 938,316 and as the city is normally republican, many citizens apparently di dnot express their preference for president.

Newton Jenkins, seeking the republican senatorial nomination with the support of the La Follete inaurgent group and the Illinois Conference for Progressive Political Action, was running third; more than 25,000 votes behind Senator McCormick.

State Representative Lee O'Neil Browne, demanding the modification of the Volstead act, was running a poor second in a field of five for the democratic gubernatorial nomination, on the face of returns from sixty Chicago precincts.

Governor Small led his opponent both in Chicago and down-state territory, but his advantage was by a greater margin in the down-state totals.

For Governor.

Chicago, April 8.—For republican governor 1,131 precincts gave: 1130 Cook county precincts, Essington 77,963; Small 92,628; 757 down-state precincts: Essington 67,162; Small 82,494: total, Essington 145,130; Small, 175,022.

Chicago, April 8.—For president, 1,295 precincts out of 3,668 gave: 1,050 Chicago precincts: Coolidge 70,264: Johnson 74,102. 245 down-stiae precincts: Coolidge 21,382; Johnson 13,789: Total: Coolidge 91,646; Johnson 87,891.

In 1,350 Chicago precincts in which McAdoo polled 50,892, 1863 friends of Mayor Dever of Chicago wrote his name for the presidential nomination, and supporters of Governor Alfred L. Smith of New York gave him a vote of 1,084.

Although returns for democratic delegates-at-large to the national convention were meagre tonight, the men put forward by George E. Brennan in opposition to those supporting McAdoo proved better than four to one in the few precincts reported. Brennan, himself, in 14 precincts including three in Chicago, had 737 votes as against 175 each for former Governor E. F. Dunne and former Mayor Carter Harrison, of Chicago, supporting McAdoo. Mayor William E. Dever, of Chicago, led the Brennan candidates with 761 votes.

JOHNSON TRAILING COOLIDGE IN NEBRASKA

Omaha, Neb., April 8.—(By The A. P.)—Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, who carried the Nebraska presidential preference primary in 1920 over General Leonard Wood and General John J. Pershing by more that 20,000 votes, was running behind President Calvin Coolidge when 193 precincts out of 1,926 had reported tonight on today's preference race for the republican nomination. The vote, Coolidge 3,888; Johnson 5,565.

LIGHT VOTE CAST IN NEBRASKA PRIMARY

Omaha, Neb., April 8.—(By The A. P.)—A slow count and a light vote was recorded in the Nebraska primary today. Two hours after the polls closed in the eastern half of the state, and an hour after voting ceased in the western half, only 48 precints had reported on the republican presidential preference vote. These gave Coolidge 2,851 and Johnson 1,923.

COOLIDGE VICTORY IN MICHIGAN OVERWHELMING

Detroit, Mich., April 8.—(By the A. P.)—The overwhelming victory of Calvin Coolidge on the republican ticket, the apparent defeat of Senator Woodbridge N. Ferris by Henry Ford on the democratic ballot and a see-saw contest between two women candidates for a place on the democratic national committee—these were today's outstanding features of Monday's statewide presidential primary.

Each additional tabulation of returns served to increase the lead of President Coolidge over Senator Hiram W. Johnson, of California, 2,105 of the state's 2,890 precincts giving Coolidge 172,066 and Johnson 76,114. Coolidge supporters tonight were claiming a plurality greater than 100,000 votes when complete returns are received.

Ford's advantage over Ferris was narrow, 2,060 precincts giving the Detroit manufacturer a lead of only 2,533, which is somewhat under the margin maintained earlier in the day. There was a possibility that complete returns might upset the Ford lead, late returns in the main favoring Ferris. The missing precincts mostly are from rural sections.

James E. Davidson, Bay City shipbuilder and banker, was reelected republican national committeeman. William A. Comstock, was elected to one of the vacancies on the democratic national committee but the contest between Etta C. Boltwood and Evelyn S. Mershon for the other place was undecided. Mrs. Boltwood having a lead of forty-two votes on returns from 2,060 precincts.

The vote for presidential preference on the republican ticket from 2,105 precincts, was:

Coolidge 172,066; Johnson 76,114; William G. Simpson 6,700. The democratic presidential vote from 2,060 precincts was: Ford 30,676; Ferris 28,143.

DILL RENEWS ASSAULT ON THEODORE ROOSEVELT

Washington, April 8.—While Senator Dill, democrat, Washington, was renewing his assault on Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, in the senate today, in connection with the oil leases, Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, the oil committee prosecutor, was laying plans to bring the long inquiry to a close.

Senator Walsh said he hoped to end the investigation this week, as examination of the seven witnesses now under subpoena would not consume a great deal of time. Several of these will be heard tomorrow and the others will be placed on the stand as rapidly as they reach Washington.

In returning to his attack on Assistant Secretary Roosevelt, Senator Dill drew what he characterized as a contrast between Mr. Roosevelt's testimony before the committee regarding the oil leases and statements he made concerning them in a recent letter to state Senator Campbell, of New York, which was read to the senate last week by Senator Wadsworth, republican, New York.

Replying to Senator Stanley, democrat, Kentucky, Senator Dill said that Mr. Roosevelt would be recalled before the oil committee and questioned as to his knowledge of the organization of the Mammoth Oil Co., which operated Teapot Dome, and whether he charged anything for his services in connection with the organization or that or any other Sinclair company.

"If you send for Mr. Roosevelt," Senator Stanley said, "you may have a pleasant surprise."

Senator Pepper, republican, Pennsylvania, broke into the debate to inquire whether Senator Dill brought any charges against Mr. Roosevelt upon which he desired the senate to act. Senator Dill replied that he made no charges, but presented "the facts to let the country draw its own conclusions."

The Pennsylvania senator said that if Mr. Dill's charges were as "narrow as his explanation," there was nothing for republican senators to do but register their dissent from the views he had expressed.

FALL RIVER COTTON MILLS TO RESUME OPERATIONS

Fall River, Mass., April 8—Announcement was made this morning from the office of the American Printing Company that the seven big mills of the cotton goods division would resume operations next Monday, April 14th, for a period of at least two weeks. The cotton goods division, better known as the Fall River Iron Works before consolidation with the American Printing Company, will give employment to over three thousand operatives. The plant shut down on December 22nd and has since remained idle. The announcement from this corporation marks the first big break in the extensive curtailment among local textile corporations, which ha sbeen under way for the past six months.

While the duration of the period of operation is specified as two weeks, it is believed that if market conditions improve during that period, it may be decided to continue full time operations, although officials at the plant refuse to make further statement than the formal announcement of a resumption of operations for two weeks.

NORWICH BULLETIN
91 Church St. Telephone 1062

The April term of the criminal side of the Windham county superior court opened in this city at 11.25 o'clock, Tuesday morning, Judge John P. Kellogg on the bench. Rev. F. C. Williams, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, offered prayer.

The list of criminal cases on the docket totals thirty-eight, and includes twenty-six continued and twelve new cases which will be acted upon at the present session of court.

The case of Cyrus H. Green, of Manchester, N. H., formerly of Pomfret, charged with obtaining money under false pretenses was the first taken up. State's Attorney Charles W. Searls said that he had been informed by William Staub of Worcester, Mass., counsel for the defendant, that Green could not be present on account of illness. Attorney Staub asked for a continuance of the case, stating that his client would plead not guilty to the charge when it was taken up. The case was continued until Thursday next.

Members of the bar interested in cases on the present docket were then called into conference by State's Attorney Searls. The conference was held in session when court adjourned for luncheon at 12.50. The recess lasted until 2 o'clock when the cases of three local men were heard.

Daniel Killeurey, Jr., Maurice Griffin and Daniel Brennan were charged with breach of the peace, February 23, in Windham; they pleaded guilty. Attorney Searls said that in his investigations he had found that the three local men were bound over under statutory burglary and breach of the peace charges but felt satisfied that their intentions were not theft. He asked for leniency in the application of sentences. A suggestion that they be given thirty days in jail, with execution of judgment suspended met with the approval of the court. With a cautioning, the young men were placed on probation for a year. They were represented by Attorney King.

A plea of not guilty was entered by Philip Pagano of this city, charged on two counts, having liquor in his possession with intent to sell, February 6, and selling liquor February 6. Attorney King who represented the defendant elected to have the case tried by a jury.

Joseph Moriarty, charged with intoxication, was discharged on the payment of the costs. The case of Stanley Wojick, charged with rape was nolled, Stanislab Milas, charged with theft elected to be tried by jury. The case against Fred Morin, charged with violation of Section 6480 will come up for trial before the court Thursday.

Court adjourned at 3.40 o'clock until Thursday morning at 11 o'clock.

An automobile driven from New Jersey would probably agree with anyone that there is plenty of water in Connecticut, at least during the last few days of flooded rivers. The car became mired on the Flanders road which connects the Hartford-Willimantic highway with the South Coventry road, some time within the past two days. The machine had apparently been left over night at the spot, some hundred yards from the Josephine Marine home and when the driver returned the following day (Monday) all he could see of his automobile was part of the top. The water in the branch of the Willimantic river which flows nearby had risen to such an extent that over two hundred feet of the road was several feet under water. A powerful truck and several men with block and tackle worked to salvage the car Tuesday and finally succeeded in pulling it out of the watery grave. It is likely that the car is rusted and ruined.

The stockholders of the Willimantic Trust company met in annual session Tuesday morning. The resources of the company total two million dollars, the market value of securities held on March 31, last being $48,-92.18 in excess of the book value. During the past year there has been no change in the capital. The surplus and undivided profit at the close of the year was $101,256.67, making a total capital, surplus and undivided profit of $175,256.67. The profits of the bank from April 1, 1923 to March 31, 1924, after deducting all expenses and making all provisions for taxes, interest, etc., have been exceptionally good. Dividends of eight per cent. have been paid on the capital stock for the past few years.

The board of directors comprises: Clifford J. Alpaugh, Charles W. Alpaug, John E. Brick, Arthur H. Benton, E. Frank Bugbee, Henry A. Bugbee, Dan H. Curtis, George S. Elliott, Leslie F. Hartson, Robert T. Jewett, Fred D. Jordan, Lewallyn J. Storrs, Charles A. Wheeler and Henry R. Woodward. John R. Pickett was elected to the directorate as a new member. The following officers were elected by the directors: Fred D. Jordan, president; E. Frank Bugbee and Clifford J. Alpaugh, vice-presidents; Herbert W. Huber, treasurer; George H. Hurley, secretary; Harold J. Mason and John H. Wilcox, tellers. The capital stock is to be increased $100,000 by the issuance of new shares.

On account of the large volume of water in the Willimantic river which made the wheel pit useless, the Quidnick-Windham company plant was closed all day Tuesday. The water had risen to within a few inches of the window sills of No. 1 mill of the American Thread company, Monday night, but was somewhat lower on Tuesday morning. Along the banks of the Fenton river in the town of Ashford, several country roads are reported under water and impassible.

The office of president was conferred on Harry W. Standish, at the weekly meeting of the Rotary club, Tuesday noon. Mr. Standish succeeds James P. Mustard. Other officers elected for the year are: John F. Ahern, vice president; Charles W. Hill, secretary; Herbert W. Hubert, treasurer; Aime J. Martineau, sergeant-at-arms. John Ahern and Henry M. Congdon were chosen song leaders.

Smith, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., who delivered a short address on work among the boys of this community.

Mrs. Clara Upton was not positive whether she was guilty or not, when presented in the police court here on Tuesday morning on a charge of intoxication. She at first pleaded guilty and then decided that she would like to have the case continued for a few days for reasons of her own. The woman was reminded that her police record was a very long one and that she should have made arrangements to have the case continued before she pleaded guilty. Three empty "Jamica Ginger Double Strength" bottles were introduced as evidence against the accused. Judge Curtis Dean imposed a sentence of thirty days in Brooklyn jail, which was put into effect.

While commenting on the floods reported from practically every section of the state, Chief MacArthur, of the police department, suddenly discovered that he had a miniature flood of his own to think about. A pipe had become clogged in the cell room of the police station and when the water was turned on it overflowed and inundated the entire concrete floor of the room. Plumbers were summoned and after some time succeeded in freeing the pipe of the obstruction.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Once again Danielson has a great record of freedom from fire losses to boast of—probably approaching the record of any community the size of Danielson in New England. Chief Engineer A. Putnam Woodward of the fire department reports that the losses for the fiscal year ending April 1 total only $30—a fraction of a cent per capita.

In the course of the past year there have been numerous alarms for fires in the borough, but no one of these caused more than trifling damage. Some of the fires easily might have developed into dangerous propositions, but prompt response by the fire department in every instance has kept the losses at what appears to be an irreducible minimum.

During the year, the fire department has responded to some alarms for fires outside the borough limits, at Elmville, where a mill was destroyed, for instance, but these fires are not included in the borough losses; and do not rightfully belong there.

With a motorized department the firemen have been able to make a wonderful showing for several years past. The record of remarkable freedom from fire losses seems to warrant the assumption that investment in the motor vehicles that make up the department has paid big returns in property saved from serious damage or destruction. Minutes saved in getting to and at a fire are recognized as all important in meeting the situation. With the equipment with which the department is now outfitted such saving in time is possible.

Enthusiasm and ability in the fire department are also great factors in achieving the splendid showing. The men who man the apparatus are entitled to great consideration from the public they serve so effectively—and as volunteers, not as a paid department.

At the Congregational church this (Wednesday) evening Prof. M. A. Honline is to begin a course of lectures on psychology and pedagogy. The course is to continue every evening this week. This course of lectures is expected to prove of special interest. Prof. Honline, who has been speaking at various places in this state, has the reputation of being a very lucid and effective lecturer.

Owners of posted land are this early in the season complaining that their warning signs are being disregarded by trout fishermen—not by all the fishermen, but by a percentage of them. It is this disregard for what is a clear right of owners of land that makes the fishing areas more limited from year to year and result in many handicaps to outings enjoyed by so many people. Those who are expending time, money and effort to restocking the brooks in the territory are appealing to the fishermen as a whole to seek permission of the owners if they would fish posted land and if that is not obtainable to fish elsewhere.

Members of the Service battery are resuming drills after a month's period when there has been relaxation from this duty. The company will drill regularly from now on in preparation for the usual two weeks' period of summer service in camp. As has been the case for the past two years, the Service battery, with other units of the 192nd field artillery, will go to Camp Eustis, Va., late in August. This is a trip that member of the battery look forward to with anticipation each year. The majority of the personnel of the battery are now familiar with this southern camp, but for others in the command next August's trip will be their first to the south.

At the annual business meeting of the borough, next Wednesday, electors will be called upon to pass upon an improved lighting system for the borough. This proposal has the approval and support of the chamber of commerce. A plan submitted by the Danielson and Plainfield Gas and Electric company will probably be presented at the meeting for the consideration of the voters. This plan is more comprehensive than the one that was defeated at a special borough meeting early last winter. If adopted, it will practically double the street lighting facilities of the borough at no material increase over the present lighting costs—probably an increase of $1,500 annually. Such organized support as the better street lighting system has is not in the special interest of any groups, but along the lines of making Danielson more attractive, better lighted than it is at present and with a view to boosting the community's development.

Even the heavy rain of the week has not availed to clear away all the snow that lines the sides of what is known as the North road, leading out of East Killingly past the school and on toward the Putnam line. As late as Sunday afternoon there were banks of snow four feet in height along the side of this highway, which was practically obliterated in the March blizzard and had to be dug out. This route, little used for general travel, though of great convenience to residents in that territory and in constant use by them, is not likely to be dried out for another month.

Low temperature and snow squalls were included in the disagreeable weather of Tuesday in Danielson.

OCCUM AND VERSAILLES

A call for volunteers was sounded at 10.30 Monday evening by the ringing of the mill bell at the plant of the Totokett Manufacturing company, for the purpose of getting the manufactured goods of the company out of the danger zone caused by the high water of the Willimantic river. The water reached the highest point for nearly a score of years flooding the wheel pits, cloth room, necessitating the taking off of belts and throwing off the lighting system. At 11.30 the water began to lower. Damage to manufactured goods was small. The company was unable to run its plant on Tuesday.

Residents of lower Occum watching the rising water as well as listening to a story being circulated that a dam to the north had given way, lined their automobiles on the highway as well as picking up a few valuable personal effects for a quick get-away, had the danger increased.

THE POWER COMPANY'S OFFERS

In the reference of the offers of the Eastern Connecticut Power company to a special committee for investigation and consideration the court of common council took action in accord with expectation.

It is now to be supposed that it will make a careful analysis of the proposals, study the conditions as prevail under the existing municipal ownership and be able to show from the standpoint of the city whether it is advisable to dispose of the lighting plant, or whether there in good business in purchasing instead of producing electrical energy.

As to the latter there seems to be little question, if the city can be safeguarded as to an adequate supply at all times. The difference in the cost of buying and producing can well be turned to the betterment of the existing rates, a relief to which the owners of the plant seem to be entitled. We are now buying part of our electrical energy. The advantage of such favorable terms for the whole load cannot be disregarded, especially since the demands are steadily increasing and it is already impossible to meet the demands for electric current made upon the lighting plant.

The study of the power company's offer to purchase and its comparison with the results obtained under municipal guidance, both as to financial and other benefits, should make it possible for an easy decision to be made as to what course should be followed relative to the proposition to sell.

It doesn't rest with the council, or the council's committee to make the final decision as to the matter of sale. That would necessarily have to be passed upon by the citizens themselves, but it is possible for the council or its committee to know whether it is advisable for the city to entertain the idea of selling or whether it is for its best interests to retain possession. What is called for now are the cold facts in the case.

REMOVING CROSSINGS.

By a decision of the supreme court it has been established that a state cannot force a railroad doing an interstate business to eliminate grade crossings. This is contrary to what has been believed and done in the past. States and railroads have been working hand in hand under state laws for the removal of such danger spots, although in Connecticut for several years the public utilities commission has suspended that requirement because of the weakened financial condition under which the railroads have been laboring.

The supreme court decision means that state laws requiring such work are ineffective, but it doesn't mean that the same kind of cooperation cannot be carried on through mutual understandings. Railroads are desirous of seeing the crossing fatalities eliminated if possible, but reduced at any rate. They know that there are advantages in abolishing some crossings, and there is reason to believe that they will be willing to join hands with the state in continuing this work when the needed funds are available and when conditions warrant their expenditure for such a purpose. The importance of ending certain of the danger spots cannot fail to be understood by railroads and while the latest court decision ends the ordering of the railroads to do such work it doesn't bar or interfere with operations of that kind under agreements.

What the decision does do is to impose upon the users of railroad crossings a realization of the responsibility which rests upon their shoulders in protecting themselves. It is the way in which railroad crossings are used that is responsible for a large degree of the danger. If there is respect for the locomotive and an unwillingness to try conclusions therewith it is possible in most instances to avoid accidents. Observance of the warnings, respect for the signals or a little attention given to the signs will prevent the increasing of that already too long list of deaths at such places.

In the meantime crossing eliminations can go on but that work must be done under different arrangements.

IMMIGRANT LEGISLATION.

It is not long before the present restrictive immigration law expires. It was adopted with the purpose of meeting conditions that were known at the time and with the realization that they were subject to change. It was insisted that the time for putting up the bars had come and the action was taken for a limited period.

Since the restrictive law has been in effect it is recognized how effective it has been in keeping out a vast throng of aliens who would have been entering this country because of war conditions which had been encountered elsewhere. There was not a demand for unlimited immigration. The country was not prepared to absorb all that were anxious to come. There was not such a demand for cheap labor that the dropping of the bars could be encouraged. In fact there was so much unemployment here that for a time it demonstrated the value of the inventing an increase therefor.

Either the existing restrictive law must be extended or else a substitute must be adopted. There can be no thought of going back to the conditions that prevailed before the war. To the Johnson immigration bill there have been certain objections raised. There are those who would have the whole matter made the subject for a congressional investigation. That would mean an unknown delay which would probably not prevent any additional facts bearing on the matter to what are now known. It isn't delay that called for at this time but action, and action that will mean the serving of the best interests of the country at the present time and so far as can now be judged, for the future.

During the enforcement of the present law it has been found that there were features which needed elimination or amendment. These must of necessity get attention in the framing of new legislation, but this is the time for meeting the situation and national welfare what should serve as the guide.

THE RIGHT EYE.

Because of the campaign which the registrar of motor vehicles in Massachusetts has been waging against those under the influence of liquor who persist in driving automobiles, much interest has been caused by the case of the Chicopee judge who was arrested on that very charge, who subsequently pleaded guilty and was fined $125.

It clearly disclosed a deplorable situation. Not only did the registrar deem it advisable to suspend the judge's driving license but it took such action before the continuance case was disposed of in the court.

Under the conditions, which have been revealed in connection with this case there was no other logical course than that the judge should retire from his place on the bench. Steps had been taken to bring about his removal but the resignation made them unnecessary and there was of course no hesitancy in accepting it.

Much is expected from a judge. He is one who is looked to to show obedience to the law. When he sets an example that is in direct defiance of the law and in so doing threatens the safety of the users of the highway it is not difficult to realize that he is grossly unfit for the position he occupies. He not only creates a bad impression and example but he cannot be expected to administer the law and dispense justice. Chicopee is fortunate to be rid of him, and none too much credit can be given to the state registrar of motor vehicles for the campaign which he has been carrying on for the proper penalizing of the drivers under the influence of liquor who persist in endangering the lives of others.

ALBANIAN BANDITS.

There is nothing thus far in connection with the murder of the two Americans in Albania to indicate that they were killed because they were subjects of this country. It doesn't appear that they had in fact given any cause for their murder. Rather does it appear that they have been subject to the inclination of desperate bands which are known to operate in Albania, and it serves to illustrate anew the desperate chances that are taken by those who undertake to travel through that country.

Albanian desperadoes are notorious. Not long ago, during the period when so much friction was aroused between Italy and Greece over the murder of the boundary commission members, it was intimated that those responsible for those deaths were Albanian bandits. As to the case of the Americans there can be no question. It was never determined who killed the Italians, but Greece paid the penalty for it.

Whether it will be possible to run down the guilty parties in connection with the murder of the Americans remains to be seen. This country will look well to the interests of its subjects and for its own welfare Albania ought to be expected to put forth its best efforts to run down the guilty and administer the deserved punishment.

Banditry conditions in Albania have not just been revealed by this double murder, but that small country of tribesmen ought to be inspired thereby to set about such a cleanup as has been needed for a long time. Much more might be expected in such a situation were condition not what they are in that country.

ALL JOKING ASIDE

"He's just the same at this game as he is at bridge," said the young lawyer who was sitting out a dance with the pretty young matron. "Terrible!"

"Oh, I don't know," said the pretty matron, "I think he's getting on pretty well."

"There are ten hundred men walking the streets of this town barefoot because they failed to lead out trumps," went on the young lawyer gloomily. "And he knows it. But does he lead out trumps? No!"

"Well, I'd say that he was leading out trumps with Virginia," said the young matron. "Wouldn't you?"

"Horrible!" said the young lawyer. "Absolutely the limit. All joking aside he's terrible. Last night he came and sat on my bed for half an hour and gassed about her. 'Look here,' I asked him, 'would you invest in oil stocks after only ten days of investigation?' He admitted that he wouldn't. But he would take on this girl for life."

"She's a very attractive girl," said the young matron.

"Nice little girl, very fine girl. I'm willing to admit that," said the young lawyer, "but I once invested in oil stock after investigating for only two weeks and I've spent my time wrestling it ever since. How long has he investigated this candidate for his heart and hand? Ten days, barely ten days.

"No more romance would exist if you could have your way," said the young matron heatedly. "I can see that."

"Romance is nothing," said the young man. "I'm always going to be a bachelor."

"Serve you right," said the young matron. "And you're cranky because your friend Ed isn't going to. He's an attractive man and she's an attractive girl and I had a long talk with him last night myself. I told him to go ahead because she was popular and he'd have to get her on a rush or——"

The young lawyer turned to regard the pretty matron with a long, surprised stare. "You too!" he said.

"Yes, I did," she went on happily. "I told him that I had known John only six days before we were engaged, and three weeks before we were married, and that we've been simply ideally happy. That was the main thing I liked about John—he was so impetuous, and he wouldn't let me say no, and it was all so romantic that before I knew it we were married and living happily ever afterward, except for the buttons on John's sport shirts, which I always forget to sew on, and which he hates so, and acts quite cross about. But just the same we've been very, very happy, and John tells me every day that he's much happier than when he was a stupid old bachelor sitting around at dances, being nice to everybody else that was trying to get married."

"It would you invest in oil stocks that you'd only——" interrupted the young lawyer feebly.

"I sure I don't know," said the young woman. "I don't think I'd invest in oil stocks at all, and, besides, John is not an oil stock or anything of it. If she had been I should not have advised Ed so strongly to propose to her tonight."

"What!" gasped the young lawyer. "Propose to her tonight? All joking aside, he'll probably do it."

"Yes, and then you, like a nice benevolent soul, can give up your apartment to them, because Ed will have to leave you anyway, and you'll probably be getting married yourself. If you gave them the apartment just for the honeymoon I think it would be enough."

"Yes, and where will I go?" said the despondent young lawyer. "I don't think she'll accept him, anyway. She's probably just stringing him along. All girls do that. They're never serious. Poor chap, it'll be hard on him, but if he will do these foolish things he'll have to suffer for them."

"Here he comes now," said the young matron absolutely. "I wonder whether he's done it?"

"Certainly not," said the young lawyer. "All joking aside, he wouldn't be so silly as to plunge like that."

A beaming young man, looking more handsome than he had ever looked previously in all his 26 years of looking handsome, came rushing up and seized the young matron by the hands to exclaim: "She said 'yes.' Isn't it wonderful!"

"Oh, Ed, I'm simply tickled pink," exclaimed the young matron. "How wonderful, and when are you going to be married?"

"All joking aside," said the young lawyer looking at his friend with a gloomy face through which a smile slowly broke, "you're terrible." Chicago News.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

M. Louis Loucheur, who, as Minister of Commerce in the new French cabinet, will be charged with the task of lowering the cost of living, is regarded as well qualified for the job by reason of his big business capacities. His unusual executive ability was demonstrated during the war when he served as Minister of Munitions and during his service as Minister of Reconstruction. M. Loucheur is a native of Lisbaix. After passing from the Ecole Polytechnique into an artillery regiment in which he spent a year, he entered the service of one of the great French railway companies, in which he remained in various capacities for 18 years. Not finding enough scope for his activities, he left the company and turned his attention to public work. For 12 years thereafter he was engaged in carrying out a succession of first-rate importance, both abroad and in France. He obtained the construction of a number of railways in the Turkish Empire, in the Balkans, and in Serbia, and built the Olonets railway in Russia.

PERSHING'S GREAT SORROW

Born in a shanty, four miles from a frontier boom-town, John J. Pershing slowly earned his way to success and happiness—then endured one of the greatest sorrows cast upon a man.

As a lad, he attended the Laclede, Mo., one-room school. Neighbors said he was 'just an uneventful boy.'

Savings from his salary of $40 a month, less board, took him to Kirksville Normal School. His father was Laclede's postmaster, the office was robbed, and young Pershing went home to give his savings to help make good the loss.

Taking the examination for appointment to West Point, just to learn, he won by a point. At West Point he made a record in military actics.

In Indian campaigns, he won the title of captain. Instructor at West Point when the Spanish-American war began, he accepted the reduction to regimental quartermaster, just to go, and his conduct in Cuba won high praise. Quelling insurrections in the Philippines, he again earned the captaincy, and President's praise.

His wedding to Senator Warren's accomplished daughter was attended by the president, other government officials and Washington society. Three years later he was made a brigadier-general. As military governor of the Philippines, he won distinction.

Success was smiling and the future looked bright. At Fort Bliss, near the Mexican border, he prepared to bring his family. Then came the telegram that his wife and three daughters had been suffocated in a night fire at the Presidio, San Francisco. Friends feared, for a while that he would lose his mind, but he never relaxed control of himself.

Commander-in-Chief of the American Expeditionary Forces, he led his troops to victory, was honored by his and other countries, and, today, as Chief-of-Staff of the United States Army, is one of the most popular military men in the world.

SULPHUR, SICILY AND CIVILIZATION

The United States is the world's greatest consumer of sulphur. Scientists maintain that, in the twentieth century, a nation's consumption of sulphur is a true measure of progress in civilization. Sulphur figures in practically every important manufacturing process.

"Not only does the United States consume more sulphur than any other nation; it has become since the war the outstanding producer of sulphur," says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society. "Back of this rise to preeminence," continues the bulletin, "is a world drama between machinery and muscle, in which the United States and Sicily played the leading roles.

"The United States, armed with steam pipes, won. Sicily, actually starving, was about to give up when the American sulphur producers made an agreement to let Sicily serve the entire Italian market and ship a certain amount to other countries. It was an echo of the industrial revolution of the 18th century when machines began to do men's work.

"Sicily in certain localities still mines sulphur as it was mined hundreds of years ago; even as the Aztecs mined gold and silver by laboriously carrying ore up in baskets. In some places the old smelting process is in use. This consists of erecting a pile of sulphur igniting it and letting the sulphur's own heat melt the ore. Only sixty per cent of the mineral is recovered by this crude process and the product is impure. Better mines have ones in which the sulphur is melted and in some cases it is taken off in a volatile form, cooled to a liquid, and then to a solid block called 'solfogreggio.'

"Driven by competition Sicilians used children in the mines. Child-labor presented itself in its most horrible aspects as children of seven and eight years tigged at baskets of ore in ill-made mines. Many were permanently deformed by the burdens. Gases engendered by sulphur compounds make the mines unusually dangerous.

"Sulphur is found in paying quantities in many parts of the United States, but the richest deposits were discovered in Louisiana and Texas, near the coast. Here thousands of dollars and many lives were lost in wrestling sulphur from nature. Quicksand, the great enemy of miners, was always on the job until finally necessity mothered invention. Frasch, a mining engineer, had an idea, which revolutionized the sulphur industry.

"Over a known sulphur 'dome' 4,000 feet in diameter, a derrick looking for all the world like an oil derrick, was erected and a shaft forced down 1,000 feet to the sulphur. Three pipes were put down the shaft and in one superheated water under pressure was sent to do mank's work. Sulphur melted at 240 degrees Fahrenheit so it dissolved in the water. Hot air under compression was forced down a second pipe and soon hot water with liquefied sulphur came spouting up the third pipe. The stream from a sulphur well is directed into bins where the water is taken off leaving the mineral more than 99 per cent pure. Steam shovels load it direct to freight cars. Economies of this process excluded the competition of cheapest Sicilian labor. The United States now produces 1,300,000 tons annually, almost nine times as much as Sicily mines.

"If the world had known that a nation could be judged by its sulphur, England might have realized at once the American colonies' importance. The first ore shipment ever made from the United States was sulphur. When Captain John Smith established the Jamestown settlement in 1607, the colonists spent more time hunting gold than planting crops. Ships starting back for England filled their holds with what we now call 'fool's gold.' The 'precious' yellow mineral the colonists unearthed was sulphur; they sent pyrites back to England."

A Little Talk on Thrift

THRIFT IN SCHOOLS

It is a matter of public interest that marked progress has been made during the school year now drawing to a close in the matter of thrift education. In all parts of the country both urban and rural, schools are introducing thrift in their curricula.

These results have come after eight years of research and industry upon the part of the committee on thrift education of the National Council of Education. The chairman of this committee recently reported a widespread and growing interest in thrift education throughout the nation.

It is to the credit of this committee that definite and concrete courses of study have been mapped out which are receiving practical application.

In other words, thrift in the schools has arrived. From now on, year after year, the work will grow in results. More and more schools will take it up, and a substantial foundation thus will be laid for thrift practices by future generations.

It is worthy of special attention that in the courses of study mapped out by the educational committee, thrift is given its broadest application. It is the thrift that means eliminating waste. It is the thrift of efficiency and progress.

Unfortunately there has been encouragement given to the belief that thrift is merely saving money, but the children of this nation are now being taught the broader principles of real thrift. The results will be that future generations will not only have a better understanding of the value of saving money, but will have at the same time an intelligent grasp of the rightful uses to which their savings should be placed.

It is a matter worthy of public pride that the United States is the first country in which the subject of thrift has been given a definite place in the work of the public schools.—American Society for Thrift.

Stories That Recall Others

Jealous

A visitor came to call on Bobby's and Mary's mother. They were permitted to sit in the room with the guest, but not to mix in the conversation.

"That child surely has wonderful big eyes," said the visitor of Mary.

"Bobby (advancing toward the visitor making eyes): "I got big eyes, too."

Why They Were Large.

"Why they are two sizes too big," said a friend.

"No, they are not," he replied, "I roll and tumble around so at night that I tear them off unless I get them large."

EXAMINATION INTO THE SHIPPING BOARD AFFAIRS

Washington, April 8.—Efforts to establish the feasibility of direct operation by the government of the merchant fleet or continuance under a modified form of the present managing operators' contract marked the second day's examination today of Chairman O'Connor by the special house committee inquiring into shipping board affairs.

Representative Davis, democrat, Tennessee, committee "prosecutor," tried to establish whether it was not a fact that the board continued operation of its vessels under the Mo-4 contract, under which operating agents are guaranteed a fixed percentage of gross shipping receipts, because of opposition to direct government control on the part of private ship operators, newspapers, and "some other people."

"I suppose," said Mr. O'Connor, "there were all kinds of sentiment used by the operators and everybody else against government operation. Personally I would not care what the operators said, and I want to say I believe this investigation is going to be the best thing that ever happened for the merchant marine."

The only uncertainty in the displacement by the board of the present operating policy in favor of direct government operation, Mr. O'Connor asserted, "was the traffic—whether we could cut out the present traffic organization and build up one of our own.

"If we took vessels away from one of our operators," he continued, "he would immediately go into business with some foreign line and solicit freight for them. It would be years before we could get him back to the American merchant marine."

"Would not contracts with the railroads give you agents to solicit and receive traffic throughout the United States?" asked Representative Davis.

"That would be the most wonderful thing we could do," Mr. O'Connor replied.

Mr. Davis asserted, however, that the board's managing operators had failed to follow this course.

The committee prosecutor then pointed to the "danger" involved in the letting of stevedoring and other contracts through managing operators of board vessels who control subsidiary companies, but Mr. O'Connor stated the fleet corporation had control over this business through awards on competitive bids.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR HUNGARY

Boston, April 8.—Jeremiah Smith, Jr., Boston lawyer, who has been appointed league of nations high commissioner for Hungary, is a member of the law firm of Herrick, Smith, Donald and Farley. He was graduated from Harvard in 1893 and is the son of the late Jeremiah Smith, professor of law at Harvard and the grandson of Governor Jeremiah Smith of New Hampshire.

Mr. Smith assisted in the organization of the Chinese consortium and in the adjustment of the Mexican national debt. He served on the war relief commission of the Rockefeller Foundation, was a captain in the quartermaster corps attached to the staff of General Charles G. Dawes during the World war and later was one of the financial advisers of the American mission to negotiate peace.

WAGE INCREASE FOR WESTERN RAILROAD MEN

Chicago, April 8.—A wage increase estimated at about $5,000,000, less compensation accruing from changes in schedules, are provided for in an agreement covering train service employes of some 44 railroads and nearly fifty subsidiaries, it was announced today.

All but six roads west of the Mississippi were parties to the agreement, and were represented by a committee of ten general managers. The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors were represented by L. E. Sheppard, W. N. Doak, president and vice president of the respective organizations, and the joint executive committee.

Some 80,000 employes are affected. The gross increase is about 5 per cent.

NERVOUS & HALF-SICK WOMEN

Relieved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

These Three Letters Prove It

Lowell, Mass.—"I am sending you a few lines to let you know what good your medicine has done for me. I want you to let every one know that it has helped me in nervous troubles. I have four children and you know there is a lot to do where children are. They would come in from school and they would start telling me about their little troubles but I could not stand it. I had to send them away. I could not even walk on the street alone I was so nervous. I found one of your books and read it and then I saw in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got it and had taken one bottle when I saw a change in myself. I was surprised. The children can talk all they want to now and it does not bother me. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOSEPH LEMIRE, 34 South Street, Lowell, Mass.

Felt Like A New Woman

Springfield, Missouri.—"For four or five months I was run-down, nervous, my back ached and I did not feel like doing a thing. Sometimes my legs ached and felt like they would break and I had a hurting in my sides. I had been reading in the newspapers the letters of other women who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the advertising of it appealed to me so I bought some and saw results in almost no time. I had hardly been able to do my own work and after taking the Vegetable Compound I felt like a new woman. I recommend it to my friends who have troubles like I did, and hope they will find the same results."—Mrs. M. CARPENTER, 607 W. Chase Street, Springfield, Missouri.

40 Years Old, Feels Like 20

Hagerstown, Md. — "I was very bad off with backache, a bearing-down feeling in my body and a pain in my left side. I could not be on my feet at times and once I was so bad I walked bent over to one side for three weeks. My sister read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me a bottle. I got so much relief that I took more until I was well. I am 40 years old and feel like 20. I am sure this medicine will help all women."—Mrs. MARY E. SANDY, 436 W. Franklin Street, Hagerstown, Md.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?" 98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

LEGION STATE COMMANDER TELLS OF INJUSTICE TO SERVICE MEN

Eugene P. Armstrong of Waterbury, state commander of the American Legion, paid an official visit to Robert O. Fletcher Post, No. 4, of Norwich Tuesday evening and delivered a most interesting address on What the Legion Stands For. The meeting was an open one and included in the audience were Mayor Milo R. Waters, Alderman Patrick F. Sweeney, John R. O'Rourke, Secretary of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce, members of Richard William Morgan Post No. 55 of Mystic, members of the Ladies' Auxiliary to Richard W. Morgan Post and members of the American Legion Post at Attleboro, Mass.

In opening his remarks State Commander Armstrong who formerly resided in this city, touched briefly on the subject of adjusted compensation and the reasons why over 90 per cent. of the ex-service men believed in it and felt that it was due them. He then took up his subject of the evening, What the American Legion Stands For, saying the work of the legion was simply that of service, that being the sole reason for its existence. In this state, he said, there is the bureau of service promotion, subdivided into district service bureaus, each with an officer presiding. Then comes the post service officer and committee. When an ex-service man applies for aid his case is taken up by the post service officer and if no satisfaction can be obtained the case goes to the district officer and then as a final place goes to the state officials for settlement if no other branches can accomplish it. The way of the board is final, for it has the last word on the case.

Then there is the hospital advisory board to aid the ex-service men. The legion, said Commander Armstrong feels that the service men are not getting a square deal. Some people seem to feel that the government is taking care of the veterans and that there is no reason for the existence of the American Legion. There is a reason however, and a good one, for some rulings of the Veterans Bureau are unjust and the Legion is working to remedy them. For instance the bureau is bound by regulations which say that a man who develops tuberculosis within three years after discharge will be cared for but the man making application after that period cannot be said to trace his illness to service, and Uncle Sam will not take care of that man. We already have 2,000 such cases men who have become tubercular, but too late for any aid.

Then there is the ruling on mental claims which also must be made within three years. When a claim is made the government looks into the ancestry of that man and if one case of mental twist is found that man's case is called hereditary and no help is given. The legion is trying to increase that to five years and would like to see no limit made for these cases, for many men who were in the trenches received jolts that may not show up for years.

In citing a case Commander Armstrong told of one man having tuberculosis. The veterans bureau requested affidavits ,two from people knowing him before he went into the service, to swear he was not tubercular prior to enlistment, and two from men in the service who knew the sufferer. This is unjust for very few ex-servic emen today, know where their buddies of 1917 are living and it becomes impossible many times to find two witnesses, and the request for aid is denied.

Men are turned out of hospitals with only money enough to get them home and 30 per cent. of the men at Allingtown Hospital are now without compensation, their claims still pending.

Still people are saying everything for the disabled and I can tell you that all that is being done for the disabled is being done through efforts of the American Legion, the laws passed to aid them only coming at the whiplash of the legion.

Rehabilitation is not as the legion would have it, and it is a fact that 30 per cent of those rehabilitated in our state are not following the trades they trained for. One example, a man wanted to be a tool maker and a company offered to teach him and also teach him mathematics. The bureau said no, he must have three years training as a machinist, and the boy lost out.

The end is not yet for the peak of medical cases will not be reached before 1928 according to medical experts. Another case of injustice is the closing of a hospital in Boston and the sending of these men, who can be saved, to a hospital filled with hopeless cases.

In this country 700,000 men are standing by their comrades. Is it to be only these or can we expect 75 per cent of the four and one half million men in the service to bear their share of the work? In Connecticut 5,700 men are carrying out the work that should be the duty of 70,000. Service is the sole reason for our existance and we must sell the legion on this alone.

Service to our needy comrades will always be with us and we may be proud to say our state fund is a big help. General Edwards of Massachusetts said not long ago he wished his state had a state fund like ours. Many a man has been fed and aided until he could go back to his job through this fun. A Vermont boy discharged from a hospital appealed for aid and we took it up with his state and received an answer that they had no fund available as this man with others had received the state bonus.

In Connecticut we have the interest of a fund of $2,500,000 for this work, or roughly $2,000 a week, but many weeks we spend $4,500 and now we are borrowing to carry on this great work. Knowing of our fund the government often tries to send men to us that should be cared for by the Veterans Bureau. The government is shirking its own job. We in Connecticut do not want a state bonus, it is a federal obligation and nothing else.

The Legion is a dividend paying organization. Out west it downed the Red movement. The legion is building parks, skating rinks and playgrounds for kiddies, and in many cities is the leading organization in all civic enterprises. In our own state the legion is doing big work. At Norwalk the boys built a skating rink and are now out to build a playground for the children. That place has a legion membership of nearly 500 men. The legion posts work to get claims settled.

It is a vast work and one worthy of the support of every ex-service man and any one not behind the legion should get into the legion for they are shirking their responsibilities as ex-service men and citizens by leaving the work of aiding their disabled buddies to a few. When you figure that 85 per cent of the men we aid are not members of the legion you cannot help but know we are really out for all ex-service men, that we are not just in the game for ourselves. The American Legion stands for service and that what we are trying to sell to the ex-service men and public.

Following his address Commander Armstrong told of the work of posts, the Woman's Auxiliary, urged the forming of a Father's Council and then outlined the work of a County organization. At the close of the meeting a number of members signified their intentions of going to New London Sunday next to attend the County meeting called by Commander Armstrong. New London County is the last county in the state to organize and after Sunday big things are expected in posts in this country for Commander Armstrong will not be failed by the boys of his home town although Waterbury has a claim on him as their leader.

For a slogan Commander Armstrong left with the boys, "My Post is the Best in the State" a slogan, he said, which would make the post hum if members got back of it and he hoped Norwich would be a leader.

GAVE MASTERLY RECITAL AT PALACE THEATRE

Music lovers of Norwich and vicinity numbering over 1,000 were treated to a rare exhibition of mastery of the organ and of voice, Tuesday afternoon at 4.45 o'clock at the Palace theatre, when an organ and song recital was given by Frederick W Lester, organist, and Henry J. La Fontaine, baritone, under the auspices of the Woman's Guild of the United Congregational church.

From the opening number, Allegro Symphonique, by Salome, played in most masterly manner by Mr. Lester until the closing chord of the final selection had faded into the distance, Mr. Lester and Mr. La Fontaine, were accorded insistent applause, well merited through their efforts to interpret the difficult number of the program.

The opening group of selections by Mr. Lester served to bring out the pure tones of the large Moller organ of the theatre, this group including a range of notes from the full tone to the light harp accompaniment, a brilliant exhibition of mastery of the organ. For his second selection Mr. Lester selected Largo from Handel, included in the programme in compliment to the request of many admirers. And in this number the effects were perfect, his voicing of the melody being a most happy combination of stops. The use of the harp accompaniment in this number was unusual, rendering a delightful contrast to the heavier bars of the selection. In Fancy Free by Manney was the final number of the first group and at the close Mr. Lester was forced to bow his acknowledgment to the persistent applause of his audience.

As Mr. La Fontaine made his appearance for his first selection he was greeted by prolonged applause, a most pleasing greeting to the youthful singer. For his opening number, Mr. La Fontaine chose the baritone aria, "Pro Peccatis" from Rossini's famous Stabat Mater, a selection which demanded both vocal technique and interpretive ability. Essentially dramatic the selection infused this dramatic quality into the Lenten theme. Mr. La Fontaine's rendition of this number was exceedingly well executed, the ease with which he covered the unusually large range in the number, with its several high sustained notes, giving ample evidence of his mastery of technique. One was quickly conscious of his command of voice and ability to interpret with dramatic force. For an encore Mr. La Fontaine selected Del Riego's Ave Maria. This was the first time this beautiful number has been sung in Norwich and here again Mr. La Fontaine showed rich and powerful tones, giving promise of a brilliant future for this young soloist.

By far the outstanding number of Mr. Lester's Borowski group was Meditation—Elegie, which gave him opportunity to display his technique and ability to interpret and here again his efforts were greeted by tremendous applause from the audience quick to appreciate and enjoy his efforts to bring out all the beauty of this selection. Other numbers of this group were Prelude and Marche Solonelle from the First Suite, Borowski.

Quando a te lieta, from Faust by Gounod, was the first choice of Mr. La Fontaine for his final group and pathetic loveliness of the "Faust" aria was followed by My Love's an Arbutus, a tender love song which the soloist gave in masterly fashion. The closing number of this group was The Palms, by Faure, most appropriate to Eastertide. As in preceding numbers Mr. La Fontaine's ability to cover the wide range and the ease in which he sent his rich baritone voice up to the highest notes met approval of his audience and it was only after insistent applause that this young artist favored with his final encore, When the Roses Bloom by Reichardt. Mr. Lester at the organ in soft harp accompaniment gave a background which served to bring out the sweetness of this touching and tender selection, voice and organ blending into harmony of unusual quality.

In his closing group Mr. Lester included The Bells of St. Anne de Beaupre by Russell, sounding out the chimes of St. Anne church, Beaupre, Canada, and with delightful ease pictured in music the gathering of the faithful, chanting of the choir, Bonne St. Anne, prier pour nous, the procession, and closed with the picturing of the miracle and benediction bells, sounding faintly and sweetly from the distance.

In Springtime by Kinder, From the South, Gillette and Pomp and Circumstance by Elgar, provided a most fitting climax to the programme of rare distinction.

For the success of the recital the Woman's Guild is deeply grateful to Mr. Lester and Mr. La Fontaine for their brilliant programme and to the management of the Palace theatre for the assistance and aid given in making the recital a success.

The recital was arranged for by the committee of the guild, comprising members of the cabinet, Mrs. Charles Tyler Bard, president; the ways and means committee, Mrs. Arthur M. Thompson, chairman; Mrs. William H. Dawley, Mrs. Walter F. Lester, Mrs. Herbert M. Lerou and Mrs. Edwin W. Higgins and their committees.

The ushers for the recital were Nicholas Spellman, George H. Dolan, Thaddeus Leahy, Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, Alfred Bliven, John R. Tarrant, Archibald Mitchell, 4th, Herbert B. Cary, Jeremiah A. Desmond, John P. Corcoran and Arthur M. Thompson.

The recital marked the final appearance of Mr. La Fontaine in concerts in this city. He is now to take up the intensive study of concert singing, and, while he will continue to live in Norwich he will refrain from all public appearances until some future time. His many friends in Norwich look forward to his success in his chosen field and to say that he has the well wishes of his friends is to voice the sentiment of the entire community.

FIRE STATION CONTRACT FIGURES NOT DISCLOSED

The board of fire commissioners, of which Alderman Edward Crooke is chairman, opened bids Saturday night on the new fire station to be erected on Joseph Perkins road and awarded the contract to Patrick F. Sweeney, whose bid was the lowest of the four presented. The other bidders were the Peck-McWilliams company, W. S. Spencer and Carroll & Fenton, but what the figure of the successful bidder was the board declined to disclose Tuesday night.

It was stated that the contract figure does not include the plumbing and heating which are yet to be awarded.

The commissioners will be obliged to put a considerable sum into the estimates for the annual city meeting in June on account of the new fire station as there is only about $8,000 remaining of the $18,465. which was derived from the sale of the Main street station. The money that has been used from this has gone into the purchase of the pumper for Greeneville, repairs to the Greeneville station and the purchase of the lot on the Joseph Perkins road.

BALTIC BOY DROWNED, BODY NOT RECOVERED

Wildor Brunelle, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Brunelle, No. 759 Main street, Baltic, was drowned in the Shetucket river at Baltic, Tuesday afternoon about 5 o'clock. The boy was playing on a wall along the river bank on the southerly side of the grist mill and lost his balance. Miss Phyllis Bell saw the boy when he lost his balance and fell into the river. Mrs. George Bell notified Mrs. John J. McGuire and she notified First Selectman Raymond J. Jodoin. Mr. Jodoin quickly assembled a number of men who grappled for the body but up to a late hour Tuesday night the body had not been recovered.

The boy attended the parochial school during the day and left the school about 4 o'clock and attended choir rehearsal at St. Mary's church. Later he was in the Baltic postoffice and received some mail. It was but a few minutes later that he went to his death in the river. He leaves his parents and two sisters.

MORIN TAKES MEASURE OF BARBER IN EASTERN CONN. BOWLING MATCH

Mike Morin surprised all of eastern Connecticut last evening when he took seven out of eleven strings from Frankie Barber of Danielson in the Eastern Connecticut bowling championship tourney match at Taftville. That Morin should turn the trick was a surprise to the bowling fans for Barber was the favorite, having beaten Fillmore 6 and 5 in his last match and Fillmore having beaten Morin 9 to 3. The dopesters figured that Morin was due to fall before the Danielson bowler, but the fates decreed otherwise.

Barber was hardly in his usual form and his showing against Morin was a most disheartening exhibition for the followers of the Danielson boy. Barber himself was surprised that he did not do better than Morin for the Taftville bowler, with the exception of the first string, was nothing out of the ordinary. Morin had a total pinfall of 1184 for an average of 197.7, while Barber's total was 1043 and his average 86.7.

The first string was a weird contest, Morin hitting for 134, while the best that Barber could do was 89. Barber was unable to get the breaks and he was weak on the spares, missing comparatively easy breaks by large margins. Barber won the second match and the fourth and then fell down until the last string, when he managed to top Morin by five pins in an uninteresting string. The scores:

JACK CLABBY SIGNS WITH ALLENTOWN, PA., CLUB

Jack Clabby, local ball player, has signed a contract to play with the Allentown, Pa., baseball team for the coming season. Clabby left last night for Pennsylvania to join the club which will open its season within a short time. The Allentown team is south and Porto Rica where the record was very good.

Jack Clabby is a product of the sandlots of Norwich and has made an exceptionally good record during his baseball career in this city. For the past three years he played with the Knights of Columbus team and last season with Bill O'Leary's Norwich club. Early last season he was given a try-out with the Pittsfield club of the Eastern league but his hitting did not impress Manager Art Wilson at that time. Clabby, however, surprised his local friends and hit well during the entire season, his average showing that he was close to the .300 mark.

Clabby goes to Allentown with the best wishes of his many friends in Norwich who predict that he will show even more form this season than he has during the past few seasons.

New London Sport Comment

Though the weather was chilly, the Chapman Tech and Bulkeley baseball squads held practice at Morgan Park yesterday. The Bulkeley first team has almost been selected by Coach Robert T. Aldrich. A cut in the squad is expected about the last day of this week, before the first game with the Alumni on Saturday. The Chapman Tech mentor, E. S. Taylor, has a problem before him to round out a good baseball team with the material on hand. One of the weakest points on the Tech team is the catching department. Unlike Bulkeley, who has one of the best receivers in the state, Chapman Tech is weak in this department and the high school teams that oppose the Tech this year on the diamond will undoubtedly find this weakness and run wild on the bases. The pitching department is not any too strong, for the Red and Black when they lost Johnny Dwyer lost one of the best twirlers yet to be turned out by any team in the eastern section of the state. Dwyer was the entire Tech team for the past two seasons and his departure through graduation is a serious loss to the team. The question, what would the Tech team do without Dwyer? will be answered this year. When Dwyer was not doing mound duty he played either in the outfield or the infield. His hitting was a prominent factor in more than one Chapman Tech victory, this was the main reason that a place for him was always found when he was not pitching. His hitting, together with his pitching, will be missed a the Tech this year and it will be quite a while again before another player that will in some manner emulate Dwyer on the diamond, be found.

PRUETT WILL BE MAINSTAY OF BROWNS

St. Louis, April 8. — The Browns' success in 1924 depends to a great extent upon the showing of Hubert Pruett, left hand pitcher, in the opinion of Manager George Sisler who, as manager of the local Americans, experienced his first extra-inning contest at Fort Worth, Texas, yesterday when his team defeated the Fort Worth, Texas league club, in 14 innings.

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch
Captain New York Giants

Last half of third inning. Score 0 to 0. None out. Runners on first and second.

Where should the shortstop play to be of greatest service to his club?

The shortstop should play a few feet from second base so he can prevent the base-runner there from taking too big a lead toward third. This puts him in a position to take throws from any of the infielders on bunts and permits the second baseman to play over toward right field so he can cover first if necessary, should a bunt pull in the pitcher and first baseman.

This position of the shortstop enables him to catch the runner off second if the pitcher or catcher throws the ball to him. For this purpose the shortstop has signals arranged with both pitcher and catcher for either to throw to him should the runner take too big a lead. You'll notice in a good many big league games that pitchers and catchers peg a good many balls to the shortstop at second under these conditions even when the runner isn't caught off the base. The reason is they try to make him shorten his lead toward third. That often means cutting off a run at the plate if a hit follows.

Incidentally—as you'll notice in these short talks—the shortstop covers more ground than any other infielder in a baseball game.

BULKELEY BASEBALL TEAM HAS STIFF SCHEDULE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 8. — Following closely upon the announcement of the football schedule yesterday by Manager Herbert F. Fern, William D. Reeves, Jr., manager of the Bulkeley baseball team, makes public the baseball schedule for the first time this year. Although the schedule is not completely filled and a few open dates remain, the most important games are already scheduled to be played by the Bulkeley team for the present year. There are a total of nineteen games on the schedule. Of this number, nine games will be played at home and ten will be played out of town.

One of the most attractive home schedules has been arranged by Manager Reeves. The winner of the Connecticut high school championship will almost be decided at New London. Among the teams that are scheduled for New London are, Naugatuck High, Torrington High, Bridgeport High and possibly games will be arranged with the Hartford Public High school, New Britain High, Ansonia High and New Haven Commercial high. Several of the high school teams are evading a game with the Bulkeley team this season and this makes it impossible for the Bulkeley management to fill all its dates. The Bulkeley team will appear in two other states besides the Nutmeg state. A two day trip to New York state has almost been arranged by the Bulkeley management. The two teams that the Bulkeley team will meet will be the Mount Vernon High school nine of Mount Vernon, at that city on Friday, April 25, and the day following, last year's state champions will meet Morris High school of the city of New York at that city. It is believed by Bulkeley graduates that have watched the Bulkeley nine's playing for the last number of years, that this year's team will be the first in the history of the school to play teams in New York state. Bulkeley has appeared in Massachusetts in football but it is thought to be the first time that the baseball nine will travel to the Bay state to play Springfield Technical High of that city.

There probably will not be any inter-class games this year at the high school institution. The Bulkeley schedule would interfere with any games that would be played after this Saturday and because the Chapman Tech squad is always waiting for the Bulkeley team to leave the field after practice, so that they can get their practice session in, this would also hamper any attempts to hold the games on Morgan field. However, in case it is decided to hold inter-class games at Bulkeley first team players would be barred from participating in these games.

Outlooks point towards another successful season and the players are anxious to bring another state championship to New London. Robert T. Aldrich will coach the team, William D. Reeves, Jr., is manager, and Walter Rice is captain.

April 12, Saturday, Alumni at Morgan Park.
April 19, Saturday, Plainfield High school at New London.

ACADEMY BASEBALL SQUAD NUMBERS ABOUT FORTY CANDIDATES FOR TEAM

In spite of the chilly weather and drizzle which prevailed, outdoor practice was held in a most spirited manner at the campus Monday and Tuesday.

About forty candidates reported Monday afternoon and Coach Brigham sent them through their paces, hitting, fielding and some fast infield practice. After the usual preliminary practice a short game was held on Tuesday afternoon in which all candidates had a chance to show their stuff.

The practice thus far has been conducted with unusual vim and pep and all seem to be on their toes and ready to go at the crack of the ball.

Among the veterans who reported are Mileski and Hollender, catchers; Segal and Steinman, pitchers; Burke, McGowan, Tombari, Capt. Phil MacNamara and Hadam, infielders; Hinricks and Mitroy, outfielders. With this array of veterans, Coach Brigham expects to whip into shape a good, fast team for its first tussle of the season which takes place on Saturday, April 12th with the fast Alumni nine. Much credit is due to Manager Gilman for getting the diamond in condition for this game.

WALSH TO BE MANAGER OF JERSEY CITY TEAM

Jersey City, N. J., April 8.—With the purchase of outfielder Jimmy Walsh from the Newark Bears, owners of the Jersey City International league club believe they have secured an ideal man to fill the managerial position. A request for approval of Walsh's appointment to that post has been forwarded to baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis.

The problem of securing a manager has been one of the chief worries of the Skeeters' new owners who assumed title to the club last week.

It is understood a cash consideration of $5,500 and transfer of Ted Musante, a young right handed pitcher, figured in the trade that brings Walsh to Jersey City. If the former Baltimore outfielder is acceptable to Commissioner Landis as manager of the Skeeters, it will not be his first experience in the role, for Walsh occupied that position with the Akron, Ohio, team when that franchise was transferred to Newark four years ago.

CARDS ON WAY HOME FROM SOUTHERN CAMP

Savannah, Ga., April 8. — The St. Louis Nationals arrived here today for an exhibition game with the Rochester team of the International league. The St. Louis club is homeward bound from Bradentown, and expects to improve its early season condition before meeting the local Americans in the usual spring series, which will start at St. Louis next Saturday.

The Cardinals encountered their stiffest opposition at Jacksonville, Fla., yesterday where they defeated the Syracuse team of the International league, 1 to 0. The only run was scored in the third inning and was due to an error.

Manager Rickey was not with the team today, and it was reported that he had gone on a scouting trip to look over a recruit pitcher. Rickey is anxious to bolster his pitching staff in view of the fact that his team is in need of good hurlers.

SIMMONS HITS TWO HOMERS AGAINST PHILLIES

Philadelphia, April 8.—Al Simmons, Connie Mack's new outfielder, lined out two home runs this afternoon in an exhibition game in which the Athletics defeated the Phillies, 6 to 1.

The victory for the Americans tied the city series, the Phillies having won the opener Saturday.

Eddie Rommel, the Athletics star twirler, held the National leaguers to seven scattered hits. Glasner started on the mound for the Phillies but retired in the fifth in favor of Couch.

55 CANDIDATES REPORT FOR WESTERLY BALL TEAM

The Westerly High school baseball squad had their second field day of this season on Tuesday afternoon, practice being held north of the playground diamond, which is being put into condition for playing. No field practice was held on Monday afternoon because of the bad weather. Newly appointed coach, Joel Sherman, of the W. H. S. baseball team does not lack for material this year as there are 55 candidates reporting for outfield positions. There are 55 candidates who have reported for the team, which "Joe" says looks like a young army in the field. It looks like an uphill fight this year as there are but three of last year's baseball team left for service this year, but history reports many uphill fights which have been carried through to successful conclusions.

He has removed his conditions and is now in good standing.

PIRATES CONFIDENT OF HAVING STRONG TEAM

By Stoney McLinn

Paso Robles, Calif, April 9—Pittsburgh invariably shouts loudest in the springtime about its ball club. There has been no October shouting in Western Pennsylvania since 1909, when Fred Clarke won a National League pennant.

It is not surprising to find Pittsburgh making a lot of noise this spring. This year the voices of folks in Piratetown are attuned to sing praises of what they have named "the greatest infield in baseball."

If you argue with a Pittsburgh supporter that there are other infields equally as "great," he will waste a pitying glance on you and come back with, "Well, I claim it's the greatest infield in baseball—I know it's the most colorful."

That much is granted without argument. The Pirates have the most colorful infield this writer has watched in many a day. If the quartet holds the pace it has set for itself, defensively, it will be the talk of the diamond.

Wright will be seen at shortstop this year, according to the definite announcement of Bill McKechnie, manager of the Pirates. This means that for the present, at least, Rabbit Maranville, a major league star at the short field position for a full decade, will move across second base.

Maranville has taken kindly to his transfer, and in the Paso Robles camp played wonderful ball at the keystone sack and was an industrious and enthusiastic laborer. This switch may be Rabbit's salvation. Many b. b. men thought he was about ready to say good-by to the big leagues.

Pie Traynor, third baseman, whom Chilly Doyle, Pittsburgh b. b. expert, states in "undoubtedly the greatest hot-corner guardian in the game—Joe Dugan and Willie Kamm included," is truly a master workman. His fielding style is almost perfection and he is fearless in performing his diamond labor.

A batsman who hits a ground ball or a low liner through the portion of the diamond guarded by Wright and Traynor will deserve headlines.

And then there is Lefty Grimm, the ranking first baseman of the National League. His fielding last year was brilliant, to say the least, and his name appears at the top of the list in the averages.

The Pirate quartet plays sensationally and skillfully on the defense, but this is not all. All do well with the bat. Indeed, they may be expected to average better than .300 on the attack.

Grimm last season had a .345 percentage of safe hits. Pie Traynor averaged .337 and drove in 101 runs. It was the first time in modern baseball history that a Pittsburgh player drove in more than 100 runs.

Wright batted .313 for Kansas City last season. He stands up to the plate in a confident way that makes one feel he will crash the apple for .300 or better his first season in the National League.

Two of the Pittsburgh outfield positions are settle. Bigbee will be the left field and Max Carey will start his fifteenth season as the Pirate midgardener.

There has been a fight on for the right field post. Clyde Barnhart led because he played the position well toward the latter end of last season and is a sweet hitter.

Barnhart batted .324 in 1923, swinging from the right side of the plate. Carey hit .303 as a turnover—that is, he swings both the right and the left way, depending on the arm employed by the pitcher. Bigbee is an out-and-out southpaw at the plate and averaged .290 last year.

A lad named Hasen Cuyler, who was voted the most valuable player in the Southern Association last season and who batted .340, was a strong candidate for a regular outfield assignment this spring. He may land it, too.

Heine Mueller, who was with the club last season and hit .306, and Frank Luce, an apple-crasher from the Flint team of the M. and O. League, whose average was .333, looked good in the Cali. camp. Mueller probably will retain his utility job this year and Luce go out for seasoning.

Pittsburgh does not have a large staff of chuckers; there was no outstanding star last year. What the Pirates do have is a "Big Three" that give promise of stepping on the gas.

Morrison, possessor of the best curve ball in the big leagues, won 25 and lost 18 last year. Wilbur Cooper, a southpaw, did not go so well, but won 17 games while he was losing 19.

Lee Meadows, the pitcher who wears specs and who was obtained from the Phillies in the early part of the 1923 season, finished with 17 wins and 13 defeats after a rather bad start with the lowly crew bossed by Art Fletcher.

Fans of the Smoky City think that the Big Three should turn in no fewer than sixty victories this coming campaign. They hope for from 65 to 75 wins from Morrison, Cooper and Meadows.

Another purchase which it is hoped and believed will do much to land a pennant for Barney Dreyfus' nine was the one that brought Rey Kremer to the Pittsburgh payroll. Kremer is no kid and has had a sufficient amount of Double A pitching experience to carry him along.

Last year Kremer won 35 games and lost 16, pitching for Oakland, in the Pacific Coast League. He cost the Pirates more than $50,000 in cash and players. If he measures up to expectations he will be the fourth big man of the staff—it will become a "Big Four."

Babe Adams will be on the payroll, of course. He is nearing the forty-two year mark in age, but won 15 and lost seven last year, and thinks he will do even better in the race soon to start.

Ray Steineder, a lad from Vineland, N. J., who was on the curving corps last year, winning two games; Kremer, a southpaw, with a mark of 35 wins and 12 defeats, and Herb May, who won 16 and lost 18—both lads from the Western League—are expected to round out the pitching department for Pittsburgh.

Walter Schmidt and Johnny Gooch will be the regular backstops. Gooch was not physically fitted to do his best last season, but is in trim this spring. Schmidt is a smart, toppy marksman.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

Hal Drew, outfielder of the Rochester International League club packed up his baggage and disappeared from the team's Savannah, Ga., camp. Drew recently suffered an injury to his side and was unable to play. Stallings had counted on him being one of his regulars this season.

The Kansas City American Association club threatens injunction proceedings against Walter Hammond, second baseman of the Blues, who has signed with the Simmons outlaw club of Kenosha, Wis. The outlaw club will also be named in the action if the Blues go through with this suit.

Blake Harper, president of the Fort Smith Club of the Western Association, takes exception to the report printed that his club is to be a farm for the St. Paul Club. Mr. Harper points out that Fort Smith is associated with the St. Louis Cardinals and that these relations are most cordial.

Tom Pyle, outfielder, who was sold to Little Rock by the Sherman Texas Association club, has been turned over to Muskegee of the Western Association by the Travelers. Pyle hit .349 last year. Healey, infielder, and Walsh and Ward, pitchers, have also been farmed to Muskogee.

PASNIK IS PURCHASER OF AMERICAN HOUSE

Alex Pasnik bought the American house property on Shetucket street Tuesday from the estate of John A. Brady and will make considerable improvements and changes there. The hotel building which is included in the purchase is a 48-room hotel of frame construction. The lot on which it stands covers about half an acre and contains barns and several trucking offices.

Mr. Pasnik will renovate the hotel building and rent to some one to be conducted as a rooming house. The barns are to be torn down to make room for a modern concrete and cement garage which he will build with a capacity for 150 to 200 cars. The plot will also give him room to erect ten trucking offices on the Shetucket street front.

DOUBLE FEATURE BILL AT THE BREED

Said to rival in soul-stirring power and concentrated intensity Custer's renowned last stand, the climax of The Man Who Won, Dustin Farnum's latest William Fox production at the Breed theatre today and Thursday, is indubitably a production of considerable entertainment possibilities.

Lord James, as the prefix to his name implies, is the ruling terror of Suffering Creek, a locality also appropriately named. His life is made of feminine and gold conquests. He steals the wife of a poor miner, leaving his with the care of two small children. Retreating with her to his forest-fastness, an impregnable stronghold maintained by his small army of followers, he is followed by Peter, the deserted husband.

Two days later, Peter returns to Suffering Creek dragged almost to death by a horse to whose tail he is tied. More of Lord Jame's infamy. Wild Bill, an honest, fearless, feared gambler, interests himself in Peter's case. While Peter had been away seeking to bring his wife back Wild Bill had tended to his kiddies.

Knowing the impossibility of getting Lord James in his stronghold, Wild Bill decides to lure him into the open by his dominating passion for gold. He announces that he will drive the annual coach, loaded with the accumulated wealth of Suffering Creek miners, to the bank of Spawn Town.

Suffering Creek protests, saying it is sheer suicide. But Wild Bill persists, and drives out. He is suddenly ambushed by Lord James and a host of the latter's men. Greatly outnumbered, he nevertheless kills Lord James, and is himself mortally wounded, going "West" in a blaze of glory.

For the second feature Mae Marsh will be seen in the fascinating comedy drama Paddy-the-Next-Best-Thing and the Fox news and a scenic reel will make up the remainder of this big double bill.

PALACE

Palace theatre last times today five big time vaudeville acts specially selected for Norwich and don't fail to see Johnny Hines latest comedy success Conductor 1492, you'll scream with laughter.

The reason for it is no secret—nothing more or less than the superacting of Johnny Hines, whose electric personality saturated the entire production.

It is the same Johnny, but it seems to us he is better than ever in Conductor 1492, is such a thing is possible. For Johnny is always so full of pep, jazz and rapid-fire humor that it hardly seems possible he can improve on it. Yet in his latest picture he once more proves that even though practice may not make perfect, it certainly goes a long way in that direction.

Conductor 1492 is the tale of an ambitious young Irishman just arrived in this country and bent on making his way to fame and fortune—no matter how. Johnny Hines seemed to be made to order for the part of Terry O'Toole, the young hopeful.

With a ready smile and a willing hand he got along well in his own way. Terry was not the man to dodge a fight and many and furious were the ones he fought with people who could not agree with his views.

He finally realized one of his boyhood ambitions when he was hired as a conductor by the Loteda Traction Company, and donned the blue uniform with the shining buttons. The legend on his new cap read Conductor 1492, and thus was he known.

Johnny Hines made good his reputation as a comedian of the highest rank in this role. The laughs were long and loud as he went about his duties, collecting fares, disposing of refractory passengers, assisting ladies to board and leave the car, and various pleasantries he indulged in to make the time pass in his own delightful manner.

The success of this film is in no small way due to the admirable support given by the supporting cast, which includes such well known players as Doris May, Dorothy Burns, Michael Dark, Ruth Renick, Robert Cain, Dan Mason, Fred Esmelton and Byron Sage. Direction is under Charles Hines, a brother of Johnny and Frank Griffen.

Coming for 3 days starting tomorrow David Belasco's stage success Daddies with Mae Marsh and Harry Myers, and five big time vaudeville acts.

AT THE STRAND

The B. F. Keith vaudeville will again be at the Strand the last of the week with another great show scheduled.

Lizzie Wilson, Dutch comedienne late of "Stars of Yesterday" company is also a feature.

Other acts include Eckert and Francis in "Another S'Message".

A great many persons have attempted to give satisfactory answers to the question: "Why are fat men good natured?" but it remains for Walter Hiers, the corpulent comedy character starring Paramount pictures, to find an entirely original solution.

"Fair Week," a new Paramount picture, starring Walter Hiers, opens a three days' run at the Strand Theatre on Thursday. It's packed with laughs—the funniest thing you've seen in months, with Constance Wilson, Carmen Phillips and others in the supporting cast.

"THE GINGHAM GIRL"

A tuneful tale of youth, beauty and laughter is "The Gingham Girl," the delightful musical comedy with Kusell and Schwab will bring to the Broadway theatre Friday night, April 11.

The book is by Daniel Kusell, the music by Albert Von Tilzer and the lyrics by Neville Fleeson. It comes to this city following its one solid year's run at the Earl Carroll Theatre, New York.

Catchy music, good comedy, pretty girls and fine clothes are contributory reasons for its great success. The story of "The Gingham Girl" is charming in its simplicity and revolves around a country boy and his sweetheart. The girl has a recipe for cookies which she is anxious to put on the market but cannot, due to lack of capital. In the country town of Crosswille Corner, New Hampshire, where she and her sweetheart live, she meets the son of the head of the Biscuit combine on the very day her sweetheart is leaving town to "knock 'em dead" in New York. He becomes interested in her cookies and offers to aid her in putting them on the market in opposition to his father. Johnnie Cousins, her sweetheart, leaves for New York, after making her a gift of $100, which she refuses unless he considers it as a partnership in her business, if it ever matures.

In the special organization which will appear here will be a number of Broadway musical comedy favorites some of whom have seen their names in "electrics" and a singing and dancing chorus of unusual charm and beauty.

ESCAPED NEW LONDON PRISONER BROUGHT BACK FROM BOSTON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 9.—The barge Charles Randolph, which was in tow of the tug Elmer A. Keeler Sunday night, when the barge sprang a leak during the trip eastward through the sound and was towed into port and beached off the Marine Iron Works, was floated this morning and divers at once inspected the craft's hull to determine the damage sustained. It is believed that the barge will have to be repaired here before proceeding to Fall River, Mass., to which port her cargo of coal is consigned. It is possible, however, that the cargo will be removed to another barge before the repairs are attempted.

It is possible that within a few weeks work will be started for the laying of a new floor at the quarters of Thomas Hose company. The present floor is in a weakened condition and this fact was called to the attention of the city manager yesterday, when that official appeared there for the purpose of casting his vote on the junior high school measure. While City Manager Holt would not give assurance of immediate repairs of the building, he admitted that the floor was in need of attention. If a new floor is laid, it will probably be constructed so as to be on the street level. A considerable grade now exists at the approach to the fire house.

Still another out-door tent show is to exhibit here, for today a representative of the Frank J. Murphy shows leased Cannon Ball Park for a week. The coming of this show marks the third show to exhibit here for Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey and Sparks show are to exhibit here during the early summer.

Elizabeth J. Bailey has sold a tract of land on Division street to Isadore Levine and Samuel Zaborsky.

James F. Moran has sold a house and lot on Woodbridge street to Vincent Micheli.

Sergeant of Police Nelson Smith will go to New Haven tomorrow where he will attend a conference of state officials who will convene in a three days' session for the purpose of endeavoring to cause a closer co-operation in an endeavor to enforce the automobile laws and by doing so cause a reduction in the number of accidents.

An automobile owned by Lewis Tierney, of 46 Granite street, was stolen in New Haven Sunday. Mr. Tirney motored to that city and parked his car, only to find that it had been stolen when he returned to take possession of it.

John Beibruno of 19 Hobron street, has complained to the police because of the malicious acts of an unknown person who yesterday broke the glass in both the front and rear entrances of the Beibruno home.

William Barnes of Westerly, Mrs. Edward Johns of Shapley street, Mrs. Ethel Neale of Niantic, Mrs. Andrew Brabsor and infant daughter of Niantic and Mrs. William Dombroski and infant daughter of East Lyme, patients at Lawrence hospital, were discharged today.

Frank Schaefer of New Haven, was ordered to appear in the police court Thursday forenoon, when his automobile was found parked on State street this afternoon by Patrolman William Manice, in violation of the city ordinance which prohibits the parking of cars on that street for a period longer than 30 mintes.

Andrew Hamilton, 2 Union street Edward O'Brien, 23 Howard street, Timothy Shea, alias Murphy, 12 Harrison street, were arrested this afternoon charged with breach of the peace, upon complaint of Elmer E. Kenerson, former alderman, now caretaker at Riverside park. Kenerson complained to the police that four men were at the park intoxicated and causing destruction of property there. Sergeant Patrick Murphy and Patrolman William Corcoran and Clyde Murphy speeded to the park in the police automobile. Arriving there the officers did not find the men, but they did find them on the tracks of the Central Vermont railroad. But one of them displayed signs of having imbibed from the flowing bowl. They were not arrested, however, but they were given a bit of advice and allowed their freedom. Evidently the trio did not heed the advice, for before the officers returned to the station house Kenerson lodged another complaint against the gang and demanded their arrest, alleging that the men returned to the park and abused him. The officers returned to the park and as they approached the men fled. Sergeant Murphy apprehended Hamilton and Patrolman Murphy captured O'Brien, but Shea made his escape. The officers, however, knew his place of abode and going to Harrison street, Shea was spotted as he approached his home. He was nabbed by Patrolman Corcoran and the gang was hustled to the police station.

Walter Moran of Montauk avenue, will be another offender who will face Judge Prince when court convenes. Moran, who will be charged with intoxication, was on State street, near North Bank street this afternoon, laboring with a load that a five-ton truck could not carry. Moran finally collapsed, lying on the walk where he fell. Sergeant Frank Howard and Patrolman Braxton Hill took charge of the unfortunate man transferring him to a cell in the police station. Moran has been arrested several times for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

George W. Merrison, 23 Chappell street, today started for Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, where he has secured employment.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Greene and daughter, Miss Alice Greene are in New York, en route to Washington, where they will spend several days. C. Doane Greene, who is employed in Harrisburg, Pa., accompanied his parents and sisters as far as New York.

Arthur W. Tyler, colored, formerly stationed at the United States Coast Guard academy, Fort Trumbull, who made his escape from jail last April, is back at the New London institution, having been returned here from Boston last night by Jailer Winder E. Reed. Tyler was arrested Jan. 30, 1923, following his engaging in an altercation with Yee Wah, a Chinese laundryman, with place of business on Green street. After attacking Wah with his fists Tyler set upon the Chinese beating him about the head and face with the butt of a revolver. He made his escape, but was captured at the coast guard station during the night. Two days after his arrest Tyler was in the police court on a breach of the peace charge and was sentenced to six months in the county jail. In April while working about the yard and stable Tyler made a rush through High street to Hempstead street where he was quickly lost sight of. Ever since that day the authorities have maintained a lookout for Tyler. He was known to be a frequenter in Boston and vicinity and a close watch was kept for him there with the result that the negro was taken into custody yesterday and held until the arrival of Jailer Reed.

James Gleason has sold a house and lot at the corner of Colman and Cutler street to Natale Siragusa and Romario Siragusa.

Residents in the northern section of the city are clamoring for efficient fire apparatus for the Thomas Hose company, located in a section where there is much inflamable property and expensive structures as well. It is claimed that the Thomas apparatus, an old Pope-Hartford engine has worn out and is not the sort of apparatus that can be relied upon in emergency.

Complaint of the failure of the street lights to illumine is heard on every hand and the police station is called up several times each night by persons who encounter difficulty in moving about the streets in the dark.

It is understood that the New Haven Railroad company is disposed to get rid of property it owns and which is not in actual use—earning something for the company. The company has property in this city, including the old Ferguson wharf that is an expense to the corporation all the year round

William Welch, who has been superintendent of the Shennecossett golf grounds in Groton, returned today from Florida where he has been during the winter, at the Bellevue hotel at Belleair, formerly owned by Morton F. Plant. Mr. Welsh is to be employed at the Shennecossett grounds as soon as the season opens and to get things in readiness he is here ahead of Mrs. Welsh, who remains in Florida.

Whether the result of the referendum verdict at the polls in relation to the decision not to build the junior high school in New London will complicate the issuance of bonds which the city has already sold for the purpose is not known. The bonds are secured by everything the city owns, but there is no junior high school so the structure to build which the city issued the bonds has not taxterialized. Whether the bankers who bought the bonds will desire to have them redeemed is not known.

There was a good sized bill from architects who drew the plans and prepared the specifications for the structure it was proposed to build and that account has never been settled. Some $13,000 of a $20,000 bill was paid, and the architect has given the council notice that he looks to it for a settlement at once of the remaining portion of the bill. The bill has been in the hands of the city's law officer several weeks and he will probably report on it before another council meeting is held.

There is understood to be a movement on foot that will enable merchants and others to collect money due them and which will tighten up on the credits that have in the past been given to supposedly "good" risks. It is claimed that collections have been so slow of late that the creditors are becoming alarmed and that they will be much more cautious in the future.

Attorneys representing the boy Gentilella, run down by the automobile of William Jensen, of 116 Laurel Hill avenue, Norwich, are understood to be moving for the collection of damages for the boy. It was represented at the time of the accident that the Jensen car was insured but that has been all the information that has been obtainable as to the liability of Jensen.

There is likely to be a lawsuit over the leasing of a Bank street store in the coming week. The owner of the building gave a written agreement to a party who desired the premises, and then when another party learned of the agreement's existence he went to the owner of the property and offered $10 a month more for the premises. The place was then leased by the owner to the fellow who would pay the higher rental, or who promised to pay it. Now the party holding the written agreement is to proceed to have its conditions carried into effect.

It is reported that the painters are to seek an increase in wages and that they are only waiting for the rush of spring work to make demands upon their employers. The demand will be refused except in such cases where work is in hand that makes it unwise to allow it to go uncompleted.

The father of Louis and Ignace Ramistella died recently in Italy. News of the death came to the brothers by letter today.

The health of State's Attorney Hadlai A. Hull is not such that he will be able to attend to the duties of his office at the coming term of the superior court and Warren B. Burrows will represent him. Mr. Burrows is now preparing the cases that are to come to trial then.

No trace of the New London automobile stolen from the street in New Haven has been obtained.

$68,000 IN 3 MONTHS FOR GASOLINE

Over 16,000,000 gallons of gasoline have been consumed by motor vehicles in Connecticut in the first quarter of this year, judging by reports made by wholesale dealers to the state motor vehicle department. This quantity represents an increase of about 5,000,000 gallons over the consumption during the corresponding period of last year.

At the average price of about 22 cents a gallon, it is estimated that more than $3,680,000 has been spent by automobilists for motor fuel during January, February and March just passed, or about $1,150,000 more than the approximate retail cost of the gasoline used in Connecticut motor vehicles in the same months of 1923. In other words, the money spent for motor fuel so far this year nearly equals the cost of conducting the entire state government of Connecticut, including all its great humane institutions, departments and courts, for the same period.

The motor vehicle department figures indicate that nearly twice the number of motor vehicles in operation in the winter of 1923 were in use in the state in the winter just passed. Gasoline consumption jumped from 5,584,300 gallons in January, 1923, to 5,224,600 gallons in January, 1924, and from 3,932,000 gallons in February, 1923, to 5,700,000 gallons in February, 1924. The figures for March, 1924, are necessarily estimated. During March, 1923, about 4,200,000 gallons were used.

Gasoline consumption figures invariably show a tremendous gain after the first quarter of each year, as the number of cars in operation increases considerably in April when they may be registered at reduced rates. While 88,732 motor vehicles were registered in the first quarter of last year, more than 100,000 have already been registered this year. The average automobile owner in Connecticut uses 642 gallons of gasoline a year and, at the average price of gasoline for last year, it cost about $141 for the fuel used in the average car.

TRUCK WEIGHT LIMIT NOT TO BE CHANGED

No seasonal restrictions on the weight of motor truck loads in Connecticut is contemplated by the state highway department at this time. Decision to this effect has been reached following an inspection of the state's trunk line and state aid roads, which leads to the belief that they will suffer no great impairment if the state's weight limit is permitted to stand at 25,000 pounds, maximum.

Accordingly, State Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald has notified the Massachusetts department of public works that seasonal restrictions here at this time do not appear to be necessary. In Massachusetts it has been decided to put into effect this season restrictions of 10,000 pounds on certain sections of state highway, in accordance with the statutes there which authorize the highway department to make seasonal limits if he believes that injury, other than ordinary wear and tear, would be caused by extra heavy loads. This frequently is the case when the highways are freeing themselves from the winter's frosts.

BOSTON ARREST FOLLOWS ARREST IN NORWICH

A link in the case involving the arrest here last Friday of Joseph S. Lewis at the request of the Hartford police on the charge of receiving stolen property was closed in by the Boston police Sunday when they arrested at the North station there John A. Doyle, 41, married, of Georgetown.

Doyle, who was employed as a billing clerk by the American Railway Express company and stationed at the North Station, was arrested on a charge of larceny of 15 suits of clothes valued at $281 on Feb. 18 of this year. It is alleged by the police, however, that the amount named does not come anywhere near covering the thefts alleged, which have extended over a long period.

It is claimed that, as a billing clerk, Doyle would change the labels on goods received at the North Station and would place on bundles the name and address of his brother-in-law, Joseph S. Lewis, 32, of Hartford, Conn.

THE STATE POLICE MADE 141 ARRESTS IN MARCH

State policemen made 141 arrests during March, recovered property valued at $915 and seized liquor valued at $15,917.20 according to the report for the month. Eighty-eight of the arrests were for violation of the motor vehicle law, twenty-two for violation of the liquor law, three for manslaughter and twenty-eight for miscellaneous charges.

The report also shows that during the month, 815 inspections of weights and measures were made; twenty-two permits for explosives and thirty-five for pistols were granted; 126 inspections of motion picture theatres were made and 3,514 examinations for motor vehicle operators' licenses were taken.

"But Tanlac knocked out my troubles so thoroughly I have never taken a dose of medicine since. I am the proud possessor of what I call a new stomach and feel rejuvenated all over. My appetite can't be satisfied, I sleep like I hadn't a nerve in my make-up, my weight has gone up ten pounds, and I am stronger and feel finer than in years. I shall recommend Tanlac and the Vegetable Pills as long as I live."

By DAVID CORY

Hitting a Bee's Nest

Now, let me see. Oh, yes. I remember. As soon as the two little rabbits had filled a big basket with lollypops, they set off for home in the Luckymobile. All of a sudden, they had an adventure. Yes sir, it came so quickly that the two little rabbits didn't have time to stop the Luckymobile, and, oh, dear me! it ran right into a bumble bee's nest. And, Oh, dear me! again and three times more! Those bees were so angry that they

"Goodness gracious meebus!" cried poor Uncle Lucky trying to back away from the nest. But the next minute the dreadful bees ran their stingers into the rubber tires and out came the air, leaving the Luckymobile on four flat tires.

"Come on!" shouted Uncle Lucky. "Let's get out or we'll be stung to death.

Away they hopped to the Bubbling Brook where Uncle Lucky put cool soft mud on his left ear and a mud plaster on Little Jack Rabbit's nose. After a while when the pain was gone the two little rabbits began to sing:

"Look out for a bee's nest,
It's full of stingy stings.
These buzzers fly about your head
Upon their gauzy wings.
Then slyly creep beneath your collar
And make you dance about and holler."

"What are we going to do about the Luckymobile?" asked the old gentleman rabbit anxiously. "We ought to put on gas masks like those they used in the trenches," answered his bunny nephew.

So off they hopped and pretty soon, not so very far, they came to the Rabbitville Armory. As soon as they found the gas masks, they started back again after first having bought four new rubber tires for the Luckymobile. But goodness me! Those new tires were dreadfully heavy.

"Let's sit down and rest," sighed poor, tired Uncle Lucky, by and by, after a while. And if the Queen Bee doesn't take the Wasp Prince out for a ride in the Luckymobile, I'll tell you what happened after that.

IMMIGRATION BILL DISCUSSED IN THE HOUSE

Washington, April 8.—Representative Raker, democrat, California, took up advocacy of the bill by declaring the time had arrived when America must protect itself from Japanese immigration. He branded the "gentleman's agreement," as a "secret document, unknown, unseen and unworkable," and an agreement by which Japan itself is to restrict immigration.

Mr. Raker defended the California alien land laws and declared "the best brains Japan could get together," did not prevent the supreme court from holding them constitutional by unanimous decision.

Investigations in Seattle, he declared, have shown that the Japanese control a large interest in the city's hotels, fish and vegetable markets and other enterprises, and the same condition, he said, prevails in other Pacific coast cities.

Before Japan discontinued the "picture bride practice," he said, a modification was made in the Japanese law which enabled the Japanese to go home and secure the brides themselves.

Conditions in Hawaii, he added, show a rapid increase in Japanese population and "everybody knows the Japanese can control nearly every office in the island."

Asked by Representative Madden, republican, Illinois, if Japanese children born in the United States were not citizens, the California member replied:

"By the Constitution, but not citizens in heart."

Representative Miller, republican, Washington, also made a vigorous appeal for passage of the bill. Pointing to the number of Japanese children in public schools, of the Pacific Coast states, he declared their national sentiment, "to be unbreakable."

Oriental customs and civilization, Mr. Miller said, make the Japanese unassimilable and "therefore they are not fitted to enter our modern democratic life." A Japanese, he added, "is always a Japanese."

SUPREME COURT ANUULLED "STUDENT PRANK" MARRIAGE

Charleston, W. Va., Apr. 8.—The marriage of Jamieson Meredith and Ann Victoria Shakespeare at Morgantown, in August, 1923, was designated as a "student prank," and was annulled by the supreme court today. Judge J. A. Merdeith, president of the court, the boy's father, absented himself from sessions at which the case was considered.

The annulment was asked by young Meredith, who said the marriage ceremony was gone through before a student minister of the Episcopal church in a spring of banter. He was a student at West Virginia university and she was spending a vacation from a school in Philadelphia at the home of her parents in Morgantown at the time.

They separated immediately after the marriage, he said, as neither intended to assume the relations of husband and wife.

MANNINGTON SUBPOENAED ON FRENCH LINER CHICAGO

New York, April 8—Howard D. Mannington was served with a subpoena to appear before the Daugherty investigating committee in Washington upon his arrival tonight on the French liner Chicago.

In an hours' talk with newspapermen coming up the bay Mr. Mannington declared all the talk about the little green house on K street, Washington, during his residence there was "ridiculous." He denied that President Harding or Former Attorney General Daugherty had visited him there although he admitted that William Orr had been his guest.

SUIT AGAINST MAMMOTH OIL COMPANY DISMISSED

Cheyenne, Wyo., April 8.—Suit of Robert G. Taylor against the Mammoth Oil company, involving title to 160 acres of land in the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve was dismissed in federal court here today by stipulation and approximately $500,000 of impounded money held in the court registry pending outcome of the litigation was turned over to the Memmoth company.

The order for dismissal was entered after a telegraph had been received from the government's special oil counsel, Owen J. Roberts and Atlee Pomerene, stating unwillingness upon the government's part to be a party to the proceedings. The Taylor-Mammoth case was injected into the government's suit for annulment of the Teapot Dome lease when the latter action was filed here last month.

RESERVES DECISION IN MARRIAGE ANNULMENT SUIT

Decision was reserved in the superior court at New London Tuesday afternoon by Judge L. P. Waldo Marvin after hearing the evidence in the suit for annulment of marriage brought by Amidee Nadeau against Pauline Nadeau, both of Griswold. Attorney John H. Barnes appeared for the plaintiff and Earl Mathewson for the defendant.

Nadeau claims that on June 9, 1923, he was forced into a marriage with the girl who had a warrant for his arrest charging with being the father of a child which was expected to be born soon and rather than to go jail he married her. The night of their marriage she told him that she had falsified when she had told him that he was responsible for her condition and accused Steve Topman or Hofman of being the father of the child.

Nadeau and his father went to see Attorney Barnes and on June 13, 1923, Mrs. Nadeau signed a statement in front of Attorney Barnes and witnessed by Albert J. Bailey in which she stated that she had not met Nadeau until late in February, 1923, and that Topman and not Nadeau was responsible for her condition. She afterwards repudiated this statement and claimed that she was ignorant of the contents at the time that she signed it. In her answer to the complaint she denies all of the plaintiff's allegations. Witnesses who testified for the plaintiff were Amidee Nadeau, his father Philip Nadeau and Albert J. Bailey.

The defendant was the only witness presented by the defense. She acknowledged signing the paper but said she did it merely to oblige her husband and that the statements made in it were not true.

SCHOOL

The little crossroads schoolhouse held only a score of pupils. In case of fire, exit was easy for all.

Today our schools literally turn away pupils, often working many classes in morning and afternoon shifts. Despite constant fire drills we frequently have appalling disasters from such crowded buildings. Suppose one of the victims was your child.

A school building of concrete being fireproof is not only safe for children, but also safe for the taxpayer's money—for it is permanent. And in first cost it is but 6% more than cost of impermanent materials. Ask your building material dealer to demonstrate to you what is true building economy. He knows.

On Every Chandler Without Extra Cost The Traffic Transmission

AT the automobile shows many manufacturers have exhibited cars on which were offered certain new developments involving brakes, tires, etc.

Some were accepted as undoubted improvements. Others continue to be the subject of sharp controversy.

In many cases these improvements were offered as "optional". That is, you paid extra to obtain them. In others, it was found necessary to cover their additional cost with an advance in list price.

But the biggest, most important, most fundamental advance of all was offered on only one car, as an integral part of that car—and at no extra cost to the purchaser. This was the Traffic Transmission.

Embodying a totally new principle, it represents the solution of the gear shifting problem. There is nothing new to learn. You move the gear lever and clutch exactly as before. But the results are amazing.

You cannot clash gears. You cannot fail in any attempted speed change, even when racing down hill.

The speed and surety with which you change to second gear gives you a positive brake on the steepest grades. You can make instant use of the motor's equalized braking power to stop short without skidding.

With no fumbling to change gears, you park with ease and dispatch.

Small wonder that the Chandler is nationally regarded as the easiest and safest of all cars to handle! It is the only car which combines the Traffic Transmission with the

The Shepherd of King Admetus

There came a youth upon the earth,
Some thousand years ago,
Whose slender hands were nothing worth,
Whether to plow, or reap, or sow.

Upon an empty tortoise-shell
He stretched some chords, and drew
Music that made men's bosoms swell
Fearless, or brimmed their eyes with dew.

Then King Admetus, one who had
Pure taste by right divine,
Decreed his singing not too bad
To hear between the cups of wine.

And so, well pleased with being soothed
Into a sweet half-sleep,
Three times his kingly beard he smoothed,
And made him viceroy o'er his sheep.

His words were simple words enough,
And yet he used them so,
That what in other mouths was rough
In his seemed musical and low.

Men called him but a shiftless youth,
In whom no good they saw;
And yet, unwittingly, in truth,
They made his careless words their law.

They knew not how he learned it all,
For idly, hour by hour,
He sat and watched the dead leaves fall,
Or mused upon a common flower.

It seemed the loveliness of things
Did teach him all their use,
For, in mere weeds, and stones, and springs
He found a healing power profuse.

Men granted that his speech was wise,
But, when a glance they caught
Of his slim grace and woman's eyes,
They laughed and called him good for nought.

Yet after he was dead and gone,
And e'en his memory dim,
Earth seemed more sweet to live upon,
More full of love because of him.

And day by day more holy grew
Each spot where he had trod,
Till after-poets only knew
Their first-born brother as a god.

—James Russell Lowell.

My Prayer

To be ever conscious of my unity with God.
To listen to His voice and hear no other call;
To separate all error from my thought of man;
To see Him as my Father's image;
To show Him reverence,
And share with Him my holiest treasures.
To have no aim but to make earth a fairer, holier place.
And to rise each day
Into a higher sense
Of Life and Love.

—Ethel Whitcomb in Nautilus.

MARKET WAS REACTIONARY

New York, April 8—Renewal of professional selling pressure brought about further reaction in today's stock market although independent strength was shown by a wide variety of issues. Public interest was at low ebb, the day's transactions totaling only about 600,000 shares.

Wall street's speculative community apparently devoted the major part of its attention to the cotton market in which futures were bid up 70 to 170 points on a running-in of the short interest.

Early selling in the stock market centered principally in the industrial list. U. S. Steel common touching a new low on the movement at 94 1-4 and new low records were established by Kelly Springfield, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Texas Steel, Willys-Overland preferred and several other issues.

Rails continued their upward movement under the leadership of Norfolk & Western, which established a new 1924 high at 122 1-2, until just before the close when that stock broke to 127 3-4. This break unsettled the rest of the list, Missouri Pacific preferred, which had established a new top at 49 1-2, dropping back to 41 and a number of others slipping a point or more from their earlier high levels. Southern Pacific closed 1 3-4 lower at 89 1-4 and Northern Pacific dropped from 58 1-8 to 51 1-2 despite the publication of the annual report showing the $5 dividend fully earned in 1923 with a small margin to spare.

News that the new revenue bill had been ordered reported favorably to the senate today by the finance committee was responsible for the early afternoon recovery in a number of the standard industrials, but they fell back later when heavy selling broke out in the rail group. Late selling of Northern Pacific was inspired, in part, by the report that the house public lands committee had reported favorably a resolution for an investigation of the road's land grants.

Among the industrials that moved against the current trend, international harvester, the American Water Works issues and American Agricultural Chemical preferred were the most prominent. Standard Milling, making its first appearance on the tape in several weeks, broke 20 1-2 points. Oils held relatively steady. Marland closing about a point higher and superior touching a new 1924 top.

Call money opened at 5 per cent., and then dropped to 4 1-2 where it closed. Time money and commercial paper markets were quiet with the bulk of the business being transacted at 4 1-2 per cent.

Foreign exchanges maintained a firm tone. Demand sterling ruled about a cent higher at $4.38 3-8 and French francs climbed about 10 points to around 5.96 cents. South American exchanges were slightly reactionary.

BOND MARKET

New York, April 8—Bond prices drifted irregularly lower in today's market, which was featured by erratic fluctuations of American agricultural chemical and other fertilizer issues. Technical readjustments brought substantial recoveries in numerous industrial items which recently had been under selling pressure.

In an early display of strength, American agricultural chemical 7 1-2s advance more than 3 points to 91, nine points above the recent record low. Resumption of selling pressure caused a five point break to 86 from which the bonds later moved up to 88 1-2. The company's 5 per cent. liens. After establishing a new low price yesterday, regained a point. Speculators, who have been singling out weak spots for attack, concentrated today on International Agricultural Chemical 5s, forcing them down more than 5 points to a record low figure, Virginia-Carolina obligations, however, moved higher.

Improvements in the earnings of the Missouri Pacific railroad stimulated a demand for the company's bond issues, some of which reached new top prices on the movement. Fresh buying of Seaboard Adjustment 5s was prompted by reports that an extra payment would be made on accumulations.

Considerable interest was aroused in bond circles by the brisk competition for the New York state $45,000,000 bonus issue, which was awarded on a high bid of 101.4657, the highest price ever paid for a state's bonus bonds. Public offering will be made by the successful syndicate as early as possible.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, April 8—Owing largely to favorable conditions both for seeding and growth, wheat today eased down in price. The market closed unsettled at 1-8c to 3-8c net decline, May $1.02 1-8 to $1.02 1-8 & 1-4 and July $1.03 5-8 to 1.03 3-4. Corn finished 3-8 a 1-2c to 3-4 off, with oats showing 1-4 to 3-8c loss, and provisions varying from 5c set back to a like advance.

It was generally recognized by the wheat traders that with continued auspicious weather a larger crop than last year was by no means impossible, notwithstanding that the 1924 acreage is smaller. Besides, there was no evidence on any export demand of consequence. Selling, however, lacked volume except from the northwest, where seeding appeared to be making progress at a number of places. On the other hand, dearth of buying kept the market devoid of important rallies, primary election activities doing a good deal to curtail business. The best upturn came at the last, and resulted almost entirely from squaring of accounts on the part of small previous sellers.

Predictions of larger receipts of corn after sowing of oats is complete led to persistent scattered selling of corn. Moreover, eastern demand for corn was again slow, and reports were current that gluten and other manufactured feeds were being heavily substituted for corn.

Oats were depressed by advices that seeding was likely to be finished at some Illinois points within a few days. Receipts of oats here meanwhile showed a decided falling off in quantity.

CURB MARKET

New York, April 8—Heavy selling of Glen Alden coal, which broke 7 points to 35 on reports that four of its mines had flooded, was the outstanding feature of today's irregular curb market. Buying support was supplied later and the stock recovered to 37 1-2.

Active oils held relatively steady. Prairie Oil and Gas, Penn-Mexico fuel and Swan and Finch each moved up about a point while losses of four points each were recorded by Solar Refining, South Pennsylvania Oil and Standard Oil of Ohio, the turnover in these issues, however, being small.

Grand stores, moved up 2 points to 52 in further reflection of the big increase in sales over last year. Otis Elevator new stock dropped 2 1-2 points and Ford Motors of Canada broke four on a few odd lot sales. Durant Motors improved fractionally. Dubilier Radio closed a point higher.

Kay Copper was again the most active feature in the mining list, touching a new high at 1 3-16.

TRUE VALUES

THE true cost of a yard of woolen or worsted cloth is measured by the human endeavor that goes into its making and that endeavor can be traced from the wool grower in the field to the one who cuts, fashions and makes the finished clothing. The "per dollar" value of cloth and the "per dollar" value of money are therefore alike—each representing a certain amount of human endeavor.

TAFTVILLE

The Shetucket and Quinebaug rivers are running very high, and it is believed that the water at present is higher than it has been for many years. All along the Shetucket banks north of the village, the river has overflowed, and has crossed the Occum road at a point near the Occum switch. The residents of lower Occum who live very near the river banks were afraid of a freshet, and were further terrified by a report that the Baltic dam had given away. One man who lives in that vicinity waded through water up to his knees in order to reach his garage and found the car standing in two feet of water. It is estimated that the water was 18 inches lower on Tuesday than on Monday.

Mrs. John Keefe of South A street has returned from the Backus hospital where she has been a patient for several weeks.

Mrs. John Blanchette of Norwich avenue is visiting relatives in Centerville, R. I.

Alfred Shuit of Terrace avenue and Delia Paul of South A street have purchased a touring car which they will use on their fishing and hunting expeditions.

Desire J. Dufresne, Moise Durocher and Odilon Dugas have been appointed delegates from the St Jean Baptiste society to the annual convention of Franco-American societies of this state, to be held in Putnam in June. David Lamber and Emil Bellerose are the delegates from the St. Louis society and Azarie Gauthier and Eugene Lavalle will represent the Artisans.

Clarence J. Nagle of South Second avenue and Earle M. Wood of North Third avenue have returned from a short stay in Providence, R. I.

An attempt to burglarize the store of Edward Adams on Merchants avenue Monday night about 9 o'clock, was frustrated when an alarm connected with the cash register, rang in the residence of Fred Dugas, which is directly over the store. Mrs. Dugas at once sent her young son to notify his father who was in the bowling alley in the next building, and stepping to the window she saw two figures running through the back yards. Although she was unable to identify them in the darkness, she believes them to be young boys. Nothing of value was found to have been taken. The store has been entered a number of times lately and the burglar alarm was installed to prevent further losses.

The regular monthly meeting of the Taftville Football and Social club was held Monday evening, with President Allan Bogle in the chair.

NORWICH TOWN

Up town owners of cottages at East Beach, Rhode Island, find that winds and storms of the past season have brought in sand and broadened the beach so that it will be more attractive than ever.

Apple orchards and grapevines have been pruned and trimmed more thoroughly than usual, and on sunny slopes gardens are being made ready for planting.

Mr. and Mrs. William Risley and son of West Town street have moved to Buckingham Memorial where Mrs. Risley will have charge of the rooms.

Mrs. Gertrude Hough Pattison, now of New York, has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Hough of Scotland road.

The foundation is nearly completed for the new house being built on Town street for B. Dudley Lathrop.

Arthur H. Gulliver of Norwich Town was a speaker at the 73th annual banquet of Alpha Sigma Phi of Yale University, at the Hotel Taft, New Haven.

Considerable interest is shown in the dress goods trade in the statewood coming from the jobbers that the fall outlook for plain fabrics is more gratifying and that these goods are fast coming back. Specific mention is made of serges.

RECOMMENDING NEW SCHOOLS FOR NORWICH TOWN AND EAST SIDE

Following the presentation of two reports before the town school board at its regular April meeting Tuesday evening, the board voted to take the steps to have a special town meeting called at which the needs of a new school building at Norwich Town and one on the East Side, Bridge district, shall be presented with the requests for appropriations and authorization to proceed to fill these needs in the Norwich school system.

The date for the special meeting was not determined upon nor was there any amount named that might be needed except a rough estimate of about $300,000, these being matters that are subject to development as the board proceeds with its further consideration of the proposition.

President Walter F. Lester presided and there was a full attendance of the members of the board, James C. Macpherson, Robert McNeely, William P. McGarry, Dr. E. J. Brophy and Judge T. J. Kelly, with Superintendent E. J. Graham.

The reports presented were those of the special "Committee of Twenty" of Norwich Town residents which detailed the crowded and out-of-date conditions at Yantic, Town street and West Town street schools, and a report upon conditions in the same schools, which was made by Superintendent Graham to the board at their request.

Superintendent Graham gave a detailed survey of conditions in the two schools at Norwich Town and the one at Yantic, which he summarized in the following recommendations:

1. In the three schools, of the eleven rooms under consideration, six are overcrowded.
2. All of the rooms are improperly lighted.
3. There is plenty of heat, but not properly regulated.
4. The ventilation should be improved.
5. The drinking fountains are inadequate. More should be provided.
6. The two outdoor dry system toilets are kept in as good condition as such toilets probably can be kept. However, they should be made a relic of the past.

In order to overcome these conditions, I recommend that a 16-room building be erected near the present Town street school building and the following organization be put into effect:

Consolidate grades 4 to 8 of the Yantic school and grades 5 to 8 of West Town street school with the present grades in the town school. This would have the Yantic and West Town street school buildings for primary grades. The upper grade pupils from Yantic and West Town street schools could be transported at an approximate yearly cost of $1,200. Such transportation accomplished by either trolley or auto bus.

This organization would also provide for kindergarten instruction for all of the people in this part of the town.

If such a building were immediately erected, according to the present enrollment, the organization would be as follows:

Grade 8 (26 pupils) grade 7A (30 pupils); grade 7B (30 pupils), grade 6A (25 pupils); grade 6B (25 pupils), grade 5 (32 pupils); grade 4 (41 pupils), grade 3 (25 pupils); grade 2 (26 pupils), grade 1 (33 pupils); kindergarten (30 to 50 pupils), making a total attendance of 325 pupils. Eleven of the sixteen rooms would be filled in September, 1924.

East Main Street.

As to the East Main street school, Superintendent Graham reported the present enrollment is 496 in the kindergarten, first, second, third, fourth and fifth grades, and according to the present figures it will not be possible to accommodate the fifth grade for the school year beginning Sept. 1, 1924. The sixth grade is now transferred to Broadway and Hobart avenue but it is too far for sixth grade pupils to walk.

It is recommended that a six-room building, with a kindergarten room, be erected. The new building to be a modern six-room building of brick construction.

Long Discussion on Building Needs.

The board discussed the building needs at length and finally came to the conclusion to bring the whole matter up before the citizens in a special town meeting. It developed during the discussion that sites now occupied by school buildings now would not necessarily be chosen for any new buildings. The board was unanimously agreed that the congested conditions in these two districts demanded a remedy and that new buildings would be the most satisfactory solution of the problem.

Tabled Time Inquiry.

A petition with about forty signatures was received asking what the town school committee proposes to do with reference to standard time. The petition authorized G. Warren Davis to receive the answer. The board tabled the petition.

Michael J. Kelly, who resigned two months ago as building inspector for the school board, was reappointed to the position.

The usual monthly bills were presented and were ordered paid.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH SHOWED ACTIVE YEAR

With the pastor, Rev. A. N. Foster, presiding, the annual meeting of the Universalist church was held Monday evening at which the annual report of the clerk, Mrs. C. A. Gager, and of the treasurer, Mrs. Harold Hull, were presented and accepted. Mrs. Gager was re-elected clerk and Mrs. C. B. Woodworth was elected delegate to the state convention in Hartford, May 7 and 8.

The annual meeting of the society followed adjournment of the church meeting. Sumner W. Armstrong presided and Walter A. Bussey was clerk pro tem in the unavoidable absence of J. Harold Cobb, the society clerk. After the annual report by E. A. Tracy, treasurer, the election of officers was held with the following result.

Clerk, Mrs. Albert S. Comstock; treasurer, James W. Bussey; trustees for one year, Sumner W. Armstrong, Arthur G. Crowell; trustees for two years, Louis J. Crandall, James W. Bussey; trustees for three years, Walter A. Bussey, J. Albert Peck; collectors, S. W. Armstrong, Walter A. Bussey, E. A. Tracy and John H. Bell; delegates to state convention, L. J. Crandall and Mrs. A. S. Comstock; collector of pledges, Charles W. Parsons.

Mr. Tracy presented a resolution on the death of C. B. Woodworth which was accepted and ordered spread on the records. A vote of thanks was voted to him for his excellent work as treasurer over a long period.

The pastor then read a letter covering the activities of the church parish and the various organizations of the parish.

Mrs. Thomas W. Wilson, secretary and treasurer of the Ladies Aid society, Miss Bertrice Green for the Y. P. C. U., and Miss Jessie E. Hill, secretary of the Sunday school gave short reports for the year.

All the reports indicated that the activities of the church has been especially well sustained during the past year.

FOR SUPERIOR COURT ON EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGE

Presented in the city court Tuesday morning on the charge of embezzlement, John G. Cheneski of this city was bound over to the criminal superior court with bonds placed at $500 which he furnished.

The amount involved in the charges against the man is about $2,000. Four counts are against him concerning money given to him for steamship tickets to provide passage from Europe to this country. It is alleged that persons here having relatives in Poland who they wished to have come to this country placed money in the hands of Mr. Cheneski to buy steamship tickets, but that he has failed to buy the tickets but has kept the money for his own use. Officials of steamship companies have been here, it is understood, and have substantiated the accusation that the money has never reached the companies.

John M. Brewer was sent to jail for ten days on an intoxication charge.

Suffield Starts Endowment Drive

Members of the faculty and student leaders urged, the undergraduates of Suffield school, at a dinner held at Suffield Monday night, to make every effort to raise their part of the school's endowment fund. The intensive student campaign began Tuesday and ends next Friday, before Easter vacation.

The four classes are to compete for a silver loving cup, which will be awarded at that time.

A dinner to inaugurate the drive among the townspeople of Suffield will be held Friday night, and 500 are expected. The national campaign comes next month.

Will Broadcast Song

Wm. Murphy of this city, who is now in New York and who wrote in 1899 the song 'Only a Band of Gold,' is to have his song broadcasted by Harry W. Schyde, a baritone, from the New York station, WJZ. The song will be broadcasted this (Wednesday) afternoon at 3.40 to 4 p. m. and again early in the evening.

REORGANIZATION PLAN FOR ITALIAN COLUMBUS BAND

A reorganization meeting was held by the Italian Columbus band, Tuesday at Steiner hall. A plan was arranged whereby this fine musical organization should become of real value to the city. It is contemplated to make an appeal to the Norwich public to become sustaining members in the organization.

The band is composed of 26 musicians and is to be known as Norwich Italian American Band Organization, and the object of the band is to furnish free music to the public in the parks, and to play at public institutions and at public functions whenever called upon.

The funds needed to make this musical organization a valuable asset to the city are about $2,000 per year, and the committee in charge is confident that the music lovers of the city will heartily support this new organization.

Several of the influential citizens were consulted in the matter and they believe that the idea and the purpose as set forth will be practical and beneficial to the entire community, and the committee in charge is greatly encouraged to carry the plan to a successful culmination.

One of the members of the reorganizing committee when seen Tuesday said, "The Italian band has existed in Norwich for eight years. During the World war it has rendered valuable patriotic service. It has also played free at many public functions and at religious meetings, and it now contemplates to enlarge its civic and patriotic scope and its service to the Norwich public."

Summoned For Justice's Hearing.

Alfred J. Bennett, a Lisbon storekeeper, was summoned Tuesday to appear at a justice of the peace hearing Saturday on the charge of violation of the liquor law. Mr. Bennett denies any violation of law and claims that a case has been "framed up" against him.

FOR SUPERIOR COURT ON SERIOUS CHARGE

Willimantic, April 9.—Probable cause was found in the case of Samuel Pollack, 16, charged with carnal knowledge and abuse of a female child tried before Justice of the Peace George A. Andrews of the Mansfield Town court Monday night and the accused was bound over to superior court under bonds of $1,500. The father of the accused, N. Pollack of Gurleyville, was appointed guardian ad leim and furnished bonds for his son. Miss Margarte Hughes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hughes, formerly of Chaffeeville, and now of Winter street, this city, was the plaintiff in the case. Ten witnesses were called upon to testify.

Prosecution was by Grand Juror Millard of the Town of Mansfield. State Policeman Hardisty, of the Stafford Springs barracks, testified to signed statements which he had received from the girl. It was alleged that the act was committed about the first week in June following the party at the home of John Mikes of Hanks Hill. The complainant later testified that she had been forced to do wrong by young Pollack. She gave birth to a child last February, and claimed that Pollack was the father. Further testimony for the state was given by Mr. and Mrs. Hughes and Alvin Ladd. Pollack pleaded not guilty to the charge. Benjamin Hobby, Leo Heinige and Miss Annie Wolfe, all of Gurleyville, testified in regard to the party given at the Mikes' home and stated that young Pollack did not attend the affair at which the complainant was present.

Clara Upton, an old timer as far as the local police records are concerned, will be presented in court this Tuesday morning for the 15th or more times to answer a charge of intoxication. Mrs. Upton had jamiaca ginger double strength for her favorite drink Monday night and made things so incomfortable at her home on Clark street that her husband, Levi Upton, called in a couple of police officers. He requested the officers to lock his wife up stating that he did not care what happened to her.

Keete, rector of St. Mary's Memorial church, gave an interesting talk on Some Great Women in History, Political and Educational Activities. It furnishes electric power and light in thirty-two towns in Eastern Connecticut, and four towns in Western Rhode Island, and gas in Danielson and Putnam.

The service is rendered through its customers, as follows:

The Connecticut Power Co.
The Essex Light and Power Co.
The Clinton Light and Power Co.

Its territory extends from Guilford, on the west, to Rhode Island, on the east—from Fishers Island, on the south, to the Massachusetts state line, at Thompson, on the north.

A total of nearly forty communities are served either directly or through its customers.

The quality and economy of this service has resulted in the closing down of nine steam stations and one Diezel engine plant, with an economic saving of many thousand tons of coal each year.

Service and economy are the reasons for our growth.

REPARATION EXPERTS' PLAN APPROVED IN WASHINGTON, LONDON AND PARIS

Experts Find That German Railroads, Ports and Terminals Have Been Brought Up to an Efficiency Unknown Before the War and That Germany is Able to Pay—Place Value of Railroads at 26,000,000,000 Gold Marks and Propose a Blanket Mortgage of 11,000,000,000 Gold Marks on Them—Large Amount of German Money Located in Foreign Lands — Mention 800,000,000 Gold Mark Foreign Loan to Capitalize Gold Bank and Meet Expenses While Balancing Budget—Would Have Germany Left Free to Exploit Her Own Resources—Recommend a General Board of Control to Include an American, Allied, Neutral and German Members.

Paris, April 9 (By the A. P.)—Plenty of time will be taken by the reparation commission to review and digest the reports of the experts committees, headed by General Dawes and Reginald McKenna, which were handed to that body today. The commission is not likely to act before the end of next week in view of the necessity of the members consulting their respective governments, according to allied circles.

However, an inkling of how the commission may dispose of the reports may be gleaned by the end of this week, and it is considered possible that Premier Poincare, Premier Ramsay MacDonald and Premier Theunis may instruct their reparations representatives to hand over the experts' documents to the governments without previous deliberation. If such action were taken it would be for the purpose of speeding up the settlement or semblance thereof before the German and French elections.

The Dawes report is unanimous; yet it does not represent anybody's particular views," was one succinct comment proffered in non-French circles today. Nevertheless, everybody wants as much of it as possible accepted as a basis of settlement. The question is who will begin?"

It can be stated now that most of the original divergencies between the French and British remain. The British believe that the question of Germany's obligations to the allies must be definitely fixed, in order to establish her credit, before a settlement is possible, and they are therefore inclined to be skeptical of General Dawes' "index of prosperity" idea, which they consider apt to lead to confusing results.

There was no discussion today among the reparation commission delegates, who were occupied in displacing official copies of the reports to their governments and studying these reports for their own information. There is general agreement that the combined efforts of General Dawes and Owen D. Young have proved to be "the most hopeful attempt at a settlement" yet made, and members of the reparation commission who are without political connections admit that if the first committee's report were treated purely as a business proposition the businessthey think to do would be to present it to Germany in decisive terms as an offer for settlement. However, many thorny political questions are likely to arise, and representative men among the allies concede that Germany will find in it many things hard to swallow.

In consequence of this the members of the reparation commission are understood to feel that the allied governments will have to devise some mid-way solution before submitting the reports to Germany, particularly as the Dawes' plan seems to require genuine German cooperation at every stage of its progress.

As one of the principal allied commissioners puts it: "If agreed to by both parties the Dawes proposals are very good; if they are imposed on Germany—well, hardly."

In any case the reparation commission's present attitude, so far as can be learned, is one of quiescence, with the probability that the reports will be carefully studied while awaiting instructions from the various governments.

REPORT REGARDED WITH FAVOR IN WASHINGTON

Washington, April 9. — Official Washington, basing its impressions on still incomplete information regarding the reports of the two expert reparations committees in Paris was inclined today to be optimistic regarding the reception which the reports will be accorded by the powers.

The belief was expressed privately by one cabinet officer that Europe finally had been given a constructive plan on which it might agree and work out a peaceful adjustment of its most difficult problem—that of producing reparations from Germany.

State department spokesmen emphasized again that the plans of the expert committees were not a governmental arrangement and reiterated their inability to express any governmental approval of the committees' work. Beyond saying it was earnestly hoped that the reports would lead to a solution of thre reparations tangle, no comment of any kind was available at the department.

The only formal statement was issued by Secretary Hoover. He pointed out some of the advantages to American trade and farm production which would follow if the plans led to a settlement of European economic problems. In addition to these advantages, it was pointed out in other quarters that a solution would aid this country by making it easier for the allied governments to repay the war-time loans made them by the United States.

"The greatest single barrier to the economic recuperation of the world has been the unsettlement of German reparations," Mr. Hoover's statement said. "With all the malign forces that have flowed from the unemployment, continued great armament, disturbance to world finance, instability of exchange—in all in a multitude of directions. If the commission now secures a just and practical settlement, the whole world will benefit.

"Restoration of courage, enterprise, and confidence in Europe, increase in industrial production, decrease in unemployment, will in the end all react beneficially to our own people. The consumption of foodstuffs that will follow decreased unemployment will benefit the American farmer. Everybody gains in a stable and peaceful world—nobody loses."

Those parts of the committee plans which had reached government quarters here tonight and which had been tentatively examined appeared to contain nothing in conflict with the declared policies of the Washington administration on the questions with which they dealt. The decision of the first committee not to relieve Germany of her obligations to make just reparation payments and to protect just claims of th allies against Germany was expressed in keeping with the desires of this government.

REPORTS MEET APPROVAL OF BRITISH OFFICIALS

London, April 9.—(By The A. P.)—That the plan of the committees of experts should prove unacceptable to Germany is unbelievable to British officials who expressed their opinion on the subject today. They qualified this opinion, however, with the reservation that one never could tell whether Germany would display common sense or stupidity at a critical moment in her dealings with the powers.

The hypothesis of the experts that the fiscal and economic unity of Germany must be restored to the Germans, and other provisions of the report which the British have urged since former Premier Andrew Bonar Law made his proposals in 1921 for a settlement of the controversy, naturally are welcomed here, while the signatures of the French experts, which it is assumed are appended to the findings of the experts, although the official copies of the report have not yet arrived in London, are taken as an indication of a French change in heart regarding the whole scheme for a complete and final reparations settlement with Germany.

PRAISE FOR REPARATION COMMITTEE'S FINDING

New York, Apr. 9.—Expressing conviction that the Dawes report, made public today, would provide a working basis for the solution of Europe's problems, bankers and business leaders today praised the committee's recommendations as contructive steps toward stabilization of international commerce and finance and valuable contributions to peace. More extended comment was withheld until an opportunity could be found for studying the full report in detail.

CHARGED WITH FORGING NAME OF C. M. SCHWAB

New York April 9—Threatened with forfeiture of $10,000 bail and with summary arrest on a bench warrant, Myrtle B. Hayes, charged with having written the name of Charles M. Schwab on a $25,000 note, came before General Sessions Judge McIntyre today to be tried for second degree forgery.

Five jurors were drawn before adjournment, one had been rejected because he had made shoes for Mr. Schwab and another because Mrs. Hayes did not like his looks.

The forgery charges, growing out of the failure of a hotel construction scheme Mrs. Hayes was promoting at Brookline, Mass., led Schwab to testify at a bankruptcy hearing in Long Island City that he had loaned the woman $2,000 in 1902 to start a millinery shop. Since then, said Schwab, numerous demands had been made upon him for money, based on threats of publicity which would have permitted an erroneous interpretation of his previous association with her.

When the case was called for trial this morning after six postponements, Mrs. Hayes' attorney pleaded for further delay, saying his client was suffering from tubercular laryngitis and to bring her into court might prove fatal.

25 KLANSMEN ARE HELD WITHOUT BAIL FOR MURDER

Edensburg, Pa., April 9.—Denying an application for a writ of habeas corpus, Judge John A. Evans tonight ordered 25 men, said to be members of the Ku Klux Klan, held without bail for the June term of criminal court upon charges of murder and riot in connection with the fatal disorders at Lilly, Saturday, between townspeople and visiting klansmen.

Judge Evans declared that in the opinion of the court it was unlawful in Pennsylvania for a body of men to assemble when dressed in gowns and masks. Such demonstrations, he said, tend to put people in fear and that it was unlawful in this state to stage any demonstration having that effect. The court defined the law pertaining to rioting, declaring that any person who participated was liable for actions committed by any one in the crowd.

Conflicting testimony was taken at the hearing before the decision was handed down as to the first shot fired in the riot in which two Lilly men were killed, another died of injuries and a score of others wounded. Some witnesses testified that a masked klansman fired the first shot while others declared that a particular klansman was the first casualty, asserting he was shot through the wrist before general firing began. All were agreed, however, that the riot followed the turning of a stream of water from a fire hose upon the klansmen as they gathered at the Lilly depot preparatory to entraining for Joansstown after having held a demonstration at Lilly. The witnesses were also agreed that the general firing lasted only a few minutes.

The 26 defendants were brought to Ebensburg on a special street car today from Johnstown where they were arrested upon their arrival there from Lilly after the riot. As they left the street car they formed into a procession, and headed by one of their members carrying an American flag, marched to the court room which the defendants were smaller American flag and a white carnation in the lapel of his coat which was removed, however, when they entered the court room.

FIRE DESTROYED $500,000 HOUSE IN GREENWICH

Greenwich, Conn., April 9.—"Fairoroft", the handsome summer home of J. Rich Steers, on Upper King street, here, was totally destroyed by fire early this morning, involving a loss estimated at $500,000. The place was being decorated by painters for the occupancy of the family the middle of May. It is believed spontaneous combustion from the paints caused the fire. When the firemen arrived the house was a mass of flames, and water facilities were insufficient to aid them to any extent. However, all the valuable furniture and paintings on the first floor were saved.

The fire was discovered by the caretaker's daughter, Miss Nina Field. Mr. and Mrs. Steers were notified and arrived here. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

Illinois Delegation Severe Blow to Johnson

Future Course of the Senator to Be Decided After Conference With Men in Several States.

Chicago, April 9.—(By The A. P.)—The future course of Senator Hiram Johnson, candidate for the republican presidential nomination, will be decided upon by the senator within the next few days after conferences with key men in several states.

While there is no confirmation of the suggestion that the Johnson candidacy will be withdrawn, those who have been active in the campaign in the middle west make no secret of the fact that the Johnson hopes received a severe blow to the Michigan, Nebraska, and Illinois primaries.

That Senator Johnson staked great hopes on his chances in Illinois has long been conceded by his supporters and his defeat yesterday, with the Coolidge victories in Michigan and Nebraska, are known to have created a new situation in the Johnson camp.

Supporters of the senator have acknowledged from the first that they were waging an uphill battle and the recent withdrawal of considerable financial support added to the primary results of the last three weeks, have brought about a situation calling for decisive action on the part of the senator.

Concern for the loyal friends and supporters throughout the country also have contributed considerable in time and money to the individual state fights in behalf of Senator Johnson, has prompted him to confer with the key men before finally deciding what will be his future course.

"Senator Johnson lost Illinois after the most courageous and manly fight ever made by a candidate for public office in America, Harold L. Ickes, Illinois manager for Senator Johnson, said today.

"Notwithstanding the opposition which a weaker man would have refused to meet," Mr. Ickes said, "and despite desertions on the eve of battle, Senator Johnson has been making his fight. He has attacked the unholy alliance between corrupt big business and corrupt politics and this fight will continue to wage."

"Senator Johnson had had against him unlimited money and almost universally hostile press and a well knit, smoothly running federal machine composed of thousands of government employes throughout the country. In addition he had had arrayed against him state and local machines interlocking with the federal machine and giving it greater driving power."

JOHNSON KNOWS NOTHING ABOUT IT

Washington, April 9.—"I know nothing about it." Senator Johnson, republican, California, said today when advised of reports from Chicago that his future course in the campaign for the republican presidential nomination would be decided at an early conference of his campaign advisers.

Senator Johnson said he had reached Washinton only this morning that he had been engaged all day in consideration of the pending immigration bill, and that he had not had time for any conference.

NEBRASKA PRIMARY ENDORSES COOLIDGE

Omaha, April 9—President Coolidge's endorsement by Nebraska republicans was accentuated as the final returns from Tuesday's primary came in late today. As the tabulation of this drew to a close, reports from 1,896 precincts out of the 1,936 in the state gave him 64,481 against 36,443 for Senator Hiram Johnson of California.

RETURNS FROM ILLINOIS PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY

Chicago, April 9—(By the A. P.—One of the closet finishes ever witnessed in an Illinois primary race tonight promised to make historic the desperate political struggle of Senator Medill McCormick and former Governor Chas S. Deneen fr the republican nomination for United States senator. Senator McCormick during the day slowly reduced an early lead to fewer than 4,500 votes, but tonight, more than 24 hours after the polls closed former governor Deneen picked up more than 1,000 votes on returns from 4,734 of the State's 5,668 precints and had an advantage of more than 5,500 votes. These precincts, leaving one sixth of the state missing, but including Cook County (Chicago), practically complete, gave Deneen 393,603; McCormick 388,098.

Reports from 4,505 precints a few hours earlier had given Deneen an advantage of 4,460 votes which was slightly less than the 4,658 lead he had on the basis of returns from 4,068 precints.

President Coolidge continued to pile up his advantage over Senator Hiram Johnson for the republican presidential preference with indications that his majority will mount to more than 100,000. Tonight 4,592 precincts, including Cook County, (Chicago) practically gave him 413,933 and the California $19,257, the president leading by more than 11,000 votes on the last 500 precints to be reported.

In the republican gubernatorial race which developed into the hottest state contest, Governor Len Small, although he lost Cook County by a few hundred votes, had an advantage of more than 40,000 by virtue of his rural strength 4,879 precincts giving him 455,095, while state Senator Thurlow G. Essington, his opponent had 414,127.

William G. McAdoo, the only democratic presidential candidate, received more than 100,000 votes with half the state heard from, but was rejected by Illinois democrats who picked an uninstructed delegation to the national convention in preference to a delegation pledged to the former secretary of the treasury.

Norman L. Jones, nominated by the democrats for governor, continued to maintain a lead of about two to one over Lee O'Neil Browne, his nearest opponent. Reports from 3,299 precincts gave him 118,965 and Browne 64,406.

William McKinley, who ran second to Colonel L. A. Sprague for the democratic nomination for United States senator, tonight conceded his defeat and sent a message to Sprague pledging hi mhis support. Reports from 3,118 precincts gave Sprague 134,152 and McKinley 60,546.

The American Chemical Society reports a case of paralysis of the hand caused by the poisonous fumes from a small gas heater

Industrial Survey Of New England

Labor in Connecticut Well Employed, With a Slight Surplus of Workers in Cotton and Silk Industries.

Boston, April 9.—Part time operations were general in New England textile and other mills last month, according to the monthly report of the United States industrial survey, made public here today. Building operations were active and a housing shortage was reported from sections of Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. Regarding individual states the report says:

"Massachusetts: Nearly all plants operated, but many were on part time schedules and with reduced forces. Building activities continued brisk. * * * The demand for farm labor about equalled the supply. A housing shortage existed in certain parts of the state.

"Rhode Island: Industrial employment showed a decrease during the month. Some textile mills closed entirely, while others were on a part time schedule, affecting a large number of workers. The metal trades were working on part time. Worsted and yarn mills employed night shifts in some parts of the state. Building operations were fairly active for this season of the year. * * * A housing shortage existed in some sections.

"Connecticut: Nearly all plants were operating, with many on a full time basis, and labor as a whole was well employed. There was a slight surplus of workers in the coton and silk industries. Building activities gave employment to a large number of men, with craftsmen well employed. A housing shortage existed in certain sections.

FORMER MESSINGER BOY HEADS NEW YORK CENTRAL

He was chosen by the board of directors to fill the vacancy a created a month ago when a fall from a horse killed A. H. Smith. Mr. Crowley's salary, it is understood, would be $100,000 a year.

Prior to his elevation today, Mr. Crowley was vice-president in charge of operations for the New York Central; The Ottawa & New York; The Adirondack & St. Lawrence; The Raquette Lake; The Fulton Chain; The Toledo & Ohio Central; The Kanawah & Michigan; The Kanawah & West Virginia; and The Zanesville & Western railways.

Raymond D. Starbuck was named vice-president to succeed Mr. Crowley. Albert H. Harris who had been prominently mentioned for the presidency, was elected to a newly created chairmanship of the finance committee, retaining also his post as vice-president in charge of finances and corporate relations. George E. Harwood was elected vice-president in charge of improvements and development.

Born on a farm near Cattaraugus, N. Y., 60 years ago, Mr. Crowley acquired the nickname "Pat" as messinger boy on the Erie. Then he started climbing the railroad man's ladder to fame. He became successively, telegrah operator, station agent, train dispatcher, trainmaster, division superintendent, general superintendent, assistant general manager, general manager, vice-president and today president.

Because of his practical knowledge of all branches of the service his forte was in the zone of railroad operation, because of his popularity with the personnel, his nickname has clung to him. He has represented the New York Central in most of its major labor negotiations of recent years. As evidence of his popularity with employes, telegrams, telephone messages and flowers from them deluged his office today when news of his promotion was broadcast.

COUNSEL RETAINED FOR SENATE REVENUE PROBE

Francis J. Heney of California, at the Expense of Senator Couzens, Republican, Michigan, Engaged as Special Counsel to Conduct Committee Inquiry of the Internal Revenue Bureau — Proposition of Couzens Was Put Through With the Aid of Committee Democrats.

Washington, April 9.—The peace of the senate special committee investigating the internal revenue bureau was shattered today when Senator Couzens, republican, Michigan, was joined by committee democrats in a successful effort to employ Francis J. Heney of California, at the Michigan senator's expense as special counsel to conduct the committee inquiry.

The resolution went through, three to two, despite the reiterated prediction of Senator Watson, republican, Kentucky, that the appointment of Heney, famous for many years as a public prosecutor, meant "another senate muck-raking" expedition, and Senator Ernst's declaration that it was aimed by Senator Couzens at Secretary Mellon because the secretary had "spanked" the senator in their recent public tax controversy.

Senators King of Utah and Jones of New Mexico, were the democrats, who voted with Senator Couzens. It developed in the committee discussion that the first suggestion for a committee counsel had come to Senator Couzens from Senator Jones, when he had observed, Senator Cuzens said, "me flundring arunr here," and getting nowhere with the inquiry.

When it was brought out that Senator Couzens, one of the richest men in the senate, proposed to pay all Heney's expenses in connection with the investigation, Senator Ernst sharply questioned the propriety of that action. Senator Jones, however, defended Couzens' action and Senator King appeared to take the same view.

The Heney employment resolution landed on the committee table like a bombshell, so far as Senator Watson was concerned. He bluntly declared Heney "well enough" to know that the hearing would be turned into a "muck-raking" if Heney was given "a chance." Senator Watson asked Senator Couzens why he had consulted with democratic committee members on his plan and not with his "republican colleagues."

Senator Couzens replied that he "recognized no republican or other colleagues," when he was "going after government business."

"They all look alike to me," he said.

Senator Couzens admitted that he had "resented" from the first the appointment of four members of the busy finance committee to compose the investigating committee with himself. He left the inference that he considered this an attempt to hamper the investigation and charged specifically that Senator Ernst had tried to "block" his efforts in the committee. The Michigan senator conceded, however, that Chairman Watson had not sought to curb the hearing thus far had.

"This work is not going to be stopped," Senator Couzens declared heatedly. "I do not propose to be blocked, sidetracked or diverted by any senator or group of senators."

Senator Watson said he regarded it as "a little unfortunate that Senator Couzens' resolution to investigate the the bureau had come on the heels of his public controversy with Secretary Mellon. The Indiana senator suggested that this had given the committee proceeding the appearance of being aimed at Mr. Mellon in reprisal.

The original resolution submitted by Senator Couzens was views by Senators King and Jones as committing conduct of the inquiry too fully to Heney's hands. Senator Ernst described it as a "resigning" by the committee in Heney's favor. Senator Couzens hotly denied that purpose and accepted without argument an amendment by Senator King designed to keep proceedings wholly within the direct control of the committee.

The resolution went through in that form. After duly recording himself and Senator Ernst as voting against it, Senator Watson declared it adopted and turning to Senator Couzens with a resigned air, asked:

"Is that all, Jim?"

It was not, for Senator Couzens had a number of bureau officials waiting to testify. When he began examination of the first, Chief Engineer Greenadge of bureau amortization section, however, the other four committee members excused themselves and did not come back during the hour of complicated statistics that followed. When Senator Couzens finally wound up the session for the day, he announced that the committee would meet again on call of the chair. He said "he hoped" Heney would be prepared to take up his duties at the next meeting.

Secretary Mellon informed the committee during the day that the bureau had addressed inquiries to several companies in which he is a minority stockholder, seeking waivers on privacy of their tax returns. The concerns were named by Senator Couzens.

Mr. Mellon's letter to Chairman Watson said the secretary had "never heard" of the Elliott Machine Tool company, but offered to supplement the bureau's request as to tax returns of the other companies by "personal letters" to the directors.

Another company named by the Michigan senator as a "Mellon company" was the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, and he put in the record today a letter from that company saying that Mr. Mellon was only a small stockholder and that it had received no "special" treatment on amortization allowances "either before or since" Mr. Mellon became secretary of the treasury.

POPE NOT AT DEDICATION OF K. OF C. BUILDING

Rome, April 9—(By the A. P.)—Pope Pius did not attend tonight the dedicatory ceremony at the Knights of Columbus Welfare building, as it had been expected he would, the sudden decision of the pontiff to be present was generally attributed to a report that this might be interpreted as leaving vatican territory. Therefore to have no doubt arise, his holiness preferred to stay in his apartments.

The announcement that Pope Pius would not be present came two hours before the ceremony was to take place. It was said that he would remain in his suite and allow the ceremony to be carried out by the new American Cardinals.

Cardinal Hayes, Archbishop of New York, officiated at the ceremony of consecrating the boys' chapel and Cardinal Mundelein, archbishop of Chicago, at the Girls' chapel. Then Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State, at the head of ten other Cardinals made an inspection of the buildings.

The point from which it was thought Pope Pius would leave the threshold of St. Peter's tonight had been cleverly marked out today by an array of photographers, who had their camcras focused on the doorway newly cut for the pope to pass through into the welfare buildings' gymnasium. The photographers waited patiently, their eyes eagerly fastened on the dorway and with their fingers ready to operate their cameras. Perched at every vantage point, in the Knights of Columbus buildings and in the leonis wall, were photographers with their cameras pointed in the direction where it was believed the Pope could be snapshotted.

REPORTED ABDUCTION WAS AN ELOPEMENT

Springfield, Mass., April 9.—The reported abduction of Alice Joulwan, 17, of Pottsville, where she was a high school student, in an automobile bearing a Springfield registration was traced to this city today where the police found that the girl was married to Alfred Joulwan, her cousin, and that the pair were living in the home of the bridegroom's mother. As the girl appeared happy, there seemed to be no ground for police action. The girl's father last night sent a telegram to the police here asking that the pair be traced and saying that the girl had been taken away by force after being called from a class room. The pair were traced from Pottsville to Hartford, Conn., where the trail was lost. Friends here say the father of the girl objected to the marriage, because the pair were cousins and also because of the girls youth.

EXPERTS DISCOVER SHORTAGE IN HONOLULU

Honolulu, April 9—Private auditors empoyed to investigate the city water works department today reported they had uncovered an apparent shortage in excess of $129,000. D. S. K. Pahu, Chief clerk of the Water works department, has been sentenced to five to ten years for embezzlement. J. P. Awanna, water works department clerk, is facing trial on a like charge.

CONDITION OF STINNES IS SLIGHTLY IMPROVED

Berlin, April 9—(By the A. P.)—The highest German medical talent is tonight extending itself in desperate efforts to save the life of Hugo Stinnes of the great industrial magnate, and while the attending surgeons say he is holding his own, they are none too sanguine over the final outcome of an illness, which thus far has necessitated three major surgical operations.

Herr Stinnes was conscious the greater part of the day, but his constitutionh which for months past has plainly revealed the strain born of his his ceaseless pursuit of fresh industrial and financial conquests, is apparently unequal to the ravages of the violent fever to which he has been subjected in the past forty-eight hours.

The magnate's wife, four sons and three daughters are keeping anxious watch at the bedside, while half a dozen secretaries are near at hand. The present relapse is believed to have been wholly due to restlessness displayed by Herr Stinnes immediately after the first operation for gallstones, and his premature attempt to sit up to study balance sheets is said to be responsible for his serious setback. The illness of Herr Stinnes, which has heretofore only slightly occupied public curiosity, is tonight the sole topic of discussion.

SENATE COMMITTEE ENDORSES HOUSE SOLDIER BONUS BILL

Washington, April 9—Agreement was reached today by republican members of the senate finance committee to support the soldier bonus bill passed by the house. The committee, having disposed of the tax reduction measure, will take up the bonus bill tomorrow and it was predicted by some of the majority members that the measure would be ordered reported immediately.

Such action will place both the revenue and the bonus bills before the senate, as Chairman Smoot of the committee plans to introduce tomorrow the tax bill ordered reportedby the committee yesterday.

While no action is expected to be taken by the senate on either bill before next week, it is considered likely by some of the leaders that the bonus bill will be called up first.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark W. Bushnell of 194 Pearl street, Thompsonville, are patients in St. Joseph's hospital, suffering from painful injuries as the result of an automobile accident at noon, Wednesday, at Mansfield Depot. Mr. and Mrs. Bushnell were returning from Providence where they had left their son, a freshman at Brown university. Mr. Bushnell was driving his Hudson sedan and states that in some unaccountable manner his senses seemed to leave him and then the crash came. He learned later that the automobile had left the highway and collided head-on with a large elm by the side of his road, one-eight of a mile north of the Mansfield State Hospital and Training school. When Mr. and Mrs. William F. Maine, of Windham, arrived at the spot in their car from Stafford Springs, Mr. and Mrs. Bushnell were both dazed and could not at that time tell how the accident had happened. Mrs. Bushnell was bleeding from a cut on her neck and could not walk without assistance. Mr. Maine took the injured people to St. Joseph's hospital here where they were treated by Dr. Owen O'Neill. Mrs. Bushnell was suffering from bruises about the body, a sprained ankle and lacerations about the neck. Mr. Bushnell had a fractured right hand and lacerations on both legs. They will be patients at the hospital for several days. The damaged machine was hauled to this city for repairs.

Shea had claimed that he could see no reason why his wife should leave his home and that she was welcome to return at any time and he would provide for her. The plaintiff said that she had been separated from her husband for some fifteen months and that she had been supporting herself for the greater part of that time. She had been out of work since March 25, thereby losing an income of $14 a week. Her board came to $9 a week but she would be satisfied with $10 a week from her husband. In answer to a question she replied that she would go back to live with her husband if he made a home for her away from his people. Attorney Gaucher, for the accused, informed the court that no further steps were necessary as his client was willing to do just what the plaintiff had requested. The court decided that the case be continued for one week while a settlement was being reached.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

Speaking of crows—In 1695 the town of Eastham, Mass., issued this arbitrary but droll order: "Every unmarried man in the township shall kill six blackbirds or three crows while he remains single; as a penalty for not doing it shall not be married until he obeys this order." The fate of a bachelor in those days was sad; for they were seldom permitted to live alone, or even to choose a residence, but had to live wherever the court assigned. In Hartford "lonemen" had to pay twenty shillings a week to the town for the privilege of living alone. It would seem as if the crows in Eastham would have been exterminated in short order.

Members of the local rifle club who have interviewed Clues Watson as to his stand regarding the war declared on the crows says: "That the crow is a destroyer of bird life and an enemy of the farmer. Crows eat the eggs of game, song and insectivorous birds, and kill their young. The feathered outlaws destroy growing crops and cost the farmers of this country millions of dollars every year. The crow is a pest and a nuisance and should be exterminated."

THREE CLASSES INVOLVED IN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS

An analysis of the causes of more than 15,000 motor vehicle accidents in Connecticut during 1923 was presented by Prof. John C. Tracy of the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale in New Haven Wednesday, to the motor vehicle traffic conference held at the University in New Haven Wednesday under patronage of the Hartley Foundation and in which the university, the state motor vehicle department and municipalities participated.

Prof. Tracy said in his prefactory remarks that cold facts do not ordinarily appeal to people, but some of the facts he had may shock people into realization of the terrible seriousness of motor vehicle accidents. Three classes of people are to be considered, he said, in attacking the problem of prevention; first, the criminally irresponsible, reckless and headless, relatively small in number; second, those who are earnestly striving to be careful; third, those who are ignorant or indifferent, this class comprising the largest number.

Prof. Tracy illustrated his figures with charts. He had on record more than 17,000 accidents in which property damage exceeded $10. These embraced those in which 280 persons were killed, 500 seriously hurt, and more than 3,500 slightly hurt. The death rate was proportionally greatest for children under ten, and the next greatest for elderly people. Accidents increased from 2,000 in 1919 to over 17,000 in 1923, and the number was double in the last two years. For the first three months this year there have been 45 fatalities as against 16 in the same months in 1923. In 1919 there were five times as many deaths from typhoid fever as from motor vehicles but in 1923 the figures were reversed. Property loss from motor vehicle accidents increased $60,000 in 1923. Pecuniary loss from [illegible] more than $1,- [illegible] estimated at $4,-

The greatest number of accidents occur in the summer and early fall with the peak in August. For the last nine months of the year most accidents occurred on Saturday and Sunday. Nearly half the total accidents occurred in New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport, Waterbury, New Britain, New London and Meriden.

In 16,500 accidents more than 18,000 were the fault of the operator; nearly 3,500 were the fault of other persons; 500 were due to faulty equipment, and the remainder, only 2.7 per cent. were due to miscellaneous causes.

Of accidents resulting in death 47 per cent. were the fault of the operator; 46 per cent. the fault of other persons, and 3 per cent. due to faulty equipment, leaving 4 per cent. due to other causes. About one-third of the accidents in New Haven, Hartford and Bridgeport were due to cars registered in other states.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

William Danielson, of the family after which this place is named, died Wednesday evening at his home in Brooklyn, where he had been a resident for many years. Mrs. Danielson died about two years ago. Richard Danielson of Groton, Mass., is a son and George E. Danielson of Danielson is a brother of Mr. Danielson.

Stages of the new romantic stage coach days may be looking on in contemplation, these days, as workmen proceed with the tearing down of an old barn on the Testrault property, where Broad and Franklin streets cross, known since memory runneth not to the contrary as Christian Hill.

The barn stands on what was tavern property in the old days when stage coaches rolled over the hills to and fro from Providence, on what was the Providence-Hartford turnpike. The tavern stands nearby and is in a good state of preservation. For years the property was known as the Butts place.

Little authentic data relative to the history of this tavern property has come down to the present motorized age, but out of the memory of the older residents there are recollections of what still older people had told them about this old and favorite resting place for travelers.

It was a "change station" for the horses that hauled the stage coaches over the old turnpike, now a state highway all the way between Providence and Hartford excepting for the distance between the town of Killingly from the foot of Spalding's hill at South Killingly to the foot of Franklin street, a distance of a little more than three miles.

As a relay station numbers of horses were always kept in the barn that soon will be no more. As such a changing point for the horses the tavern property was a favorite stop-over place and all the ancient cheer and comfort of an inn that the poets have sung about was realized there. It was well over a half a century since those days. The history of the barn probably goes back close to a century. It has stood, however, through many periods of change in transportation methods to the time when a glorified stage coach service is again in vogue, for fine motor coaches are today rolling over the very same route that the stage coaches traveled in coming to this tavern barn, with the exception of the little distance mentioned. The barn was nearing a state of collapse and is being taken down for that reason.

Mention of this tavern property recalls that another tavern of this route stands opposite St. James' church and is now occupied as tenements. The great barn that was on this tavern place was destroyed by fire about 35 years ago and its site is today covered by dwelling property.

A boy who said his name was Arthur Gilkerson, 13, is back at his home in Anthony, R. I., this morning after an experience that brought him to Danielson and eventually enlisted the aid of Selectmen John A. Gilbert in restoring him to his home and people, though the reunion with his parents may have been anything but alluring.

Tuesday afternon while in the town of Sterling with a motor truck, Marden Young was asked by a man if he would give the boy who was being represented as being on his way to Putnam, a ride as far as Danielson. Mr. Young readily agreed, but when he arrived here he ascertained that his passenger was not particularly interested in getting to Putnam. His home station, it developed, was Anthony R. I. and he rather hankered to go back.

A peddler of fruit had taken the boy along on a motor vehicle to help him with his work during Tuesday and after getting him miles from home summarily dismissed him and left him to get home as best he could. Such was the boy's plight when the ride to Danielson was solicited for him in Sterling.

Telephone messages Wednesday brought out the fact that the parents of the boy and others searched for him until midnight Tuesday. Wednesday afternoon the boy was taken to Moosup, having been kindly treated during his stay here. Cash was given railroad fare for Anthony. It was proposed that a reception committee would be awaiting him on his arrival home and that he will not go away with fruit peddlers again for some time to come because his condition will not be such as to insure comfortable riding.

A flock of pigeons that for several years past has grown in numbers while making headquarters in the belfry of the Westfield Congregational church, has been decimated by a man who used a rifle with a silencer and a spotlight to seek them out while they were at roost. The pigeons were free agents not the property of anyone in so far as has been ascertained, and, incidentally, a great nuisance. Living in houses in all the territory about the church they were disturbers of the early evening quiet and a source of injury to property. Those who have been annoyed by them are appreciative of the fact that so many of them have been done away with, drastic treatment on the problem, but the only effective one available. A few of the pigeons remain, and these seem to be endeavoring to make up in noisy qualities the power lost through the slaying of the major part of the flock. A little more spotlight shooting and a perfect job will have been completed.

Wednesday afternoon at 1.30 at her home on Broad Street, funeral services for Ella Frances Sayles widow of Congressman Charles A. Russell, were conducted by Rev. Walter B. Williams of the Westfield Congregational church and attended by many relatives and friends of the family. The hymns at the service were sung by Mrs. Harold B. Atwood. Burial was in the family lot in the High street cemetery at Bayville. The bearers were Irving W. Davis, Attorney E. L. Darbie, Roland H. Gray, Commander F. Jacobs, U. S. N., Alfred L. Reed and Harold B. Attwood. There were beautiful floral pieces. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

One of the largest funerals in the Sacred Heart church, in Wauregan for years, was that Wednesday morning, of Louis Kerouack, for forty years a resident of the village. Rev. J. C. Matnieu, the pastor, was celebrant of the high mass of requiem, attended by a congregation that filled the church. Burial was in the Sacred Heart cemetery. The bearers were Napoleon Plankey, David Larose, Joseph Messier, Alfred Mesnier, Alfred Brodeur and Henry Despathy. Louis E. Kennedy was the funeral director.

Construction of the new dancing pavilion at Wildwood park on foundations built last fall will be under way within a short time. The new pavilion will be larger and much more attractive than the one it will replace.

Kenworthy; treasurer, Frank T. Preston; C. of C., Charles E. Franklin; C. of G., Charles A. Burdick; steward, Harold G. Franklin; sentinel, Edward S. Carpenter. The election was Tuesday evening, with about 100 in attendance. Supper was served by the members of the Eastern Star chapter.

A message received here by Mrs. L. Bargtow brought the information that the body of her sister, Miss Mabel Drabble, army nurse attached to the National Military Hospital at Sawtelle, Cal., who died there Sunday, will arrive in Providence Sunday. Funeral services are to be held in Providence next week. The body will be brought to Dayville for burial.

Mention in this column Wednesday morning of the loss of a barrel of flour from the motor truck of a Pomfret resident caught the eye of the finder and the flour will be returned. In falling from the truck the barrel rolled off the state highway and went 200 feet into the brush. The flour was the property of James Nuttall and was found by Frank Kanig of Pomfret.

PUTNAM

Rotarians of this city have enthusiastically entered upon a program of observance of Boys' week in connection with the international program that Rotarians have arranged for the period beginning Sunday, April 27.

What the Putnam Rotary club purposes to do was made public Wednesday morning following a meeting held the previous evening.

G. Harold Gilpatric has been appointed chairman of the ministers of the city and interest them in preaching sermons on Sunday, April 27, that will be of special interest to boys. An effort will be made to have hundreds of boys attend these services.

Monday, April 28, is designated as Boys' day in school. Supt. Ralph C. Jenkins of Putnam's schools, will have charge of this day's program and will arrange to have citizens give talks to the boys at schools. These talks will be on such subjects as Education, Citizenship.

Tuesday, April 29, will be Boys in Industry day. President John F. Reardon of the Rotary club has charge of the program for this date. He will interest as many manufacturing concerns and owners of other industries as may be possible in granting permission for boys to go through these plants on inspection tours on this day.

Wednesday, April 30, being the anniversary of the Rotarians, no special program is arranged for the boys.

Thursday, May 1, will be Boys' day out of doors. Fred Prince will work out the details of the plan for this day. It is planned to have various Rotarians lead groups of boys on five mile hikes over different routes leading to some central point where a hot dog roast will be held.

Friday, May 2, is set aside for evening entertainment at home by Rotarians of their boys—and if they have no boys, then, other boys who may be invited in. Such entertaining Rotarians will invite some other man to be present with them to assist in making the evening attractive. Ray Bosworth will arrange the Friday program.

Saturday, May 3, will be athletic and Track day. Henry Lyon will have charge of the program. On this date there will be preliminary meets to try out for the Y. M. C. A.-County High schools track meet to be held later at Brooklyn. These meets will be at Putnam, Thompson, Eastford, Woodstock and Pomfret and will furnish much of interest for the boys.

The Rotarians will make other announcements later relative to their Boys' week program.

The police have been notified of a recent robbery at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tourtellotte, at Putnam Heights. Burglars entered the house and ransacked rooms on the lower floor, while members of the household were asleep upstairs. Contents of bureau drawers were strewn about and the house otherwise upset. The money was brought through the break is said to be between 10 and $15. Entrance to the home was gained through a window on the lower floor. Exit was through the rear door of the house.

Love for the children on a farm where he spent the winter and where he was generously rationed with candy by his juvenile friends, made a pony owned by Ernest L. Richards of this city practically forget his master and insist about as forcefully as a pony can against leaving his boarding place in the Sawyer district. He balked like a regular horse when he discovered that he was being taken away. No inducement could budge him until the expedience of holding a bag of candy before his nose and walking along ahead of him was hit upon. Through this subterfuge he was induced to come along to Putnam—where he is as lonely for the little friends that were his chums during the winter as they are mournful for him.

Mrs. Caroline P. Medbury, 59, wife of Daniel N. Medbury, is dead at their home in Pomfret. Mrs. Medbury was a native of Putnam, a daughter of Mrs. and Mrs. Sanford Randall, resident of the Perrin hill section of the town. Mrs. Medbury leaves her husband, two sons, Raymond and Daniel, and two daughter, Mrs. Alden Cole and Mrs. Fred Ash.

Chaplain Albert Stone, U. S. N., formerly pastor of the Baptist church in this city, was the speaker Tuesday evening at the annual roll call of the church here. Chaplain Stone is now located at the Submarine Base, Groton. His talk, dealing in a measure with present day conditions throughout the country, was of exceptional interest, especially in its consideration of honesty and discipline as factors in restoring the nation to a normal balance. Chaplain Stone's reference to a movement that is in foot in New London toward providing for religious instruction in the public schools held the closest attention of his congregation.

Following is the program for public closing exercises of the Putnam evening school to be held this (Thursday) evening in the assembly hall of the high school: Piano solo, Dorothy Keefe song, Columbia the Gem of the Ocean, school; vocal solo, In the Garden of My Heart, Alfred Bonneville; vocal solo, When the Flag Goes By, Henry Trudeau; The American's Creed, school; vocal duet, I'll Take You Home Again, Pal of Mine, A Bonneville, H. Trudeau; vocal solo, Fiddle and I, Anna Paul-Hus; instrumental Trio, Bessie Obiezt, violin; Sammie Obiets, cornet, Eleanor Irving, piano; address, C. E. Torrey; presentation of certificates, Supt. R. C. Jenkins; song, Tenting Tonight, school.

The body of Miss Mabel Drabble, who died last Sunday in Sawtelle, Cal., will arrive in Providence Sunday. Miss Drabble's brother, Jesse, is coming east with the body.

The first in a series of district meetings under the auspices of republican women will be held in Odd Fellows' hall here this (Thursday) evening. Mrs. Joseph Merritt of Hartford will be the speaker. Mrs. Merritt is known throughout the state as a Girls Scout leader. This meeting will attract attendance from all the towns in the 28th senatorial district.

Mrs. John Jarvis successfully underwent a surgical operation at the Day Kimball hospital and was reported Wednesday as in favorable condition.

Rev. J. J. Elty, pastor of Holy Trinity church at Pomfret is steadily improving at the hospital, where he has been a patient and seriously ill for some time.

The Cat and the Canary, the first play given here in a number of weeks, pleased the audience that attended the Bradley theatre Wednesday evening. This is a mystery play reminding one of The Bat, but even more mysterious.

Supt. Frederick Dumas of the street department had a force of men engaged Wednesday in resetting street curbing opposite the new Putnam Savings bank building. The curbing is being moved back about six inches, putting it in line with other curbing in the vicinity.

Israel Putnam lodge of Odd Fellows has appointed a committee to arrange for the annual Memorial day observances in honor of deceased members of the order. It is likely this observance will be held Sunday, April 27.

The operetta, Princess Chrysanthemum is to be given at Woodstock Academy by a cast selected from members of the student body. Miss Marguerite C. Burns, supervisor of music in Woodstock's schools, has charge of the production.

PLAINFIELD

At a special meeting of Plainfield grange, the postponed programme which was presented by the men, was given before a large audience. The programme was open to visitors and many attended. The programme was competitive, the women members having given a similar one six weeks ago. The programme was as follows:

Yale Boola Song, with encore, Male quartet, Fred Lyon, Harold Bnutgess, Walter Lathrop and Elmer Greene; solo, Yankee Doodle Boy, Lewis Frink; addresses, Opportunities For the Young People of Today, Rev. William C. Prentise, and Jason P. Lathrop; solo, in costume, Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground, George Dawley; reading, William Exley; reading, William Hall; selection, Bull Dog On the Bank, Male quartette.

When the judges, Mrs. Lillian Frink, James Towne and Miss Grace Dawley, all of Canterbury, added the number of points won by the women, and the number won by the men, and compared the two scores, they found a tie. Credit was then given to the men for the excellent announcing of the programme by Everett E. Brown, the men thereby winning. The women have to furnish the prize, which will be a supper at a special meeting on April 23, when the first and second degrees will be worked by the degree team.

YANTIC

At the annual meeting of the Yantic Engine company, held Monday evening, the following officers were elected: Foreman, Hermon J. Gibbs; first assistant foreman, James Hart; second assistant foreman, Joseph Wheeler; treasurer, Andrew Grieve; secretary, William E. Manning; librarian, Frederick Kingsley; engineer, Frank Johnson; first assistant engineer, Edward Seymerock; second assistant engineer, Ellis Bentley; third assistant engineer, Roy Errickson; fourth assistant engineer, Eugene Manning; steward, Edward Flynn.

There were very few of the active members absent when the roll was called and there were contests over a number of the offices, which made the meeting a lively one. The past year was a very active one both in number of calls answered for fires and the social affairs held. The company responded for 31 fires during the year.

Much regret was felt over the resignation from office of Edward Smith. He has been a member of the company for twenty-one years during which time he has served almost continuously in the various offices and for the past several years has been the first assistant foreman.

The foreman named the following members on the entertainment committee: Robert Lyons, Andrew Larado, and Thomas Sullivan. The following were named as noxzlemen: First nozzle, John Lamphere and Ernest Sherman; second, Vincent Perkowsky and Walter Stott. The apparatus was turned over to the newly elected officers in excellent condition, indicating the able management of the retiring engineer, R. W. Beeman. During the past year new chairs, new pool table and new clock were added to the club room. The company has an active membership of 40 with several on the waiting list. The committee in charge of the bazaar to be held this month, reported splendid success in sale of tickets by the members and that the entertainment for the three nights would be better than given in any previous year.

The building is in good, clean condition and the officers are working for the installation of new lavatories and running water, a much needed improvement. The American Woolen company co-operated with the firemen in every way during the past year, which was greatly appreciated by the members. The company is a big asset to the town and city of Norwich and is in a high state of efficiency. Chief Howard L. Stanton of the Norwich department has rendered the company valuable assistance during the past year and the Yantic company stands ready at all times to render him aid when called upon.

The Yantic Fire Engine company is one of the very few volunteer companies left in the state; it was organized in 1847 and received its charter in that year from the state and during all these years it has tried to render community service. Many times this service has been rendered at a great personal sacrifice, but always with that spirit of willingness very hard to find in many communities today.

"Mother Why Not Try The Newer Form Of Iron"

And Be Strong and Well and Have Nice Rosy Cheeks Instead of Being Nervous and Irritable all the Time and Looking So Haggard and Old?"

"The doctor gave some to Susie Smith's mother and she was worse off than you are and now she looks just fine." There can be no healthy, beautiful rosy-cheeked woman without iron. Good physicians have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more of the newer form of iron—Nuxated Iron—for their nervous, run-down, weak, haggard-looking patients. When the iron goes from the blood of women the roses go from their cheeks, and strength and vitality from their bodies. This newer form of iron, like the iron in your blood and like the iron in certain green vegetables, is highly recommended to thousands who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance. It is surprising how many people suffer from iron deficiency and do not know it. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you unused. Unless you get the proper amount of good, red iron you don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale, and sickly-looking, just like a plant trying to grow in soil deficient in iron.

You can tell the women with plenty of iron in their blood—beautiful, healthy, rosy-cheeked women, full of life, vim and vitality. You can get Nuxated Iron from any druggist under an absolute guarantee that it will do the same for you or your money back.

$200 to $400 Saved
On This Light-Six Touring Car
By our matchless facilities—our enormous production

HERE is a car priced at $1,045. Built by ordinary methods it would cost you from $200 to $400 more.

It is in scores of ways the leader of its class. No rival car compares in the value that it offers.

Let us tell you how we give that value, then urge you to see this car.

A sensation

Sales have almost trebled in three years. Last year, 145,167 people paid $201,000,000 for Studebaker cars.

There are tremendous reasons for this rush to Studebaker cars. And every man who buys a car should know them.

72-year traditions

The Studebaker name has for 72 years stood for quality and class. To build an ordinary car under that name is unthinkable.

Our assets are $90,000,000—all at stake on serving you better than all others.

We have $50,000,000 in model plants, equipped with 12,500 up-to-date machines. We have 23,000 workers, under profit-sharing plans which lead them to stay and develop.

We spend on engineering $500,000 yearly. We employ 1,200 men to give 32,000 inspections to each Studebaker car in the making.

We are lavish

We are lavish in things that count.

We pay 15% bonus on some steels to get them exactly right. We use genuine leather in our cushions. We use curled hair.

We use more Timken bearings in this Light-Six than any competitive car within $1,500 of its price.

Our bodies are beautiful creations. The finish and coach work show the final touch. But we build them in $10,000,000 body plants of our own, and pay for these extras in savings.

We machine all surfaces of our crankshafts and connecting rods, as was done in the Liberty Airplane motors. No other maker of cars at our prices does this. The result is that perfect motor balance, lack of vibration and long life.

Where we save

We save by enormous production—150,000 cars per year. Our major costs are all divided by that enormous output. It is utterly impossible for smaller makers to compete.

We save by modern plants, mostly built in the past five years. We save by up-to-date machines. By building our own parts and bodies.

See what this car offers

Come see what this Light-Six offers. How it excels in scores of ways any rival car.

Built with the same steels, the same care and skill, as the costliest of our cars. We have only one grade of chassis.

See its beauty, its comfort, its luxury. See how we have studied your every desire.

Do that and you will choose this car, if you have in mind a price anywhere near this.

Send for the book

Mail us the coupon below. We will send you free our new book that will inform you on five simple things which reveal the value of a car. For instance—

It will enable you to look at any car and tell whether it's been cheapened to meet a price or offers true quality.

It will tell you why some cars rattle at 20,000 miles and others don't. It shows one single point in a closed car which measures whether you're getting top or medium quality. The book is free. Clip the coupon below.

Studebaker Light-Six Touring Car—$1,045

Same steels as we use in the costliest cars we build. More Timken bearings than in any competitive car within $1,500 of this price.

JOHNSON REPUDIATED.

A test that was regarded as making or breaking the candidacy of Senator Hiram Johnson for the republican nomination for president was made in the primaries of Michigan, Illinois and Nebraska. Much effort has been put forth by the Californian in those states. He had relied upon his personality, his progressiveness and his denunciations of the administration to carry him through. He depended upon favorable results in those states to better his prospects in others. The result must be a bitter disappointment.

In progressive Michigan the primary results show that there is an overwhelming demand for President Coolidge. The expression indicates the confidence that is being placed in the nation's leader and a recognition of the fact that in him the country has the man who should continue to direct its affairs. Illinois is another state which has given the president a rousing majority over Johnson, while even Nebraska, which was relied upon to display some of the South Dakota views, is strongly behind the president.

It was never understood where Senator Johnson received sufficient persuasion to enter the contest for the republican nomination. If he received evidence of a call to sacrifice himself it failed to reach other ears. He has been devoting most of his time to campaigning in his own behalf, having thoroughly covered the primary states, and it is impossible to regard his effort as anything more than a failure, and the action of the republicans in these states as a repudiation of his claims and charges. Not only has the senator from California been sounding his own horn but he has been engaged in persistent endeavors to belittle the acts of the president.

From the first primary to date there has been evidenced a strong demand for President Coolidge. He has most favorably impressed the country and he grows stronger every day in spite of the efforts of the senator from California who may not even carry his own state.

THE TRIPLE FATALITY.

The collision of an automobile with a trolley car in East Hartford, resulting in the death of the driver of the auto and two of the occupants serves to direct further attention to the menace that an auto driver is who is unmindful of his responsibility, driving at an improper speed and giving only part of his attention to the guidance of the machine.

Such fatalities stand out prominently among the needless, if we are to judge from one report of the affair in which some of the members of the party of ten in the car attributed the collision to the fact that they were looking at the high water and it was thought the driver was thus distracted from his job at the wheel. Another report dealing with the accident credits the police of Manchester as telephoning to the police of East Hartford to stop the car because it had gone through the former place at an excessive speed. Such an interception of the trip might have prevented the accident but for the fact that the machine passed just as the message was being received.

With the driver of the car numbered among the dead his version of the affair is not obtainable. What the others might offer as the excuse for the smash would be indefinite. From the complaint of the Manchester police it would appear that speed was an important factor in the collision, and whether the driver had been looking at the river and suddenly whirled his machine into the trolley car in undertaking to regain control it is quite evident that neither was there the proper safeguard furnished to the other occupants of the car, the other users of the highway nor the patrons of the trolley company.

Conditions of the character that appear to surround that East Hartford accident are the kind that are responsible for too many of the accidents and fatalities on the highway today. It is a deplorable fact that regardless of such distressing affairs there are those who give no heed to it and are ready to add to the steadily growing death list.

CHANGES.

Men and times change, but so does industry. This is brought to attention by the death of Eliphalet Remington at that grand old age of 85 after a career of much prominence in the industrial world.

Mr. Remington was at the head of a company bearing his name which was well known for its manufacture of firearms. Back in his early days there were guns but they were crude in comparison with the present day. They may have then dreamed of the breech-loading rifle, the double barrelled shotgun, the pump gun and the automatic revolvers but they hadn't produced them. He witnessed and participated in their development. He was extensively engaged in their manufacture and not only did he see large numbers of them produced with the latest devices for loading, firing, accuracy and safety, but he saw constant changes in the models.

He saw the business develop to large proportions with many and large competitors and then he saw the bottom fall out of the business, because of the steadily increasing restrictions placed on the use of firearms. And while the day has not come when firearms are not manufactured production is not on the scale of 25 or even 10 years ago. Industries that were once devoted to the manufacture of firearms almost entirely are either out of that line of industry or devoting their chief efforts to other production.

The experience of Mr. Remington in this respect is no different than that of others. Many captains of industry have gone through it and many communities have noted with regret the passing of the community benefits attached to such industries.

Times and conditions have changed and numerous are the instances where firearms plants have ceased to exist or are now meeting the public demands in other ways. Firearms production, except for war purposes, can not be expected to ever enjoy the brisk business that was experienced during the height of Mr. Remington's career as a gun manufacturer.

THE REPARATION PLAN.

Significant is the report that comes from Paris to the effect that France has approved the Dawes report as a basis for a settlement of the reparations problem, if it is correct. Now it will be important to learn what the German attitude is toward it.

Germany has fought the reparation agreement from the beginning, even though it signed it. It made up its mind that it would not pay and vast sums that might have been devoted to meeting its obligations were thrown into the cost of expensive resistance.

Now through the agency of experts a study has been made of the situation in Germany and it has been pointed out how Germany can balance its budget and how it can stabilize its currency, all part of what is necessary for the systematic meeting of its obligations within its capacity. The experts after a careful study have decided that Germany has the resources and that it should pay under the plan that has been set forth.

The report should serve as a basis for bringing together the allied nations which have displayed a disposition to break upon this question. Such a lack of unity has given encouragement to Germany in its determination to dodge. Conditions are now changed and it must become evident to Germany that it has not gained favor for itself, or sympathy because of the very policy which it has been following. Heretofore efforts at forcing adjustment have been looked upon as being influenced by the interest of those involved. The plan that is put forth now comes from unprejudiced sources. It can be regarded as an echo of the Hughes recommendation for dealing with this problem. The acceptance of the plan and the knuckling down to the terms of it would be greatly to the benefit of the European situation.

KINDNESS TO ANIMALS.

Now that we have entered upon the Be Kind to Animals week there is opportunity for all to manifest an interest in this worthy cause. It is a movement that has widespread support in the British isles as well as in this country. There is no danger that those enlisted in the cause will overdo it. There is need of the educational efforts connected with such a movement and it is through the interest that is awakened that the hoped for results will be obtained.

There is no chance that too many will be inspired to show an interest in animals, to see that they are properly fed and watered to see that they are cared for and not mistreated. It is because not enough are concerned in matters of this kind that such great opportunities exist for arousing greater interest.

As long as we have animals for any purpose whatever there should be a proper effort made to see that they are kindly treated. Cruelty to animals can never be tolerated. The very thought of it is enough to arouse resentment and it cannot fail to be realized that if there are those who do not see the value of kind treatment they must be made to.

Whatever can be done for the purpose of awakening a greater interest in kindness to animals is highly commendable. The aim is not to stimulate such an attitude for a limited period but as a permanent policy. It is unfortunate that there is such a need for it, but that only emphasizes the importance of the undertaking. Kindness makes better animals quite the same as it has a salutary effect upon human beings.

HELPFUL ADVICE

"Eeeee-OW!" cried the unfortunate young man who had suddenly been afflicted with a violent cramp in one leg as he twisted about too quickly. "Oh, Jiminy. How this hurts!"

"Now, that's too bad!" the nice lady who was visiting said comfortably, "your Uncle Ned used to have cramps just like that, and the way he suffered was something awful! Why once——"

"Stand up straight and stamp your foot," advised the man who prided himself on being equal to all emergencies. "It doesn't do a particle of good to double up and pound your leg——"

"Maybe not," gasped the unfortunate young man, continuing his energetic dance, "but it is all I can do and golly, I've got to do something! I can't straighten up and unless I straighten up I can't possibly stamp my foot! I tell you this isn't the sort of thing——"

"Your Uncle Ned," the nice lady proceeded still more placidly, "would just about rouse the neighborhood when a cramp hit his leg! Once it took him right in the middle of grace before dinner and your Aunt Nell never did get over her embarrassment because there were some very particular people present that she wanted to impress and I guess she succeeded. Nobody ever could forget the way Ned carried on!"

"I don't blame him!" gasped the unfortunate young man, writhing against the mantel and clutching it. "I wish he'd telegraphed me to come help him carry on, because I sure could do it from the heart out! Say, isn't there anything that'll stop this infernal——"

"Here!" ordered the lordly young man. "Stop your racket and run up these stairs just as fast as you can! Then run down and when you get down your cramp will be gone——"

The afflicted one screwed up his face until it looked like anything on earth except a face and groaned. "This cramp is tying itself up in double bowknots and all of you sit around and nobody does anything! Isn't there something you can do that——"

"I wish I could remember what it was Nell did when your Uncle Ned had his trouble," the nice visiting lady mused brightly. "The cousin who visited the minister that winter gave her the recipe and said it never failed and it didn't. Either you boiled something three hours and added four teaspoons of sugar or you boil it four hours and added three, and bless me if I can recall whether you took it three times a day before meals or just when the cramp came on!"

"Wowww!" ejaculated the unfortunate young man hopping around on his good leg like mad.

"Say," cried the athletic girl, dashing out of the room and then dashing in carrying a thick rope. "Our gymnasium teacher says there is nothing like jumping the rope to loosen up all the muscles of the body and I do it 200 times a day and what you want to do is to loosen up that muscle! Tommy and I will turn the rope for you and you just jump."

"But I can't jump," cried the unfortunate young man. "In my deposit box you will find all my liberty bonds and my will."

"One of your Uncle Ned's worst cramps came on just as his daughter's wedding ceremony was being performed," the nice visiting lady told him cheerfully. "The groom was handing over the ring and when your Uncle Ned let out a yell he jumped so that the ring shot away and couldn't be found. It never was found, either, till Nell repotted the rubber plant, because it had buried itself in the soft dirt. Lots of folks felt that the wedding couldn't be legal with the ring lost, but nobody liked to make a fuss about it——"

"EEEEEEE-Ow!" cried the unfortunate young man, plunging about wildly.

"Stamp on it—try the rope—if you'll just run upstairs!" everybody begged.

The afflicted young man dropped exhaustedly into a chair and stretched his leg out straight because he hadn't strength to draw it in.

"Well, what do you know about that!" he cried the next second, sitting up and mopping his brow. "The cramp's gone! Left me just like that!"

"Some people have all the luck!" admitted the lordly young man. "After all the remedies we told you and everything."—Exchange.

Dr. Alexander H. Rice, who sailed for South America to explore sections of that continent never before visited by white men, is a noted surgeon, traveler and explorer who has journeyed over the globe so extensively that he has come to look upon South American trips in the same light in which the average man would regard an 18-hour trip from New York to Chicago. A native of Boston and still under 50, Dr. Rice had visited Europe, Spitsbergen, Alaska, the Hudson Bay region, Egypt, and South America before he was graduated from Harvard University and the Harvard Medical school. In recent years he has made no fewer than half a dozen trips of exploration to the South American interior. In 1914 he disputed Col. Roosevelt's claim to discovery of the River of Doubt and while in England received the gold medal of the Royal Geographical Society. Accompanying Dr. Rice on his present expedition is his wife, the former Mrs. George D. Widener of Philadelphia, who lost her first husband and son in the Titanic disaster.

EASTMAN OFTEN FACED RUIN

George Eastman climbed from being "just a clerk" to independance as owner of a prosperous business, only to find, many times, the foundation snatched away and destruction awaiting.

Born in little Waterville, N. Y., he was seven years old when his father died. A public-school education in Rochester was cut short so he could help his semi-invalid mother support the family.

A job in an insurance office yielded $3 a week, then $4. Later he became a bank clerk, studying and experimenting at night.

At 24, inspired by an English dispatch telling the discovery of a selfine dry-plate process, he sought the formula.

Months of experimenting, clouded with repeated failures, at last revealed the secret. A photographer tried the plates, and ordered more. Orders came fast and Eastman rented a room and hired a man, the young inventor working in the bank all day and in the room at night — sometimes all night.

Leaving his irksome bank routine he became a manufacturer. A New York jobber took all the plates made during the dull winter. Success seemed certain. Then came summer, and customers returned the plates. The emulsion had deteriorated with age, but Eastman had not known that it could.

When he had made good all the old plates, his money was gone. He took a partner, and started again.

Business came, the force grew and profits were seen. Then his emulsion stopped, and refused to produce one useful plate. Frenzied efforts, night and day, failed to reveal the fault. The factory was closed. Eastman went to England and bought, for much more than he could then afford, the American rights to the English firm's dry plate formula.

Price-cutting competition threatened disaster, and Eastman invented the Kodak. The transparent film that made moving pictures possible appeared. Improvements and successes quickly followed.

Today, the companies under Eastman's control have a combined capital of $40,000,000 and employ 12,000 people. Eastman is one of the richest men in America and he is known for his many benefactions, modestly given.

Tomorrow—Lincoln's Many Failures.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

What is Generation Coming To?

Mr. Editor: I have been waiting, just as Mr. Troland said he had, to see if the sermon preached by Rev. Mr. Foster brought forth any statements from laymen or ministers. I agree with the statement in regard to conduct and character as put forth by the pastor, but we must have something vitally powerful to anchor ourselves to.

Didn't the ancient Socrates have a good character and wasn't his conduct above reproach. He had everything but Christ, and therefore no power.

I have read where other religions compared with Christianity are just as beautiful, and might be helpful if applied to every day life, but they all lack power. Christianity has power and where did this power originate? With Christ's resurrection.

I would refer Rev. Mr. Foster to Luke 24: verse 38 to 40. "Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath life not flesh and bones, as ye seem to have." Why should Rev. Mr. Foster ever think of doubting, far less voicing his thoughts to the public.

I know a number of worthy and beautiful characters that attended Rev. Mr. Foster's church. I have wondered ever since reading his sermon what they think of it all, what they think of their pastor.

The virgin birth was foretold.

What is our generation coming to, that we dare use our finite minds in trying to explain the Infinite.

If we could understand the virgin birth for instance, or any of the miracles Jesus did, wouldn't God cease to be God? He is Infinite, therefore we can't understand.

Righteously Indignant.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

KHIVA

Khiva has a new constitution.

That would have been first page news, probably, before the World war, for most Asiatic countries had potentates whose sword-wielding ancestors had left them firmly seated on their thrones. Now the news means little more than that a dependency of Soviet Russia has decided to call itself "The Soviet Socialist Republic of Khiva," instead of "The People's Socialist Republic of Khiva," and to take away political rights from "non-laborers." A bulletin from Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society describes this country in the desert region of Trans-Caspian Asia.

"Khiva, like several other countries in the heart of Asia now of little consequence, is a relic of past greatness," says the bulletin. "It's king felt a hunger for more land and power at the time that appetite stirred William the Conqueror, and he made himself the biggest factor of his day in central and southwestern Asia, extending his country around the Sea of Aral and even conquering Persia and Afghanistan. But by the time Russia began her conquests in Asia the former great Empire of Khiva had been smashed by other Asiatics, and the Khivans occupied a tight little triangle in the delta of the Oxus just south of Aral. The conquest of Khiva was probably the most difficult assignment Russia's Cossacks ever had. For several centuries every Russian expedition sent against these desert-hemmed fighters was wholly destroyed or its members made slaves. The country was finally subdued in 1873 and, while retaining the semblance of autonomy, became a dependency of Russia.

"Under the present Russian government, Khiva's status has undergone little change. When autonomous republics were being formed all around it, it was announced to be 'not ripe' for complete autonomy and undiluted socialism, and was kept under the direct supervision of Moscow as a dependency.

"The Khivan oasis near the mouth of the famous Oxus has been irrigated and farmed for more than 2,000 years. Not far from this region, it is believed, many of the domestic fruits known to man were developed; and they have been grown in plots monitened by Oxus water as far back as history of the region can be traced. The art of irrigation itself is thought to have had a birth on the banks of the Oxus quite as early as in Egypt or Mesopotamia.

"One thing for which Khiva is famous all over Asia is its melons which are credited with a deliciousness of flavor and a delicacy and richness of odor not approached by melons grown elsewhere. In their climate in which winter comes on suddenly, the Khivans early learned much about cold storage that the technicians of the Western world came to know only recently. They suspend melons, grapes and other fruits in a room kept slightly above the freezing point and preserve their freshness and flavor throughout the winter. In the past gourmet emperors of China sent regularly across the endless plains and mountains of central Asia to Khiva, for supplies of melons for their tables. These expeditions probably set the world record for the transportation of fresh fruits in the days before the development of artificial refrigeration. Before the World war the Khivan oasis produced cotton in considerable quantities for Russia, but since the disruption of the market its farmers have largely returned to grain growing. Silk production is of importance and the Oasis is lined with long avenues of mulberry trees on which the silk worms feed.

"Hemmed in by deserts, Khiva is still isolated in spite of the extensive Russian railroad building in the Trans-Caspian region in the decades before the World war. The country is enclosed in a great horseshoe of railroads, but at no place does the track approach closer than 250 miles to the city of Khiva. The country is dependent as of old on boat traffic on the Oxus for part of the year and on camel and horse caravans. Mohammedanism prevails throughout the country which is roughly about the size of the state of New York."

ROMANCING

By Florence J. Ovens

"I saw a great black cat chasing a mouse. The mouse was as big as Fido and the cat was as big as an auto, and she had great big eyes just like the lights on an auto and——"

"Harry!" exclaimed his mother in a shocked, reproving tone as she came out on the porch where her boy was entertaining two smaller children. "What are you saying? Come here to me. Why will you tell what isn't true? Haven't I told you how wicked it is? What shall I do with you?"

"When I was at Aunt Edith's," Bertha was saying to her little playmate, "I saw a doll that could walk and talk and eat just like anybody. I left a box of candy on the table near her and she ate it all up."

Bertha's mother, standing at the window, heard her and was troubled, but when the child came in answer to her call she only said, "Please go upstairs and get mother's knitting."

Many a mother has been puzzled regarding the attitude she ought to take when the little son or daughter insists on telling original stories for facts. No one can solve this problem for her. No one can outline a definite course and be sure that it will prove to be the best always; individual cases differ so greatly. Nevertheless, perplexities of this sort are often much simplified by considering the underlying causes.

The little child has had comparatively few experiences, and for this reason each one is every vivid in his consciousness. He lives them over and over. This is not the result of any effort on his part, the mind acts spontaneously. Stories are enjoyed because they minister to this mental activity, and, to the younger children, satisfying of all are those in which there is an atmosphere of freedom from material limitations. The environment pictured in the story becomes very real. The narrative seems like an experiences and like an experience is lived over again and again. Is it strange if the story sometimes varies, the hero or heroine changes and this daydream is woven into the autobiography that the child likes so well to tell?

The situation calls for integration on the part of the one who is to deal with it. A little sympathetic understanding will admit one to the child's confidence. It is necessary to be there in order to be of service. That it really is difficult for some children to distinguish between what they imagine and that which actually occurs, is well substantiated. Fortunately there are men and women who have not forgotten the days when Jack and the Bean Stalk was real to them. Some can even remember how themselves, in imagination, quite outgrew Jack's exploits.

Little by little this vagueness of distinction between what is really done and what is merely thought of disappears, and the former stands out with clean-cut outline. At this time a reaction may take place against the fairy story. This is to be regretted, especially if it be the outcome of a feeling, on the child's part, that he has been deceived. The plea for a true story is quite often the outcry of disillusionment. The child should be protected from such experiences. If told from the beginning, that the fairy story is a make-believe, it will lose nothing of its first charm, and his pleasure in it will be prolonged. And what is even better, this method will help to classify his own stories. If the parent uses tact the child will quite enjoy applying the term "make-believe" to his romancing.

INJURIES FATAL WHEN STRUCK BY TROLLEY

Injuries sustained when knocked down by a trolley car on Franklin street Wednesday afternoon proved fatal to Walter Durkin, 37 of 38 Cliff street, and his death followed but a few hours afterwards at the Backus hospital.

Mr. Durkin, who will be remembered by many of the older residents of Norwich as steward on many of the steamers which docked in Norwich and New London, according to the report of the trolley company stepped out from the sidewalk just as the Falls bound trolley which had left Franklin square at 5.15 o'clock was about opposite the Troy Steam laundry. Motorman Andrew Bellefleur in charge of the one-man trolley saw Mr. Durkin's danger and rang the bell. According to Mr. Bellefleur the warning caused Mr. Durkin to stop and the motorman who had slowed down, began to increase speed. As he drew near Mr. Durkin stepped in front of the car and was struck by the front left hand corner and knocked down.

Dr. J. W. Callahan was called and immediately arranged to take Mr. Durkin to the Backus hospital where it was found that he had suffered a severe scalp wound, possible fracture and concussion. Every effort was made to save the life of the patient but he steadily lost strength and death came shortly after 10 o'clock.

Mr. Durkin was born June 15, 1886, in Castlebar, County Mayo, Ireland, the son of James and Ann Durkin. He came to this country when 18 years old and lived for a time with relatives in New Jersey, where he received his education.

For several years he followed the occupation of farming and later went to New York where he became associated with the Norwich and New York transportation lines. Starting at the bottom, by persistent effort he advanced steadily and at his retirement some 30 years ago held the important office of port steward, in charge of all purchasing for Norwich New York and sound steamers. His ability and proficiency as steward was quickly recognized and his name will be remembered by many people in all parts of the country who travelled in the 70's and 80's on sound steamers. Some of the boats on which Mr. Durkin served were the old Commonwealth, the City of Norwich, City of Boston, City of Lawrence, City of New York, City of Worcester and the ill-fated City of New London. Mr. Durkin was on the City of New London the day she was burned and remembered incidents of that terrible trip very distinctly.

As usual he was at his station when the boat left for New York on November 31, 1871 and with others had a thrilling escape when the boat burned in the Thames river about a quarter of a mile above Poquetanuck Cove, with a loss of 17 lives, including those of C. E. Rogers, Harrison B. Aldrich and William T. Norton of Norwich who were passengers on the boat on that trip.

Twenty years ago Mr. Durkin gave up active work owing to his health, retiring as port steward for the sound steamers into private life. Mr. Durkin had never married and while on the boats whenever possible he used to come to Norwich to visit at the home of his nephew, John A. Moran, of 304 Washington street. After his retirement he made his home with Mr. Moran for many years, but of late he had been living with his other nephew, Walter D. Moran of 38 Cliff street.

Mr. Durkin was in love with life on the boats and practically lived most of his life on board ship. He was a charter member of St. John's society of New London but never belonged to any orders or other societies. A man of quiet habits, ever ready to serve, he made himself most popular among all the stewards on the sound steamers in their years. His name is familiar to many people throughout the country and it will be with sorrow that they learn of his sudden and tragic death.

Mr. Durkin is survived by his two nephews, John A., and Walter D. Moran of Norwich, a nephew in New York, one niece, Mrs. Stephen Nethercott of New York city and several grandnephews and grand-nieces. He was the last of his immediate family.

Dec. 31, 1879 she married Andrew Avery; his death occurred March 15, 1908. Most of their married life was spent on the farm in North Stonington, but in April 1899 they moved to 160 Laurel Hill avenue, where Mr. Avery died and where she lived till Oct. 1919, when she moved to Ledyard.

Charles C. Treat.

Charles O. Treat and family of Norwich, were in South Manchester Wednesday, to attend the funeral of Mr. Treat's father, Charles C. Treat, 74, who died Monday, after several months' illness.

Mr. Treat was a native of Manchester. He was a democrat in politics and served as a constable and later as deputy sheriff. Among his building projects was the raising of the hip roof of Cheney Brothers spinning mills, at South Manchester, which was done without interfering with the work in the plant. Mr. Treat after retiring from active work as a mason engaged in the tobacco business with Arthur Manning, buying and conducting the Woodland plantation, but in his advanced age decided to withdraw from the tobacco fields. Mr. Treat in his young days was interested in sports of all kinds and it was when roller polo was popular that he associated himself with other Manchester men and built the old skating rink on Well street, which was later remodeled an dtaken over as an armory for Company G of the First Connecticut. The Hall of Records was another building that he erected at a cost of $13,000. The Herald building was another structure that he erected, the brick walls of which withstood the fire at the plant over a year ago.

He was a member of the first party that left Manchester to go to the Klondike and it was the hardship experienced on this trip that had much to do in his later illness. He was descended from from Robert Treat, one of the first governors of the state and the founder of Milford who took a band of followers from Milford and founded the city of Newark.

Mr Treat was a Mason, an Odd Fellow and a member of Ancient Order of United Workmen.

Besides his wife, Gertrude Nettleton Treat, he is survived by two sons, Charles C. Treat of Norwich, and Robert V. Treat of South Manchester and two daughters, Mrs. William A. Mills of New Haven, and Mrs. Arthur H. Keeney of South Manchester. The Masonic funeral service was held from his late home Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Mr. Treat has been for years a cottage owner at Pleasant View.

After an illness of about twelve weeks the long and peaceful life of Eliza Dow Tompkins, beloved wife of Lorenzo L. Armstrong, came to a close Tuesday morning at 1.40 o'clock at her home at 46 Ann street. Mrs. Armstrong was taken ill in January and her condition steadily became worse until the end.

Born in New London, October 5, 1848, the daughter of Lorenzo D. and Eliza Morgan Tompkins, she removed to Montville with her parents when a girl and spent her young womenhood in that town. On December 31, 1868 at her home in Montville she was united in marriage with Lorenzo L. Armstrong, the service being conducted by Rev. D. D. Lion, pastor of the Montville Baptist church.

For several years after her marriage she made her home in Griswold later coming to Norwich where she spent the greater part of her married life. She was a member of the Central Baptist church and of the Xens society of this city, but in recent years because of health gave up active work in the church, and resigned membership in the Xens.

She was a woman of kind and loving qualities, easily made friends and found her joy in life in her home. In her going her family has lost a beloved member, whose joy was to be with her children, and her many friends have lost one for whom they held the deepest nad kindly regard.

Following a supper served at 6.30 for the meeting of the directors of the Young Men's Christian Association, the annual meeting of the association was held at 8 o'clock in the parlors at the Y building. President J. C. Macpherson called the meeting to order and after prayer the annual reports were presented by the officers and the chairmen of the department committees. These all showed an unusually active year in all lines, which was declared in the annual report of President Macpherson the best and most effective year in the history of the association.

President's Annual Report.

President Macpherson's annual report was given as follows:

To the Directors and Membera.

Gentlemen:—After thirty-nine years of active service for the young men and boys of this community the year just closed has proved one of the best and most effective in our history. More and more the advantages of membership here are being realized by all who are eligible and the new physical unit is kept in constant use.

Our employed force remains the same as for the last three years and I feel that we are extremely fortunate in the personnel of our employed officers. In each department of our work we find the same faithful service as in former years and a desire to accomplish more for the association and its members.

Membership.

The steady growth of our membership since entering this property and the appreciation shown of its facilities and advantages promise an early attainment of our goal of 1,500. The membership at this time is 981.

Religious Department.

Under the great privileges of the Sturtevant endowment the association has conducted an effective and vigorous work in this department of our activities during the past year and the standing that the Y enjoys attests the public approval of this effort. Sunday afternoon services have been held with generous attendances and much inspiration. In cooperation with the churches of the city we have held the annual series of lectures and were fortunate enough this year to secure Dr. Robert A. Spear, president of the Federation of Churches of Christ in America, who won his way into all hearts and a great victory for the kingdom. It was a rare and greatly helpful period for our Christian people and it seems as if the association proves a uniting force among our churches year by. While Dr. Spear was our guest the ministers of the county were called together at a dinner in the local hotel where an exceptionally enjoyable hour was spent. Shop meetings have been held and the message of the Christ brought to the workers in two of our industries.

Business.

With the closing of this past year we reach a total of nineteen years when this organization has closed its fiscal year with all bills paid and a surplus of $90 in its treasury. We regret, however, to note the loss of Phillip A. Johnson, as chairman of our finance committee, for his timely and conservative counsel has meant much to our association and the debt of gratitude we owe him for great help cannot be adequately expressed here.

The unpaid pledges for the new building are being slowly collected and some small impression is being made upon our mortgage but we hope soon to take more active steps to reduce this to a figure within the means of the association to carry. No more critical campaign has been put on than the one upon which we are about to enter and it will need the loyal co-operation of everybody to put it through to a complete success.

Educational.

Your social committee has held its series of entertainments during the past winter and while the number of features was less the quality of all entertainments was greatly improved. They were a financial success and a small surplus accrued to the Y. Good literature has been placed in the reading room and steadily used by many of our young men.

Dormitories.

The income from our dormitories mounted to higher figures than was thought possible and most of the time every room was in use and many times we could have used more. The rooms are kept clean and wholesome and a fine class of young men are cared for who have an interest in maintaining a high standard of their surroundings and their living. The total income from dormitories the past year was $4,456.

Physical Department.

Under the capable leadership of Mr. Fritz the gym work has increased till it is now the largest work along this line we have ever enjoyed and business men are coming in in greater numbers and appear to greatly enjoy having a part here; while at the same time hundreds of boys are having the treat of their lives linking up the gym exercises with a plunge in the handsome pool given to the association by one who sensed our great need and knew what it would mean to our work.

Junior Department.

Emery H. Davis, who enters upon his third year with us, has proven a factor of great strength with our labors for boys and under his guidance the activities in this branch have increased till our quarters are proving limited. The annual father and son banquet was a greater success than ever and has become an event looked forward to by the fathers as much as the sons. Bible classes, games and the Y circus have kept great numbers of boys interested and loyal to a degree. This department is worthy of our every possible encouragement.

Women's Auxiliary.

After great devotion to their task the Ladies Auxiliary have paid in full their pledge of $5,000 toward this new property and I can safely say that it would be difficult indeed for our directors to express their gratitude for this remarkably fine help and for continued assistance in all of our enterprises and I am sure they are somewhat compensated by the thought that this labor in the last analysis is for the kingdom and we know for that reason they find joy in helping.

Endowments.

The past two years have added no new funds to our endowments and yet we feel that the uses to which the Sturtevant endowment is being put justify our hoping that we may be remembered with other funds for use in supporting an ever increasing work of this kind, knowing that the sum total of real benefit that this association is yearly contributing to this city cannot be measured in dollars and cents but is proving a very real blessing to many a young man and a boy in keeping them straight and clean for life's contacts.

In closing this report permit me to thank all who have had a helpful part and particularly the directors who have given freely of their time and labors for the benefit of others and our employed officers with whom it is a great pleasure to work with their unfailing willingness and devotion to the interests of the association.

We are all gratified that our general secretary, Mr. Hill, is able to be with us after some ten days of illness and with him our great appreciation is extended to Mrs. Hill, whose assistance in so many ways cannot be enumerated herein. May God spare them for many years to continue in our midst. With the policy maintained for so many years by the Norwich Y. M. C. A. of making the vital part of our entire effort the Christian development of character in young men and boys we feel assured that past successes will prove but stepping stones for greater achievements in the future and I pray that God's blessing may continue upon us as our influence extends each year.

Election of Officers.

The report of the nominating committee was presented by Shepard R. Palmer and the following officers were elected:

President, James C. Macpherson; first vice president, Herbert B. Gary; honorary vice presidents, B. P. Bishop, George H. Loring, L. O. Smith, S. B. Palmer, and Judge Allyn L. Brown; recording secretary, Weston C. Pullen; treasurer, Arthur F. Wyman; directors (three years), John M. Swahn, Philip A. Johnson, C. E. Carpenter, Dr. A. C. Freeman; trustees (three years) William B. Young, Frederick W. Lester.

The anniversary meeting of the association will be held Sunday evening at the Central Baptist church where the annual report of General Secretary Edwin Hill will be given and the address will be by Dr. Millard L. Robinson of New York. Frederick A. Weld of Connecticut college will be the soloist.

TIBBETTS DISAPPEARANCE IS UNSOLVED AFTER YEAR

One year ago Wednesday, April 9th, William Tibbetts, a farmer living on the Pitchville road, mysteriously disappeared from his home and although every effort was made to solve the mystery neither the missing farmer nor his body have ever been found.

Circumstances surrounding his disappearance led to the belief that he had been murdered by parties unknown. Bloodstains found in the kitchen and around the back door of the house, hoof marks and wagon tracks turning in to the door gave rise to the theory of murder, but information to the police was so vague that little credit could be attached to the greater portion. The disappearance of a horse and wagon from the barns, the fact that the team was seen on the highway headed for Yantic shortly after Mr. Tibbetts had been seen alive, the finding of the horse and team on Water street in Norwich, not many hours later, and the appearance of two strange men in the wagon as it rolled up on Water street, provided no little food for officers to feed upon while working on the case.

For days roadsides, nearby streams and woodland were combed by searching parties in hopes to find the body but to no avail. Every clue that seemed to have anything worth while was run down by officers in a tireless search only to find they led to nowhere.

The disappearance caused no little stir in these parts and although many hold to the opinion that Tibbetts was murdered there are those who believe that he is still alive. Rewards offered from the finding of Tibbetts dead or alive reached a large sum but no one ever collected the reward.

Indications pointed most strongly to the wisdom of dragging the river near the Falls but evidence was not there to support the claims and this was not done. Later a well known spiritualist medium predicted that the body would be found by May in the river. Later as no search had been made and the body not found, the medium said the body would never be found as her orders had not been obeyed.

The farm and machinery, both of the best in this section, were finally sold and the money held in trust but Tibbetts has never come home to claim his own and the mystery of his disappearance remains as dark as ever.

Rheumatic Pains Go Quickly With Alessandro Volta's Discovery

No Medicines to Take. Results Guaranteed by Local Druggists

An amazing new treatment for Rheumatism has been received in this country from Italy. This new scientific discovery promises to put an end to terrible, rheumatic suffering in even the most stubborn cases.

Alessandro Volta, the well known Italian physicist, for whom the electric volt has been named, discovered a scientific combination of certain ingredients in the form of a fine powder that is intended to be a powerful and active Uric Acid solvent. This discovery he has called Volta. It is not to be taken internally, but is shaken into the shoes or stockings and is intended to be absorbed into the blood through the pores of the feet. This absorption is aided by the fact that the soles of the feet contain over 10 times the number of pores found in any other part of the body.

So remarkable and rapid have been the results from the use of Volta powder, both in this country and in Italy, that the American distributors have authorized local druggists to dispense Volta with an unqualified guarantee of relief from the use of the very first package or your money will be refunded.

If you suffer from rheumatic pains, Sciatica, Lumbago, Gout or Neuralgia, you owe it to yourself to try this remarkable scientific treatment. It is absolutely harmless and will not cost one cent if you do not receive wonderful relief.

HOPPE GIVES HOREMAN TERRIFIC BEATING IN SECOND BLOCK OF MATCH

New York, April 9.—Stroking with perfect precision and accuracy Willie Hoppe, world's 18.2 balk line champion, assumed a commanding lead over his Belgian challenger, Edouad Horemans tonight by winning the second block of the title match 500 to 16, in 11 innings the champion now has a lead of 1,000 to 440 with but one more block to play.

Hoppe's victory tonight was one of the most outstanding feats in the history of the game. In 1921 during the championship tournament at Chicago, Jake Schaffer, former champion, defeated Welker Cochran, San Francisco, 500 to nothing in two innings, averaging 200 in this performance.

As a decided contrast to Hoppe's exhibition, the chaflenger was badly off form, scoring in but five innings and not once during the evening having the balls together.

Hoppe started where he finished last night, adding 8 to his unfinished run of 37. He missed a short draw and Horemans ran one. In the third inning Hoppe got away strong and by careful nursing and brilliant position play ran 176, being stopped by a one cushion shot which missed the second object ball by a narrow margin. He followed this after Horemans ran one, by a run of 113. He finished his block withan unfinished run of 48, leaving the balls in good position for the resumption of play tomorrow night.

The score by innings.

N. L. RANGERS CHALLENGE WESTERLY FOR BULLETIN CUP

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 9. — The New London Ranger soccer team challenges the Westerly soccer team for a three game series for the Bulletin cup. As the Bulletin cup has not passed into the hands of the Westerly team permanently, the Westerly team will have to play the Ranger team for the cup or give it up. Westerly is taking the attitude that the cup belongs to that team and seems to evade the attempts of the Ranger management to arrange a three game series for the possession of it.

The New London team feels so confident of winning the cup offered by The Bulletin, that a small space has been reserved in the window of George Fisher, the local florist, on State street for the purpose of displaying the cup to the passersby. The Rangers are anxious to meet the Westerly team before the present spring season comes to a close.

At present the Rangers are without a game for this Sunday, and attempts are being made to secure the Taftville team to appear in this city. If definite arrangements are not made whereas the Ranger-Taftville game will be played, the Rangers will remain idle.

TIE GAME RESULTS IN BASE DUNGAREE LEAGUE

New London, April 9.—The game between the Engineers and the Submarine Division No. 2 of the Dungaree league at the Submarine Base this afternoon ended in a 5 to 5 tie. The game had to be called at the end of the seventh inning on account of darkness after both teams had played a hard and fast game. The Engineers came from behind in the last of the seventh and two clean singles with two outs brought Dinty Moore up to the plate. Dinty hit to Menina at third base and when the Submarine player threw the ball over the first baseman's head two runs trickled over the plate, tying up the contest at 5-all. Darkness rapidly descended upon the field and this game had to end in a tie.

The playing of both teams was good, taking into consideration that it was the first for either team this season. The Submarine Division No. 2 gained an early lead over the Engineers and for a time it looked like an easy victory for the undersea men. The Engineers were there in a pinch, however, and four runs in the last two innings gave them enough runs to tie up the contest.

Both team played well in the field although a wild throw after a good stop marred both teams' chances for going through the entire game without any errors chalked up against either side.

Micheals, who was one of the regular Sub Base twirlers for the gobs last year, occupied the mound for the Submarine Division. His delivery had the Engineers guessing at all times and except for the non-consistency of his teammates when there were men on the paths, a victory for his team would have been the result.

The men from the submarine school began an early assault upon the Engineers' twirler and made him retire from the contest before three innings had been played. Dinty Moore took up the pitching burden and held the undersea men well in check for the remainder of the contest. Moord fanned five men in four innings, while Micheals for the submarine team sent eleven of the Engineers back to the bench via the strikeout route.

The teams lined up as follows: Submarine Division No. 2—Osse ss, Nesbit 1b, Laubang c, Mancine lf, Lyons rf, Senbertran cf, Menina 2b, Micheals p, Mosier 3b; Engineers—Moore ss, p, Harrell 1b, Mangold lf, ss, Langford c, Hamilton 3b, O'Neill 2b, McClennan rf, Braun p, lf.

The score by innings:

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch

Does the outfield know what kind of a ball the pitcher is going to each time?

If so, where do they get this information?

Every player on the club should know, and every player on a major league team does know, whether the pitcher is going to throw a slow ball, fast ball or curve every time he pitches. The left fielder and center usually get their signs from the shortstop, although with some clubs the third baseman tips them off. The man who makes this sign does so in a natural way, such methods as touching his cap when a slow ball is to be pitched or picking up dirt for a fast one are examples. The second baseman usually passes the sign to the right fielder.

The reason for this is plain: Right hand batters usually pull a slow ball to left field and hit a fast one to right field. Left hand hitters do just the opposite. Fielders shift accordingly when they get these signs from the outfield.

ALL-COLLEGIANS WILL OPEN SEASON AGAINST ACADEMY TEAM SATURDAY

The baseball season at the Norwich Free Academy will be ushered in Saturday afternoon when the team will clash with Bill McKnight's All-Collegians. The Academy squad of rookies and regulars is the most promising in many years and the local high school should be represented by the strongest team that has worn the Red and White for some time. There is plenty of material, some exceptionally good, some good, and some not so good. In the practice yesterday afternoon the regulars showed up well but some of the veterans will have to look to their laurels or some promising rookie is going to steal their berth.

Even in the first few days of practice there is a marked improvement over the team of last year. Coach Brigham is keeping the boys working all the time and instructing in several departments of the game at the same time. There is a noticeable improvement in the hitting of the veterans and some of the rookies are pounding the ball hard. The infield is practically the same as last year but the outfielding not so very strong although there are several likely looking candidates.

The Academy will get its test on Saturday when the All-Collegians stack up a bunch of heavy stickers against the scholars. It has been a number of years since the Academy team has beaten the Collegians in the opening game and this year will be no exception.

Manager McKnight has announced his lineup. Manchester or Murphy, will perform behind the bat. Both are snappy backstop men and should hold up the pitcher in fine style. Speaking of the pitcher, Manager McKnight refused to give out who would start saying that he had several signed for the season. On first will be Ed Harris, former New England leaguer and Red Sox player who led the team in hitting last season. Chick Stanley, former N. F. A. star will be at the keystone sack and may take a turn in the box. The short field will be covered by "Bill" Ringland, another former Academy man and a member of Tufts college team two years ago. Bill McKnight, former Catholic University player will be at third. Bill has been out with the boys during the week and is fast rounding into shape.

The outfield will be taken care of by "Spud" Murphy in left field, Georgie Madden in center, while "Sammy" Cafferty of Providence college will be in the right garden. This rounds out one of the best teams that the All-Collegians have had in a number of years.

MORIN ROLLS BARBER AT DANIELSON THIS EVENING

Mike Morin, who took 3 out of 11 games from Frankie Barber of Danielson Tuesday, will clash with Barber this evening in the second match in the Eastern Connecticut bowling championship. Morin after his performance of Tuesday evening is the favorite in tonight's match.

Morin will roll Saturday in the Massachusetts candle pin tournament at Boston representing North Adams in several events. He will be a member of the North Adams team in the five-man events; will be paired with another North Adams bowler in the two-man events and will represent North Adams in the singles.

On Friday evening Chip Dugas will clash with Bill Dodge of Willimantic in their second match of the tournament. Dodge had the edge on Dugas when they rolled in Willimantic last week but the Taftville boy hopes to even up matters.

New London Sport Comment

The announcement of the Bulkeley High school football and baseball schedules by The Bulletin this week, shows that the wearers of the Orange and Black have two schedules that resemble some prep school teams. The football schedule is one of the toughest that will be undertaken by Bulkeley in the history of the school in this branch of sport. No other team of high school calibre in the eastern section of the state will play any of the teams that appear on the Bulkeley slate. The baseball schedule is also tough and some of the best teams in the state will be met. When Bulkeley won the state championship two years ago and repeated again last year, it was the first time since 1898 that a Bulkeley team won that coveted honor. Connecticut champions. Bulkeley should be a contender for this title for the next two years, for practically the same team will be had. Only a slump will put the Orange and Black out of the running.

Bulkeley did not have a basketball team this year. One of the outstanding reasons was that the school had no place to play its games and another reason was that there were no funds in the Bulkeley athletic treasury to meet the deficit that the basketball team occurs each year. The yearly track meet held at the armory during the month of April supplied about a hundred dollars each year towards supporting the athletic teams at the school. This season, however, there will not be any inter-class track meet at the armory. The price asked by the military officials to stage the meet is entirely out of the question, so that a fairly good sum will be missed this year. With a track meet simply out of the question, there will be little or no money on hand for the baseball team to begin its season right financially. An appeal has been sent out to the alumni of the school for funds to be used to buy baseball uniforms and equipment and other paraphernalia that will be needed by the baseball team during the season. So far about $70 has been received by Professor Clarence E. Norris, who will receive the contributions that the alumni make. At least $200 more is needed to give an assurance of a successful season financially.

Thomas O'Brien, football coach at Bulkeley during the seasons of 1922-23 is spending a few days in New London. It was under the tutelege of Mr. O'Brien that Bulkeley enjoyed one of its most successful seasons on the gridiron. Before Mr. O'Brien took up coaching the Bulkeley team he was a member of the Yale relay team during the years of 1920-'21.

Edward Fowler, captain and quarterback of the Bulkeley football team for the season of 1922 and who has matriculated to Roxbury Prep the beginning of 1923, has made a brilliant record on the gridiron for that team this season. While at Bulkeley, Fowler was picked as all-state quarterback. His record at Roxbury this year has gained for him a scholarship to three colleges. However, he is desirous of entering Yale next fall.

A reacting of Fannie Hurst's novel, "Back Pay," took place at the state armory Tuesday evening, when the members of the 26th Brgiade Headquarters Battery received their pay. Every guardsman was present that night to receive his emolument and a riot was well nigh at hand when the announcement that the back pay due this regiment would be paid that night.

Dinty Moore, who played in the infield on the Submarine Base baseball team last season seems to retain that dexterity of last year. Besides being a good infielder, he can hurl 'em, too. He did some good relief work in yesterday's mid-week game at the Base in a Dungaree league contest.

The player made frequent calls to see how the young lady was getting along and love followed.

Otto Miller, for many years first string catcher of the Brooklyn Club, and now with Indianapolis of the American Association says he prefers playing to managing. Otto tried his hand as pilot of the Atlanta team last year.

STRAND THEATRE

An all star selection of Keith Vaudeville acts and feature is scheduled.

The why and when of syncopation may or may not be something to bother about. Who originated jazz and when it first came into favor does not matter nearly as much as the fact that it is in favor internationally.

Syncopated specialists come from the North and from the South. But the South seems to have the little best of it so far. One of the best groups of syncopators who reached these shores from foreign parts is Naomi and Her Brazilian Boys. This quintette of South American entertainers, compose an olive skinned girl who sings and a quartette of melody makers.

Their syncopated harmony is distinctive for its pep which is a direct contradiction to thetheory that people who hail from the South are languid. There is speed and action and unction about their presentation. The entire act is melody and movement presented before a background of rich hangings that make it exceedingly attractive.

The other acts scheduled are as follows:

Eckert & Francis offer "Another S'Message."

Step right this way, ladies and gentlemen, for the biggest and best show in town, with the biggest and best comedian on the screen:

Walter Hiers in his new Paramount picture, "Fair Week" opens at the Strand Theatre today.

The story, by Walter Woods, is a small town comedy with touches of melodrama. It's a rapid-fire action picture with big scenes galore.

We wouldn't even attempt to describe the balloon rescue and parachute drop by the star and little Mary Jane Irving.

But why limit ourselves to one or two scenes! The entire production is just punch after punch, the first fights included.

Constance Wilson has the leading woman's role. It is the first time we have seen her on the screen, although she played a minor role in "The Covered Wagon" with her more prominent sister, Lois.

"THE GINGHAM GIRL"

One of the impending theatrical joys of the season to which playgoers may look forward with a great deal of pleasant anticipation and feel reasonably certain that they will not be disappointed is "The Gingham Girl," the musical comedy which scored the record run in New York last and which ran in Chicago from August until January. It comes to the Broadway Theatre, tomorrow night.

"The Gingham Girl" is a musical comedy with a somewhat different atmosphere, and if local taste in musical comedy entertainment is anything like that of Manhattan the attendance will be limited only to the seating capacity of the theatre.

"The Gingham Girl" was produced by Schwab and Kusell, two youthful impresarios with revolutionary ideas as to what the amusement-loving public really wanted and those whose guess proved absolutely correct. The book of the piece was written by Albert Von Tilzer and the lyrics by Neville Fleeson.

The show, in its charming simplicity and refreshing novelty is a positive demonstration of the triumph of quality over quantity.

PALACE THEATRE

At the Palace theatre the last half of this week you will see another big time vaudeville program of high class entertainers.

For every industry and every business the whole world is literally scoured for the raw materials that go to the making of the completed product. Yet, it is not generally known that in the field of theatredom the same is true. Take the average vaudeville bill for instance. Its true cosmopolitan character can be seen when each of the acts is diagnosed.

At the Palace theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week the wide variety of the acts can readily be seen by scanning the names on the program. Thus Jim and Irene Marlyn who present an odd revuette of songs, dances and musical melodies have for years been in musical comedy and have toured the entire country appearing almost solely in this type of production. It is only during the past season that they have come into vaudeville, for their production is so elaborate and so beautifully staged that only the better vaudeville theatre can afford to play and pay them.

Les Perettos is a Parisian novelty lately here from France. El Cota, the master musician is a Spanish gentleman and has the inherent love of music of that exotic race. El Cota has featured in Keith houses for years as well as having appeared on the other bigger circuits.

Knowles & Hurst consist of a winsome maid formerly in musical comedy and a clever comedian. This is a typical New York combination carrying the very essence of Manhattan in its make-up and Lucky and Harris who complete the program are two boys who having lately come in from the west made a literal sensation in the east by the originality of their comedy offering and in conjunction with the vaudeville you will see David Belasco stage success Daddies one of the very finest of stage productions presented in motion pictures by a hand picked cast of brilliant stars. Picture producers for years have been dreaming of the time when they could produce Belasco plays on the screen. The dream of the Warner Brothers came true. This will be the third Belasco success produced by the Warners this year.

Daddies is one of the very best of the Belasco plays, a clean, sparkling comedy that will chase away the glooms and the joy-killing blues. It is a picture that combines comedy, pathos and drama in just the right proportion for maximum entertainment quality. Advance reports indicate that this picture is already enjoying success as one of the very best pictures of the year.

A bachelor club and the problems of its members who, in a moment of weakness, decide to adopt a war orphan each, gives rise to the very funny comedy situations. There is a very pretty love theme in the case of the bachelor who finds his "orphan" is a very pretty girl of seventeen And there is some pathos in the case of the man who finds his "orphans" to be triplets. But everyone is happy when the extremely pleasing ending shows the bachelors getting married and making comfortable homes for a number of fine women and children.

BREED THEATRE

The Man Who Won, the Dustin Farnum production which is the feature attraction at the Breed theatre today, is a drama of the old and gone west which is emphatically unusual in that it comprises but one situation done in such startling colors, such tremendous proportions and with such imagination as to bring it well above ordinary run of films with complicated dumbdoings.

The display of heroism it offers is unusual. It depicts the moral regeneration of a gambler. A man, who after spending most of his life staking against Luck for money, finally staking his life on a woman's honor is the part portrayed by Dustin Farnum.

Wild Bill, as the gambler is called, goes "West" finally, in a blaze of glory. He returns to her home a weak woman persuaded against her will to leave her husband and children.

Mr. Farnum is a good interpreter of Western character and his work for Wild Bill is about the best that ever has been seen in this city. He is intensely sincere in all his action, riding and shooting and performing his part with fine realism.

Jacqueling Gadsden plays the feminine lead opposite Mr. Farnum enacting the sorrowful role of Jessie, discontented wife of the poor miner. Others in the cast are Lloyd Whitlock, Ralph Cloninger, Mary Warren, Pee-Wee Holmes, Harvey Clark, Lon Poff and the two famous stage children Mickey McBan and Muriel McCormick both of whom are delightful in their present roles.

Mae Marsh in Paddy-the-next-Best-Thing, a five part fascinating comedy drama, the Fox news and a scenic make up the remainder of the bill.

Bob Caffrey, former Duquesne University athlete, who had a trial with the Pirates last spring, but compelled to leave camp because of illness has signed with the Bridgeport Eastern League team. He is a pitcher.

REPARATION EXPERTS' PLAN APPROVED

the trend of prices in the stock and bond markets was ascribed to the fact that trading already had discounted the constructive features. Foreign exchanges, however, reflected the favorable reaction to the report abroad, French francs at one time crossing six cents to within a few points of the year's high price.

Measures suggested in the report for stabilization of Germany's currency aroused the greatest interest in banking circles. Provisions for establishment by the central bank of an official rate of exchange discount and adoption of other currency control devices, bankers said, constituted a step as revolutionary as the establishment of the federal reserve system in the United States. They indicated they would study this section of the report with particular interest.

Bankers generally held that no basis had been definitely established for the consideration of the $800,000,000 mark loan, recommended in the report. No steps to raise money would likely be taken here, it was said, until the reparations commission had passed on the matter.

Business men agreed that acceptance of the report would lead to a revival of foreign trade and open the way for exports of a large volume of American good to Europe.

"Any settlement which permits Germany to have funds with which to buy foreign products is bound to increase the export sales to American copper, and therefore cannot but be favorable to the price of the metal," said Charles Hayden, head of a large number of copper companies.

A. C. Bedford, chairman of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, declared the "Dawes" recommendations represented a genuine, constructive step towards the stabilization of international commerce and finance and as such were the most valuable contributions to peace since the treaty of Versailles." The Dawes plan in its general aspect is eminently fair, he added.

Financial leaders expressed surprise at the large amount of German wealth in other lands and also the total of foreign money in Germany.

COMMENT ON REPORT BY PRESS OF GERMANY

Berlin, April 9 (By the A. P.)—Little comment on the experts' reports is yet available here. The extreme nationalist Deutsche Zeitung, however, is greatly disappointed: it characterizes General Dawes' letter as distinctly anti-German and pro-French.

The industrialists' organ, the Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung, admits that a great attempt has been made in a business-like manner to solve the fundamental problem of European politics, but is doubtful whether it will be possible to raise an international loan under the conditions it is proposed to place on German economic life.

The socialist Vorwaerts demands that the government do its utmost to attain the aims set forth by the experts.

Georg Bernhard, in the Vossische Zeitung, while admitting that Germany cannot reject the experts' programme, says the impression prevails that the experts in their deliberations took politics into account much more than they are inclined to admit, because their conclusions recall closely those of the London programme.

REPORTS OF REPARATION EXPERTS COMMITTEES

Paris, April 9—(By the Associated Press)—The reports of the experts who have been engaged for the past three months in the task of ascertaining Germany's capacity to pay reparations was handed to the reparation commission today. The two committees under the chairmanship of Brigadier General Charles G. Dawes and Reginald McKenna, respectively, have gone deeply into the intricacies of the many problems connected with reparations, and, as mentioned in the covering letter, they approached the task "as business men anxious to obtain results."

The league of nations is drawn into the reparations problem by the Dawes report, while an official representative of the United States is slated for an important role in the execution of the experts' plan. An American member of the general board of control for the proposed new gold bank of issue is quite likely to fill the important post of "commissioner." His duty will be to decide when Germany's capacity to pay has been reached, while the league finance committee will be asked to arbitrate if the commissioner's decisions in applying the "index of prosperity" are disputed by either Germany or the allies.

Business—No Politics

A business matter bereft of politics is how the experts describe the task they have just completed. They interpreted the object of their work as tending to the collection of the debt, rather than to the application of penalties, with a purely economic solution in view.

Recognizing the obligation of Germany to pay and declaring that she has resources with which to pay, the experts insist that if Germany does pay she must have her hand free to exploit her economic resources.

The experts carefully omit in their report mention of the Ruhr, but make it plain that the French and Belgians must satisfy themselves by leaving garrisons in the Ruhr, if they see fit, but taking their hands off the Ruhr and Rhineland railroads and the Ruhr industries.

The first prerequisite to the payment of reparations, the experts assert is sound money in Germany. They propose to this end the establishment of a new gold bank of issue with 400,000,000 gold marks capital, in the organization of which they make it to the interest and profit of Germany, as well as to the advantage of the allies, to cooperate.

Germany's production, they say, will enable her to meet her own requirements and raise amounts to apply to reparations as contemplated in the plan. These payments, fixed on a sliding scale, run from 110,000,000 gold marks in 1926 to 2,500,000,000 in 1934.

In order to prevent these payments from affecting adversely Germany's financial stability, an index has been fixed, making it possible to judge whether the amounts of the scheduled payments are or are not beyond her capacity.

A general board of control, including an American, with allied, neutral and German members, is the experts' solution of the difficult problem of guarantees that Germany will execute the terms of eventual settlement under their plan. The experts found this plan most likely to satisfy the allies and at the same time prove acceptable to the Germans. One member of this board, with the title of commissioner, will be vested with the important duties of deciding according to an index of prosperity when the payments provided for in the plan may prove too onerous and may threaten the upsetting of German finances.

Based on Budget

The index is to be based upon German exports and imports, the total budget receipts and expenditures, railroad traffic, the monetary value of the consumption of sugar, tobacco, beer and alcohol by the total population and the consumption of coal. Percentages will be fixed on the average statistics covering these bases, first for three years, then from six years, the percentage of each of the six groups compared with the base being separately computed and the average of the six percentage results forming the index.

When the resources exceed the index, supplementary payments on reparations are to be made in proportionate amounts; when the index proves deficient, basic payments shall be made for the period on which the calculations are based. But subsequent supplementary payments shall no thecome due until allowance has been made for previous deficiencies.

At this point the league of nations is brought into the plan; any disputed point upon the application of the statistic on this index is to be referred to the finance section of the league for arbitration.

Germany's Railroads

Germany's railroads estimated by the experts to be worth 26,000,000,000 gold marks with a net earning capacity as high as 1,000,000,000 gold marks yearly were found to be an available mean for securing reparation payments and aiding German finances. The experts propose a blanket mortgage of 11,000,000,000 gold marks on the entire German railroad system, bearing 5 per cent. interest with 1 per cent. sinking fund annually.

The interest and sinking fund on the mortgage, they figure, represent less than 3 per cent on the entire capitalized value of 26,000,000,000. Full interest will not be required during the period or reorganization, but the payment of 290,000,000 marks will be asked in 1927 and 1928, which the experts think ought to become normal years.

German industry under the plan is expected to provide 5,000,000,000 gold marks, represented by first mortgage and bearing the same rate of interest as the railroad bonds. This amount the experts explain, is less than the total debt of the industrial undertakings in Germany before the war.

The interest on these bonds will be paid on a progressive scale, beginning the second year with two and a half per cent.; five per cent. the third year and five er cent. plus one per cent sinking fund, the fourth year. In the event of default in the payment of the interest on the sinking fund or principal upon either railroads or industrial bond provision is made for the recovery of the deficiency from the German government through the commissioner of controlled revenue.

Plan For Treaty Payments

Summarising the proceeds from all the provisions in the plan for treaty payments, the experts estimate that they will produce 1,000,000,000 gold marks the first year, 1,220,000,000 the second year, 1,460,000,000 the third year, 2,000,000,000 the fourth year and 2,500,000,000 the maximum payment to be required from Germany annually, the fifth year, and thereafter.

Reginald McKenna and his colleagues on the second committee find that the Germans have six and three quarters billion gold marks abroad and that all this sum represents purchases of paper marks at a dead loss by a million of foreigners. These estimates were made on a mass of details and specific information which the experts find that, in addition to these assets abroad, there is in Germany foreign money approximately to the amount of 1,200,000,000 gold marks, while foreigners own in Germany property to the amount of 1,500,000,000 gold marks, which is subject to special taxation and consequently ought to be taken into account in an estimate of Germany's resources.

As to how German capital abroad may be attracted back to Germany, the experts believe the only way is to eliminate the causes of the exodus, that is, to give German money a stable basis of value and make it to Germany's interest to pay her obligations. The only intermediate measure that promises results, in their opinion, is to grant amnesty for a limited time from the penalties imposed for the export of capital ard to give special inducements for subscriptions to German loans in foreign currency.

Needs Help From Abroad.

Germany needs help from abroad to the extent of $200,000,000 gold marks, partly to capitalize the new gold bank of issue and partly to meet expenditures during the period required for her to balance her budget. The experts say that extension of this help, together with the share the German treasury will have in interest on the railroad and industrial mortgages, will give Germany an incentive to accept the plan and carry it out.

The idea that surplus revenue alone can be applied to the payment of Germany's foreign debts is rejected by the experts. Payments, they declare, ought to be made to her taxable capacity, and any deficiencies in resources from mortgages must be made up from taxation. It is a simple principle of justice, they point out, as contemplated in the treaty, that the German people should be taxed at least as heavily as the peoples of the allied countries, and the only limitations should be that of practicability.

The experts make a distinction between the amount of money that Germany can raise for the reparations account and the amount that can be transferred to foreign countries. Currency and budget instability might result from overestimating of her capacity for making payments abtoad. Reparations, however, they contend may properly be included in the budget. The index of prosperity as interpreted and applied by the "commissioner" is to be relied upon to arrive at a proper balance.

Spending Without Stint.

The experts found that Germany had been spending without stint on complete installation of her railroad system, which has been brought to a point of efficiency unknown before the war. The transportation system and industries generally are provided with the most modern appliances, and ports and terminals have been extended and improved, furnishing excellent sources of revenue and an adequate pledge, along with monopolies, for the payment of reparations.

With respect to the military aspects of sanctions and guarantees, the Dawes report says: "If political guarantees and penalties intended to ensure execution of the plan proposed are considered desirable they fall outside the committee's jurisdiction. Questions of military occupation also are not within our terms of reference. It, however, is our duty to point out clearly that our forecasts are based on the assumption that economic activity will be unhampered and unaffected by any foreign organisation other than the controls herein provided. Consequently our plan is based upon the assumption that existing measures, insofar as they hamper that activity will be withdrawn or sufficiently modified as soon as Germany has put into execution the plan recommended."

In agreement with the railway experts, the committee recommends the conversion of the German railways into a joint stock company, adding: "It is not our intention thus to deprive Germany of the administration of her railways in favor of the allies. On the contrary our plan demands only a modest return on the capital cost, and so long as this return is forthcoming we do not anticipate any interference in the German management of the undertaking."

The railways are to be managed by a board of eighteen directors, of whom nine will be chosen by the German government and the private holders of preference shares, and the other nine will be named by the trustee of the bonds to be issued amounting to 11,000,000,000 gold marks, five of whom may be Germans. The chairman of the board and the general manager of the railways will be German.

Contributions From Industries.

Regarding contributions from the various German industries, the report says: "The committee has been impressed with the fairness and desirability of requiring as a contribution to reparation payments from German industry a sum of not less than 5,000,000,000 gold marks to be represented by first mortgage bonds bearing 5 per cent interest and 1 per cent sinking fund per annum."

It is pointed out that the industrial concerns have profited in many ways through the depreciated currency, such as the long delayed payment of taxes by subsidies granted and advances made by the German government and by the depreciation of emergency money which they issued. Notwithstanding some losses incurred by these industrial concerns, the committee feels that the burden imposed by the plan is not too great for them to bear.

Provision For Payments.

The provision contemplated by the committe for treaty payments is as follows: "Budget moratorium period: first year from foreign loan and part interest (200,000,000) on railway bonds, a total of 1,000,000,000 gold marks. Second year, from interest on railway bonds (including 180,000,000 balance from first year) and interest on industrial debentures and budget contribution, including the sale of railway shares, a total of 1,120,000,000 gold marks.

"Transition period: Third year, from interest on railway bonds and industrial debentures, from transport tax and from budget: a total of 1,200,000,000 gold marks, subject to contingent addition or reduction not exceeding 250,000,000 gold marks. Fourth year, from interest on railway bonds and industrial debentures, from transport tax and from budget, a total of 1,750,000,000 gold marks, subject to contingent addition or reduction not exceeding 250,000,000 gold marks.

"Standard year: fifth year, from interest on railway bonds and industrial debentures, from transport tax and from budget, a total of 2,500,000,000 gold marks."

With a view to making certain that not only does Germany meet her payments but that the possible surplus is actually established, the report says: "We are convinced that some kind of coordinated policy with regard to the exchange lies at the root of the reparation problem and is essential to any practical scheme in obtaining the maximum sums from Germany for the benefit of the allies.

"The greater the extent to which payment may be rendered automatic and a matter of habit and be independent of a fluctuating political attitude towards reparations the less will be the friction and the greater will be the real stability of the German budget. In the last resort the best security is the interest of the German government and people to accept in good faith a burden which the world is satisfied will be within their capacity and to liquidate as speedily as possible a burden which is and should be onerous."

FINDINGS OF SECOND COMMITTEE OF EXPERTS

Paris, April 9.—An official summary of the report of the second committee of experts follows:

Preamble: The committee to consider the means of estimating the amount of German exported capital and of bringing it back to Germany, held 38 meetings in Paris and Berlin. It adopted the date of December 31, 1923, as that to which its estimates relate. It is not possible to fix precise figures but the committee has laid down maximum and minimum limits between which the actual amount is to be found.

"Section 1. Method of Work.

"(A). While availing themselves of all information the committee rejected the method of making a detailed inquiry of bankers and business men throughout the world as to specific and confidential transactions on the part of Germans.

German Capital Abroad.

"(B). Instead it adopted the following method: (1) The committee estimated the total value of German capital abroad at the outbreak of war. (2). It estimated the total reduction thereof during the war as a result of adverse trade balance during that period, advances by Germany to her allies, loss by sequestration of property in allied and associated countries and loss through depreciation in value of securities. (3). It estimated the total accretions to German foreign assets during the war as a result of sales of German securities, interest accumulations, sale of gold and profits realized from territories occupied by Germany.

"(C). The foregoing calculation resulted in an estimate of German foreign holdings at the time of the armistice.

"(D). Since that date until December 31, 1923, methods of increase of foreign holdings have been as follows:

"(1) Chiefly the direct sale of paper marks and mark bank credits; (2) the sale of goods, real estate, precious metals; (3) interest on accumulations, tourist expenditures, foreign money expended by armies of occupation in Germany; (4) remittances from Germans abroad, earnings of transportation companies for transportation for foreign goods, insurance profits, etc.

"(E). The causes of decrease since the armistice have been as follows: (1) purchase of imported goods; (2) cash payments to the allies under the treaty of Versailles; (3) German tourists' expenditures; (4) interest on German securities held abroad.

"(F). In making all computations the committee has not relied on official reports of German imports and exports but has revalued the commodities on the basis of current world prices at pertinent dates.

"(G). The result of all the foregoing calculations gives German foreign holdings as of December 31st, 1923.

"Section 2. Estimated Figures.

"(B). The war period. (1). Depreciation of German assets abroad; non-payment of interest due and liquidation and sequestration measures resulted in a loss of approximately 16.1 milliard gold marks. (2). During the war profits and exploitation of Belgium, northern France, Poland, Lithuania, and Roumania approximated 5.7 to 6 milliard gold marks; and the sale of gold and of German securities aggregated approximately two milliard gold marks.

"(C). Post war period. (1): Principal causes of reduction; deficit in Germany's trade balance and the meeting of cash payments to the allies under the treaty of Versailles caused reduction of between 9 and 10 milliard gold marks. Earnings from German shipping, insurance greatly reduced. (2). Principal causes of increased assets: (A) sale of mark credit bank balances and paper marks resulted in profits of between 7.6 and 8.7 milliard gold marks. German marks purchased by citizens of many countries and more than a million individual accounts were found in German marks. (B). Sales of gold aggregated one and a half milliard gold marks. (C). Sale of German real property and securities to foreigners approximated one and a half milliard gold marks.

"Section 3. Conclusions as to amount of German foreign hole assets.

"(A). Committee estimates that German capital abroad of every kind whether liquid or in permanent investments was not less on December 31, 1923, than 5.7 milliard gold marks and not more than 7.8 milliard gold marks and it thinks the middle figure of 6.75 milliard gold marks is the approximate total. This figure by comparison with the 1914 estimate of German foreign holdings shows a reduction in foreign holdings of approximately 21 milliard gold marks.

"(B). In addition to the foregoing, foreign currency now in Germany approximates 1,200,000,000 gold marks.

"(C). It must be remembered that foreigners hold property in Germany which has a counterbalancing effect and the committee estimates the value of such property as from one to one and a half milliard gold marks.

"Section 4. Conclusions as to means of bringing exported capital back to Germany.

Flight of Capital.

"(A). Flight of capital was a result in the main of the usual economic factors, namely, the failure to balance the budget, inflation and the raising of large national loans but it was accentuated by the attitude of the German people toward the payment of Germany's war creditors and was marked by ingenious devices to evade restrictive legislation. It was also influenced by the action of speculators and timid investors.

"(B). Neither legal enactments nor severe penalties hampered the flight of capital or resulted in the disclosure of assets abroad. Under the economic conditions above stated this demonstrates the ineffectiveness of restrictive legislation and the committee feels that it would have been ineffective whether or not the laws had been fully enforced.

"(C). The only way to prevent exodus of capital and encourage return is to eradicate fundamental causes. Inflation must be permanently stopped; the budget must be balanced and a bank of issue on a sound basis established.

"(D). The committee knows the conclusions of the first committee of experts and if effect is given to their recommendations it thinks that a considerable part of German assets abroad will return to the ordinary course of trade.

"(E). Austria is a case in point where under a stabilized currency the necessities of trade bring back existing foreign holdings.

"(F). While believing that special legislation is not required when a country's finances is on stable basis, nevertheless during the period of transition the committee suggests that Germany might grant an amnesty for a limited time to those bringing their capital back, who violated German law in sending it abroad and that special terms be offered for subscriptions to government loans which are made in foreign currencies."

N. E. O. P. HOLDS CONVENTION IN NEW LONDON WEDNESDAY

New London, April 9.—Mary Riley has sold a house and lot on Jefferson avenue to Frank and Frances Messina.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary D. Corey, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at her residence, 67 Maple avenue. Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ, conducted the services. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Mrs. Laura Davis of Ashaway, R. I., Mrs. Stockton Hickey and infant son of Granite street and Mrs. Martha Steinberg and infant daughter of Belden street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged today.

Geraldine Coridesi, 7, of 74 Goshen street, is a patient at Lawrence hospital, having been removed to the institution this afternoon, the child being struck by a commercial truck, owned by the city and operated by William L. White, 46 Lewis street. The child is known to have sustained injuries to her left leg and there is a possibility that she is injured internally, but that condition will not be determined for a day or two. The condition of the girl is considered serious. She had been playing on the sidewalk on Shaw street with several companions. When the truck was about to pass the point where the children were at play, the Coridesi child ran into the street and in the path of the approaching truck. Before White could bring the heavy machine to a stop the girl was struck and knocked down with considerable force. It was evident that the child was seriously injured and White caused her to be rushed to the hospital.

Barge Charles Randolph, one of three barges in tow of tug Elmer E. Keeler and which spring aleak in the Sound Sunday night, and which craft it became necessary to bring into port and beach to prevent her from sinking, was towed to her destination, Fall River, Mass., today by the Keeler. Repairs to the barge were completed this morning and the trip was resumed without further delay. As soon as the Keeler delivers the barge at Fall River, she will return to port and pick up the remaining two coal-laden craft, which are consigned to Boston.

The civil superior court will convene in New London tomorrow morning, with a jury. Judge L. P. Waldo Marvin will be on the bench. The cases scheduled to be tried are: A. Bates vs Carroll; M. E. Bates vs Carroll; A. Halyburton vs Carroll; F. Halyburton vs Carroll; McKenzie vs Revens, Exr.; Avery vs. Linnell and Donohue vs. Davis, et al.

Judge Prince told Caretaker Elmer E. Kenerson, in the police court this morning, that he should exercise much care in keeping disorderly and intoxicated persons away from Riverside park, where the caretaker is employed. Mr. Kennerson was complimented by the judge on his arraignment of three youths—George Burke, Edward O'Brien and John Sullivan—charged with a breach of the peace in offensive conduct, noise and behavior. They were convicted and each was fined $25. That made a tidy sum for them to pay, but relatives came to their rescue and they were spared the humiliation of going to jail. The fellows were in Riverside park yesterday, had a bottle and were drinking. Mr. Kennerson ordered them away. Then Burke showed fight and threatened the officer. The three got upon tables in the park and did some damage by breaking them.

There were four other drunks before the court.

John Fell, who has been employed on the ferryboat, was found badly drunk on Tilley street. He was fined and then was given into the custody of the probation officer that he might settle.

John Saunders, 19, of Niantic, was presented before Justice of the Peace James Floyd in Waterford this forenoon charged with theft. He pleaded guilty upon advice of his guardian ad litem, Winder E. Reed, who was appointed by the court, and was sentenced to ten days in jail, the execution of the sentence being suspended six months, Saunders being placed upon probation.

Saunders several weeks ago stole $20 from Mrs. Lottie Phillips, residing on Mallory Hill, Waterford. Complaint was made to the Waterford and New London authorities and Phillips was located by Sheriff J. A. Tubbs, who informed the New London police that Mrs. Phillips did not desire to prosecute Saunders. The arraignment of the young man in court today was upon complaint of Sheriff Tubbs, who filed information against Saunders with Grand Juror John A. Malona. Saunders has paid Mrs. Phillips a portion of the money he stole from the latter's home and has promised to pay the remainder.

Sessions at Connecticut College for Women were resumed today following the spring vacation of two weeks. Most of the students returned to the college on the evening trains last night.

Mrs. John Delmonte and infant son, of Westerly, and Mrs. John Speaks and infant daughter of Waterford, were patients dismissed at Home Memorial hospital today.

For several weeks the fire alarm whistle atop the power house of the Connecticut Power company on Water street, has not sounded properly when alarms were run in. The whistle was repaired today.

State's Attorney Hadlai A. Hull, who has been seriously ill at his home on Vauxhall street many weeks and whose condition now is steadily improving, will not attempt to act at the criminal session of the superior court, May term, which will open in New London, Tuesday, May 6. Attorney Warren B. Burrows, who has assisted State's Attorney Hull in the prosecution of many cases and who acted as state's attorney at the January session of the court will again act as prosecutor.

The 32nd annual convention of New England Order of Protection was held here today, at Union lodge and was attended by about 30 delegates and grand lodge officers. The annual reports were submitted and approved, the reports showing a decrease in membership somewhat because of the great many deaths that occurred during the past year. The total membership, as reported by Grand Secretary Henry C. Kendall of New Haven, was 5,545. Grand Treasurer F. Edward Whalen of New Haven reported a balance of $1,169.29 in the treasury April 1.

The following officers were elected: Grand warden, Thomas M. Payne, Waterbury; grand vice warden, Frank J. Harrington, Windsor; past grand warden, Joseph E. Clabby, Bridgeport; grand secretary, Henry C. Kendall, New Haven; grand treasurer, F. Edward Whalen, New Haven; grand chaplain, Mrs. Marie B. Seiferman, Portland; grand guide, George F. Hall, Meriden; grand guardian, Lillie Ennis, Bridgeport; grand sentinel, Miss Helen Casey, New Haven; grand trustees, Charles J. Manwaring, Niantic, chairman; W. Frederick Mills, Torrington; John H. Butler, Waterbury; committee on finance, P. J. Grace, Bridgeport; chairman on laws, Frederick W. Richards, New Haven; committee on appeals, Joseph A. McConnell, Waterbury, chairman.

From the number of persons prosecuted in the police court of late for intoxication (four of them today), it is apparent that there are places in New London where beverages stronger than one-half of one per cent. can be purchased, yet comment is being frequently made as to what work prohibition enforcement agents are doing. The two agents assigned to New London are Joseph F. Fitzpatrick and Harry W. Avery, but these officers have not made an arrest, nor even a raid in New London or vicinity in months. Neither have the state police showed any activity, for that department has not caused an arrest to be made in a long time, in fact not since a Waterford Polish resident "squealed" to a state policeman, taking the officer to a Shaw street place and securing liquor for him, after the informant had been presented in the New London police court on a charge of intoxication.

The New London authorities frequently visit places which are reputed to be places that dispense liquor, but of late no evidence has been found that would warrant an arrest. Although the activities of the state and local authorities have been extremely limited, drunks are a common sight about the streets and in places where gatherings occur.

A Bank street woman has complained to the police because of the actions of her husband, who is a soldier and therefore does not reside at the place of abode of his wife regularly. The wife alleges that her husband frequently appears at the former's home and creates a disturbance and annoys lodgers in the place. The woman has been informed that if the conduct of her husband continues and she will enter a complaint formally against him, the fellow will be taken into custody. The husband was arrested Sunday night for creating a disturbance in a State street restaurant, but he was not presented in the police court Monday morning, being allowed to return to his post.

One of the worst disturbances that has occurred in a New London motion picture house took place shortly after 9 o'clock tonight when Ateo Camilucci of Nameaug street attacked Special Officer Thomas Bonanno. Camilucci was subdued and was locked up, charged with breach of the peace and resisting an officer. Bonanno alleges that some of Camilucci's friends also attacked him, but he could not identify them because of the crowd that collected.

Camilucci and his friends were leaving the theatre when Camilucci lighted a cigarette in the rear of the balcony. Bonanno remonstrated with Camilucci and a fight followed, in which both Camilucci and Bonanno fell to the floor. Bonanno had to use his black-jack to keep the crowd of youths away from him and in the fight he sustained lacerations of the lip and face.

SENATE ORDERS AN INVESTIGATION OF WHEELER

Washington, April 9.—Immediate investigation of the charges which led to the indictment of Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, by a federal grand jury in his own state yesterday was ordered today by the senate.

Action came after an impassioned address by the prosecutor of the Daugherty committee, delivered before a crowded chamber and galleries, and expressions of confidence by his colleagues.

Senator Wheeler denounced the charges brought against him as false, and the indictment as a deliberate "frame-up." He assured the senate there was not a scintilla of evidence to support them and defied his enemies to produce such evidence.

Then striking back vigorously at his accusers, the Montana senator declared he was not to be intimidated; that he had fought corruption during a stormy political career in his own state, and would continue to fight it in Washington regardless of his own personal fortunes.

Announcing that he sought no sympathy from his colleagues, and was perfectly able to make his own fight, Senator Wheeler pleaded with the senate to put an end to what he characterized as a "spy" system designed to intimidate United States senators.

"They are not going to intimidate me," he reiterated. "I am going to do my duty as I see it. I am not going to be stopped by threats or by clamor. I sincerely hope you believe me when I tell you this charge has no foundation."

"But they have not stopped with their attack upon me," he added in a choking voice. "They have tried to injure my wife and my babies."

As the first of a dozen senators approached to congratulate him, Senator Wheeler brushed tears from his eyes.

U. S. NOW FOURTH AMONG NATIONS IN SHIPBUILDING

New York, April 9—The United States jumped from sixth to fourth place among the nations in shipbuilding for the quarter ending March 31, Lloyd's Register of shipping announced today.

While only 4.8 per cent. of the world's shipbuilding is being done in the United States as compared with 53.5 per cent. in Great Britain and Ireland and 36.7 per cent. for all other countries, the gain of this country in tonnage under construction was 78,000 or proportionately more than England Lloyd's report showed.

The rank of leading countries and tons under construction for the quarter just ended was reported as follows: Great Britain and Ireland, 1,472,000 tons, a gain of 78,000 over preceding quarters; Germany, 299,000 tons, a loss of 37,000; Italy, 180,000 tons, a gain of 11000; United States, 119,000; France, 111,000, a gain of 1,000; Holland Japan and British dominions follow next in order.

The world volume of launching fell considerably short of new construction the register noted, while during the preceding quarter the reverse was true.

The total of 2,516,000 gross tons for all countries compares with 3,163,000 tons for the quarter ending just before the World war.

Take some seed that has been lodged on his long tramp northward in the bootsole of an common soldier in Vespasian's legion. The boot reaches Dover, plods on, wears out, is cast by the way, rots in a ditch. From it, next spring, Britain has gained a new flower.—Quiller-Couch.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

Driving Off the Owl

I'm glad to say that the Queen Bee didn't run away with the old gentleman bunny's Luckymobile as I feared she might in the last story. If she had, she would have been dreadfully disappointed to find that the Wasp Prince had already gone out for a spin in his aeroplane.

Well, after the two little rabbits had rested themselves, they set out once more for the place where they had left the Luckymobile, under the tree, near the bees' nest, you remember.

"Let go of my coat!" shouted the old

...ent. But goodness me. It took so long to put on the rubber tires that Mr. Merry Sun couldn't wait and went to bed in the Golden West. When, of course, the little rabbits couldn't see what they were doing.

"Oh, dear me!" cried Uncle Lucky, "I've made a mistake! I've put a tire on instead of a collar," and he began to laugh for a rubber collar feels dreadfully ticklish, they tell me

'I'd like to find a little mouse
That isn't hidden in her house,
I want to meet a little rabbit
Who has a foolish wandering habit.
I'd love to catch a little chick
And all his pretty feathers pick."

All of a sudden tooted an old owl.

"Gracious goodness rebus!" whispered the old gentleman rabbit, "We must be careful. I don't like the way that old owl talks," and the two little bunnies huddled close together under an old bush. But that old owl had sharp eyes, and pretty soon he saw Uncle Lucky's old wedding stove-pipe hat sticking up through the leaves.

"Ha, ha, ho, I see your hat,
You little rabbit, sleek and fat.
I'll eat you up without delay
Before the darkness turns to day."

That dreadful owl tooted into the bush.

"Let go of my coat!" shouted the old gentleman rabbit, turning around to kick that owl with his strong hind feet, the way a rabbit fights, you know.

With a wheezy cough, the old owl let go of Uncle Lucky's coat. Quick as a wink, Little Jack Rabbit fired his popgun, and that wicked old owl turned away and stubbed his toe, and ruffled his feather, all in a row.

"Don't you ever come back," shouted Uncle Lucky, "because if you do I'll shoot you till you're black and blue."

And I guess that old owl never did come back, for in the next story you shall hear how the two little rabbits started off again in the Luckymobile—that is, if Old Man Weasel or Danny Fox don't suddenly jump out from behind a tree.

LEONARD BRIDGE

The Community club ... Wednesday evening. Arthur J. ... and Edward H. McCall, Jr., were the entertainment committee. The program began with singing, followed by a reading entitled Josh Billings on Mules, by Arthur J. Randall, after which there was much merriment over the Sale of a Kicking Mule, A. J. Randall taking the part of the owner of the mule. The customer who finally bought the mule was E. H. McCall Jr. The mule in question was only partially visible on the stage and seemed very docile when being patted and his good qualities were being praised, but each time the buyer tried to approach him the animal began a furious kicking which kept the audience in an uproar. The "mule" proved later to be Bradford Jones in disguise. A lecture on Woman's Problems by Miss Skinem followed, with a Questionnaire on Husbands, by Miss Skinem. The women of the club were given slips of paper on which was written a question in regard to their husbands. They wrote a humorous answer to the questions and later these were read, causing much laughter. Miss Skinem, who had charge of this part, proved to be Edward H. McCall Jr., dressed in feminine attire. A humorous reading on Etiquette, by Mrs. E. W. Jones, came next, after which Rev. Miss Hartig gave a very interesting talk on Plymouth, Vt., where she went at one time as a missionary to help the struggling little church of that community, and while there was entertained at the home of President Coolidge's grandmother. ## POETRY

THE SOWER'S SONG.

Now hands to seed sheet, boys;
We step and we cast; old Time's on the wing;
And would we partake of harvest joys
The corn must be sown in spring.
Fall gently and still, good corn.
Lie warm in thine earthy bed;
And stand so yellow some morn.
For beast and man must be fed.

Old earth is a pleasure to see
In sunshiny cloak of red and green;
The furrow lies fresh, this year will be
As years that are past have been.
Fall gently and still, good corn.
Lie warm in thy earthy bed;
And stand so yellow some morn.
For beast and man must be fed.

Old earth, receive this corn,
The son of six thousand golden sires;
All these on thy kindly breast were born.
One more thy poor child requires.
Fall gently and still, good corn,
Lie warm in thy earthy bed;
And stand so yellof some morn,
For beast and man must be fed.

Now steady and sure again,
And measure of stroke and step we keep;
Thus up and down we cast our grain;
Sow well, and you gladly reap.
Fall gently and still, good corn,
Lie warm in thy earthy bed;
And stand so yellow some morn,
For beast and man must be fed.

—Thomas Carlyle.

THE WHIP-POOR-WILL.

The sky is lighting up her lamps,
Spent day has taken flight;
The trees have wrapped their dusky cloaks
About time for the night.
For moments long with still suspense
The moon rests on the hill,
And lingers there as though to hear
The song of Whip-poor-will.

In busy haste the fire-flies
Go darting to and fro
With tiny touches lit to set
The grasses all aglow;
And driveway, humming insect worlds
Are bidden now to still;
Their evening chant, to listen for
The son of Whip-poor-will.

From garden depths it comes at last!
The lilies at my feet
Look up and seem to smile with me,
For night is now complete;
And all this peace and quietude
The heart drinks to its fill,
Whip out your dear familiar song,
My unseen Whip-poor-will!

—Mildred Hobbs, in Boston Transcript.

MARKET WAS DULL

New York, April 9—As a stock market factor today, the much heralded Dawes report proved to be a "dud" instead of the bomb-shell that many observers had predicted, prices slipping throughout the entire list in one of the dullest full day sessions this year.

Chief speculative interest centered in Woolworth which broke 33 1-2 points to 301 1-4 following the publication of a recapitalization plan which involves the splitting up of the present stock on a 4 to 1 basis by reducing the par value from $100 to $25 and the declaration of a dividend of $3 on the new stock. This is equivalent to 12 on the old, as against the present dividend of $8. With net earnings running over $31 a share last year, many holders of the stock apparently counted on a larger dividend distribution and disposed of their holdings when the directors' action became known.

Led by American Can, which was hammered down more than 2 points to 100 1-4, another flock of new 1924 lows was created during the day. They included American Sugar refining 47 1-8, Gulf States Steel at 68 5-8, Studebaker old stock at 91 1-8 and the new at 86 1-2 and Crucible steel, Willys-Overland preferred, DuPont, National Lead and Jordan Motors. Baldwin duplicated its previous low at 114 3-4.

U. S. Steel common sank more than a point to 97 1-2 or within 1-2 a point of the year's low. Selling of this and other steel shares was conducted despite the assertion of chairman Topping at the annual Republic Iron and Steel stockholders meeting that a recession in activity was natural after the heavy buying of the first quarter, but that current earnings were "satisfactory." The quarterly report of the Sloss-Sheffield comany, which showed net earnings of $2.68 on the common, also was regarded as favorable in view of the supposed depression in the pig iron industry during that period.

Indications that the bearish action is still in temporary control of the market was evidenced by the successful manner in which standard industrials were depressed in the last hour, while commission houses again reported that public interest was at low ebb, the number of so-called "amateur shorts" was said to be increasing.

Rails and oils held relatively steady until late in the session when they showed a tendency to decline with the rest of the list. As a rule, however, recessions in the active issues were held to a point or less. Among the relatively few issues to show independent strength were the Burns Brothers coal shares and American Water Works common.

Call money opened at 4 -3 per cent. and then eased to 4 1-4 where it closed. There was little activity in the time money and commercial paper market, the ruling rates being 4 1-2 per cent.

The reaction of the foreign exchanges to the Dawes report was favorable. Francs jumped nearly 20 points to 6.04 cents, or within a few points of the year's high, and similar gains were recorded by Belgian and Swiss francs. Demand sterling moved up about 1-2 cent to around $4.34.

BOND MARKET

New York, April 9—With the bond market failing to reflect any definite reaction to the Dawes report prices today held firm in an unusually dull trading session. A revival of interest in local traction issues, following announcement that legislative leaders at Albany had agreed on a compromise transit bill, provided the only feature of trading.

Chief interest in bond circles centered in plans for new financing. Preparations were under way for an early offering of about $20,000,000 Pennsylvania railroad five per cent. equipment trust notes. An issue of $6,000,000 Wisconsin Central three year 5 1-2 per cent. notes were placed privately. Several other important issues were said to be about ready for offering.

Official denials that the American Agricultural Chemical company was having any financial difficulties, or that a reorganization or capital readjustment were in prospect, steadied the company's bonds after their recent break. Interest lagged in speculative railroad liens and fresh selling pressure developed against rubber and sugar company bonds.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, April 9—Grain prices failed to receive any stimulus today from the Dawes report and some foreign selling of wheat here was evident.

As generally expected, the government crop proved bearish, about in line with unofficial estimates which have been current. Wheat closed unsettled 1-8 to -4 a 7-8 net lower, May 101 3-8 to 101 1-2 and July 103 1-4 to 103 3-8, with corn 3-8 to 1 1-4 to off and provisions unchanged to 10c higher.

Notable lack of aggressive buying characterized the wheat market today, nothwithstanding that contents of the Dawes report were made public before the market opened. Apparently any tonic influence of the Dawes report had been discontinued in advance, besides, there was comment that loan arrangements specified no provision for buying feed supplies. Th efact also that the government crop report was due after the close had a tendency to restrict trading, and it was correctly assumed by a majority of leaders that the government figures would be adverse to the buying side of the market.

Fine weather likely to promote growth and to facilitate seeding had much to do with bringing about sufficient selling to depress wheat values nearly one cent a bushel in some cases, however, a little profit taking on the part of sellers led to slight rallies as the day drew to an end.

Corn developed even more weakness than was the case with wheat. Scattered liquidation by holders was in progress, for the most part, the selling was in small lots, but was of a persistent variety that attracted notice. Seeding headway eased the oats market.

Provisions were firmer in line with hog values.

CURB MARKET

New York, April 9—Trading in today's curb market was of a rather desultory character, closing prices showing a curious mixture of gains and losses.

In the rail group the strength of Solar Refining, which advanced several points to 310 and then dropped back to 306 1-2, was counteracted by the heaviness of Illinois Pipe, Standard Oil of Nebraska, and Prairie Oil and Gas which dropped 3 to 4 1-2 points. The more active issues showed mixed changes with the South Americans displaying a firm undertone.

Otis Elevator new stock, which broke to a new low yesterday dropped back 3 1-2 points. Selling of Glen Alden coal, which carried that stock down 7 points yesterday, appears to have subsided, that stock closing unchanged to 37 1-2 after having sold as high as 55 1-4. Durant Motors, Lehigh power securities, American Light and Traction and Standard Gas Voting Trust certificates dropped 1 to 3 1-2 points while Hudson not gains of a point or more were recorded by Tennessee Electric power, Western power and Gillette Safety Razor.

Activity of Kay Copper was again the most outstanding developments in the mining group.

An external jump of 10 points to 150, a new 1924 high, by Superior Oil 7s of 1929 featured the bond list.

STAFFORD SPRINGS

At a special borough meeting held in Warren Memorial hall Tuesday evening $55,000 was appropriated for rebuilding Main street, Haymarket square and East Main street. The condition of Main street has long been the laughing stock of strangers and very annoying to automobilists who have had to drive over it. When the motion for the appropriation was made it was acted upon without a dissenting voice. The meeting also authorized the court of burgesses to borrow the money to meet the needed improvements. It was one of the most harmonious meetings held in the borough in a long time. Charles B. Pinney presided and Richard R. Murray was clerk.

The style of road approved by the burgesses and voted for at the meeting is a 12 inch gravel foundation, with crushed stone base and a five-inch sand filler on top of which will be three inches of trap rock penetrated with asphalt.

George Swanton was fined $20 and costs, a total of $30.43 by Judge Heald in the borough court Tuesday, after pleading guilty to the charge of intoxication. Swanton has been before the court before, on similar charges, and that, Judge Heald said, was the reason for the heavy fine this time.

The high water of Monday and Tuesday has subsided much to the relief of property owners in the vicinity of the First National bank, whose cellars had been flooded.

The funeral of Mrs. Rose Silk of Staffordville was held at St. Edward's church Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock. Burial was in St. Edward's cemetery.

Too many people have more religion outside than they have inside.

Merrill Post, No. 29, American legion, Rogers Trainer, commander, was inspected Tuesday evening, by Rhode Island department Commander Bertram W. Wall of Bristol and Adjutant Raymond B. Littlefield of Central Falls. Also present was Rhode Island Vice Commander Charles Johnson of East Greenwich. About thirty members were present to hear the inspiring talk by the department officers. A committee was appointed to have in charge the observance of Poppy day, the Saturday before Memorial day, the committee was named by Commander Trainer. Following the regular program was an informal social time was enjoyed by the buddies.

The work on sewage installation is proceeding on Beach street, where progress is rendered slow by the large number of boulders encountered as the extension of the trench proceeds. In fact when the boulders are removed there is not much other material left to be carted away. As reported by the sewage commission to Westerly highway commission, streets will be opened in the following order for the installation of sewers in the drainage area of Westerly this year, Park avenue, Granite street and High street as far as Dixon street. There is a bare possibility that with favorable progress of the work, Railroad avenue may be opened up this year.

At 8 o'clock in the council chamber of the Westerly town hall, Wednesday evening was held the public hearing by the Westerly fire district assessors, Walter C. Hiscox, Charles P. Crandall and D. Harold Rogers, relative to the extension of the present boundaries of the fire district. Sentiment has been expressed that the Central park district of the town should be included in the bounds of the fire district. There were present taxpayers of the Westerly fire district when the meeting was called to order by Walter C. Hiscox, chairman of the board of assessors.

The sixth annual meeting of the S. D. B. of the Pawcatuck Seventh-day Baptist church was held in the vestry on Main street Wednesday night at 6.30 o'clock, with twenty-five members present. At that time the following menu was served.

Grapefruit
Celery Soup
Mashed Potatoes Turnips
Onions
Roast Stuffed Turkey with Dressing
Giblet Sauce
Watermelon Pickle
Raspberry Sherbert
Angel Cake Coffee

Following the dinner came the reports of the various officers and committees for the year. The election of officers resulted as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Broughton have been visitor in Providence.

Mrs. M. F. Clarke of Providence was a business caller in Westerly Wednesday.

Mrs. M. Days was a Westerly and Pawcatuck business visitor from Providence Wednesday.

Miss Frances E. Pendleton of Stonington borough has been the guest of Mrs. Louis W. Arnold.

Dr. John Champlin was a Providence business visitor Wednesday.

Pawcatuck High school students who attend school in Stonington borough are enjoying their spring vacation this week, the date of the regular vacation having been advanced because of scarlet fever cases.

This (Thursday) evening the Mistuxet club of Stonington plays in the Cycle club rooms, Westerly, and the Westerly Masonic bridge players go to the Hooks' rooms in Mystic.

Joseph T. Grills and Joseph Monti were in Bridgeport Tuesday night, to witness the basketball game between the American Legion team and the Hebrew association five of that place for the city championship. The game resulted 27 to 25 in favor of the Hebrew association.

On the end a west-bound express stopping Tuesday afternoon at the Westerly station of the New Haven road were two special cars of federal soldiers.

The full board of fire district assessors and the full board of engineers—Fire Chief George Egger, Columbus Passetti and George McKenzie—were in attendance when Chairman Hiscox said that the purpose of the hearing was to get the opinion of those present regarding the extension of the district boundaries and he read the resolution passed at the annual fire district meeting on April 5th directing the assessors to investigate and report at a special fire district meeting. Mr. Hiscox said that he had been telephoned to by John Healy of Franklin street, who said that seven or eight of his neighbors favored the taking of their section into the district.

Edwin S. Stillman remarked on the possible opposition of a Watch Hill fire district to be included in the district.

Fire Chief George E. Egger recalled the fact that six or seven years ago an agitation was begun to include the whole town in the district; two years ago the fire district and town committee got together and the New England Fire Underwriters came here and made their report as to what would be necessary to be done, at several thousand dollars expense, to make the whole town a fire district, in order to effect a reduction in rates. Chief Egger said that he had obtained a petition from the Pleasant View district at that time, that he went to Weekapaug where everyone asked, including the hotels, was desirous of coming into the district. He said that a number wanted to come into the district. Central Park had a petition generally signed which was to have been presented at the annual meeting and had been overlooked. The present district is small and the expense large in proportion. Some people outside were reported as saying that they did not want to come in and then turned round and invited the firemen outside when they had a fire. Chief Egger said that if the firemen continued to go outside the fire district, the people there should come in and help pay for it. Something ought to be done to get a more general hearing about the district and what was expressed at this meeting. He said that the fire hazard was much greater today throughout the whole town by reason of the automobiles which had occasioned numerous alarms and in many cases automobiles were kept inside house walls. Talking about Watch Hill not wanting to come into the district, the chief said let them stay out. Weekapaug, he said, wants protection the worst way, and the chief said that he had been invited to Pleasant View fire district meeting where he had spoken on the necessity of better fire protection, but that they seemed more interested in sidewalks, trees and garbage collection. "They will wake up some day and find that it is too late, when a general fire has swept through the resort," the chief said.

Chairman Hiscox asked if anyone had any further suggestions to make as to getting a proper hearing.

Chief Egger responded and said he did not want to talk all the time, but he thought that the board of canvassers should try and solicit and get them in.

On East avenue, where a hydrant was wanted $25 was asked and as it devolved on one man to pay, he decided not to have it put in.

Assessor D. Harold Rogers wanted to know if it could be possible that those outside the district thought they were getting fire protection for nothing and that it was not necessary to come in.

Chief Egger said that they must be paying at least higher rates of insurance by not having the fire protection, Franklin street and East avenue, Thompsons corner had water mains but no hydrants. Those outside the district who use the town hall and the school houses were getting fire protection without paying. Something should be done to bring them into the district, as the money is needed for repairs to apparatus and buildings. With the big pump, the Bradford boarding house fire showed what could be done.

Ethan P. Gavitt, present with his wife, living outside the district on East avenue, near Thompson's corner, asked Frank W. Coy, insurance man, present, what the reduction would be if they were in the district. Mr. Coy referred him to Assessor Rogers, also an insurance man. Mr. Rogers said that the rate on a dwelling outside the district was $1.13 a thousand, while inside it was only 55c, to which costs should be added the fire district tax of $1.50 and even then it would be less expensive. Mr. Rogers thought that it should not be necessary for the assessors to ask those outside the district to please save money by coming into the district.

Assessor Oliver P. Crandall stated that a district vote for the apparatus not to go outside the limits was the proper way for those living outside the district to be taken care of. Chief Egger said that it seemed to him an awful thing for the firemen not to go outside of the district and that a district vote already instructed the chief to use his own judgment. He said that the town of Richmond made a charge when they went outside their district but when the Westerly pump had gone there for a brush fire once, a special vote placed the Richmond pump in the Westerly district service when needed.

At the conclusion of the meeting Chairman Hiscox said he thought the assessors had heard enough to cause them to recommend at a special district meeting that the boundaries be extended. It was agreed that the board of assessors and the board of engineers get together and go over the territory which should be added and see that the proper petition were in the hands of the parties most interested in each section outside the present fire district.

TUBERCULOSIS EXPERTS IN VIOLENT DISCUSSION

Many conflicting views as to the value of the tuberculin test for diagnosing tuberculosis in man and animals were brought out at the meeting of the medical officers of the state tuberculosis sanatoria, which was held at the Shelton State Sanatorium Monday. A violent discussion was precipated by a report made by Superintendent Doctor Edward J. Lynch of very interesting and important research work which has been done by himself and his assistant, Doctor George L. Bunnell.

As its name indicates, the ordinary tuberculin test is everywhere done with a substance which is derived from killed tubercle bacilli. It has been generally supposed that positive reactions in tuberculous men or animals could be produced only by tuberculin made from tubercle bacilli. Doctor Lynch, however, demonstrated that he can produce "tuberculin reactions" with a pseudo tuberculin made from other waxy coated bacilli and even with old form of the common spore bearing bacilli that abound everywhere in trees and grasses and in the air.

His findings seemed to show that there is positive relationship between these three different forms of bacterial life.

At the conclusion of his address Dr. Lynch was warmly congratulated by the state tuberculosis commission and by the physicians who were present at the meeting.

Among the invited guests were Doctor Charles J. Bartlett bacteriologist of the state department of health, and Doctor William F. Verdi, of New Haven, and Doctor David R. Lyman, superintendent of the Gaylord Farm Sanatorium at Wallingford.

SENATE FAILED TO VOTE ON JAPAUESE EXCLUSION

Washington, April 9.—The senate failed again to reach a vote on the question of Japanese exclusion, one of the two big fighting points in the immigration bill.

After four hours of debate, it was announced that the measure would be laid aside tomorrow for the consideration of the Norris super-power bill and the insurance offices appropriation bill.

Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, who has charge of the immigration bill, hopes to dispose of the Japanese question Friday and to get a vote on the basis for the percentage quotas before hte end of the week.

Senator Johnson, California, who returned to Washington today from a campaign trip, led the fight for the Japanese exclusion amendment and was supported by Senator Heflin, democrat, Alabama, and other senators.

TAFTVILLE

Preparations are going on at the Taftville Congregational church for the installation of the new pipe organ which was received this week. The old organ has been removed, and several pews have been taken out to make room for the new intrument.

There was a rehearsal of the Taftville Band Tuesday evening at the St. Louis Hall.

Although the Shetucket river is still running quite high, it is much lower than it was on Monday and all fears of a freshet have vanished. The Taftett Mills were unable to operate Tuesday because of the high water.

Mrs. Thomas Bamber of Plainfield was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Hindle and family, of North Third avenue, on Wednesday.

The Loomfixer's Union met Wednesday evening in their rooms in St. Louis Hall on Dion street.

Castle Perilous, K. O. K. A. held its regular weekly conclave in the vestry of the Taftville Congregational church, Wednesday evening. There will be no conclave next week.

David Murphy has fully recovered from the kick received last week and while playing for the local team against the New London Rangers, and has returned to his work in the cloth department of the Ponemah mills.

MADE NO STOP AFTER CRASH INTO MACHINE

Charges of reckless driving and evading responsibility were made against Nicholas Doyle, 24, of Montville, an automobile salesman employed in the city, when he was brought to police headquarters late Wednesday afternoon by Officer John Carroll after a mautomobile accident at Norwich Town, about 3.30 o'clock. Doyle gave bonds for his appearance in court this (Thursday) morning.

Herbert Sharkey of Jewett City, who was employed Wednesday afternoon at the new home of Rev. A. H. Abbott at Norwich Town just above the green was the complainant against Doyle, the Jewett City man's car having been struck by the Esse coach driven by Doyle which proceeded on its way without stopping and the driver was not found until an hour and a half later on North Main street.

Sharkey's Buick roadster was parked by the curb in front of the Abbott house while he was at work on the roof of the house and he told what happened from the birdseye view he got of the Essex. Sharkey told Captain D. J. Twomey that he saw the other car coming around the curve above the Abbott house on two wheels and realized at once that it was bound to hit his car. He could see three men in the machine and as it skidded one of them pushed the right hand door open as if to jump out. Just then the skidding car crashed into the left rear mudguard of Sharkey's machine, the open door was torn off the Essex and dropped in the road and the car sped away towards the city. One of the side pieces from the door was driven through the top of the roadster.

Sharkey was unable to get the number of the other machine, but he telephoned at once to police headquarters. Capt. D. J. Twomen notified the men on the beats and shortly afterwards Officer Carroll sent in word that he had seen a car with one door missing going along North Main street. He took the number and subsequently found this was the car they were looking for because of the Norwich Town accident.

Sharkey brought with him to police headquarters the door from the other car that he had picked up in the road after the crash.

SMALL USERS NOT AFFECTED BY PROPOSED NEW WATER RATES

Only those who consume more than $180 worth of water per quarter are to be affected by the change in meter rates which are proposed by the board of water commissioners, said Superintendent John J. Corkery Wednesday.

This is the price for 300,000 cubic feet of water, which at the rate of 7,500 gallons for each 1,000 cubic feet is 1,500,000 gallons. There are not more than 30 customers of the water department for whom the proposed meter rate change will make any increase, said Superintendent Corkery. The meter rate charges are to remain the same to the small consumer and there is no change in the flat rates.

Old Meter Rates.

500 cubic feet or less, $1.35 per quarter.

500 to 750 cubic feet, $1.50 per quarter.

750 to 1,000 cubic feet $2 per quarter.

More than 1,000 cubic feet and less than 5,000 cubic feet, $3 per thousand.

For more than 5,000 cubic feet and less than 50,000 cubic feet, $10 for 5,000 cubic feet, and $1 per thousand in excess of 5,000 cubic feet.

For more than 50,000 cubic feet and less than 200,000 cubic feet, $55 for 50,000 cubic feet and 50 cents per thousand in excess of 50,000 cubic feet.

For more than 200,000 cubic feet and less than 350,000 cubic feet, $130 for 200,000 cubic feet and 40 cents per thousand in excess of 200,000 cubic feet.

For more than 350,000 cubic feet and less than 500,000 cubic feet, $190 for 350,000 cubic feet and 30 cents per thousand in excess of 350,000 cubic feet.

For more than 500,000 cubic feet, $235 for 500,000 cubic feet, and 25 cents per thousand in excess of 500,000 cubic feet.

Proposed New Rates.

500 cubic feet or less, $1.35 per quarter.

500 to 750 cubic feet, $1.50 per quarter.

750 to 1,000 cubic feet, $3 per quarter.

More than 1,000 cubic feet and less than 5,000 cubic feet, $2 per thousand.

For more than 5,000 cubic feet and less than 50,000 cubic feet, $20 for 5,000 cubic feet, and $1 per thousand in excess of 5,000 cubic feet.

For more than 50,000 cubic feet, $55 for 50,000 cubic feet and 50 cents per thousand in excess of 50,000 cubic feet.

For those who use 200,000 cubic feet or more the contrast between the old and new rates will be as follows:

| | Old | New |
|---|---|---|
| 200,000 cubic feet | $130 | $130 |
| 250,000 cubic feet | 155 | 155 |
| 300,000 cubic feet | 170 | 180 |
| 350,000 cubic feet | 190 | 205 |
| 500,000 cubic feet | 235 | 280 |

Under the old rate, all water used over 500,000 cubic feet was 35 cents per 1,000; under the new rate, 50 cents over 1,000.

It is proposed that the new rates will be effective on bills rendered Oct. 1, thus applying on the water used during the preceding three months.

Increasing costs in the water department, as in all other lines of business, are the reasons for proposing at this time a meter rate change that will bring some additional income to the department.

The heavy rainstorm this week, which measured 1.45 inches and gave a total of 3 inches so far for April, was a great contributor to the supply in the reservoirs which are now now at full pond and a little over. At Stony Brook the water is one inch up on the flashboard and at Fairview it is up to the top of the flashboard with about half an inch running over. At the present measurement Stony Brook has 390 million gallons impounded and Fairview has 490 million gallons.

SPEAKS TO MEN UPON THE NATURE OF SIN

Rev. C. E. Dunbar, pastor of the First Baptist church, spoke at the noon meeting Tuesday at the Norwich Belt Manufacturing Co., under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. His topic was "The Nature of Sin," upon which he spoke in part as follows:

"The word sin may mean little or much to a person. The whole conception depends upon one's point of view. To some sin is a certain satisfaction for the moment without an estimation of the cost. To others sin brings estrangement from the best they have. To the churchman and the religious man sin is an awful thing. To those with little inclination for religious activities sin holds no awe. In fact each would classify sin according to his own desires. What the churchman would call sin the non-churchman would say was not a sin at all. Waiving aside what either might desire to say, sin is transgression of law. Law can be defined in many ways but to my mind the definition 'Law is established rule' is the pitch of the whole. One can transgress the laws of nature, laws of society ,laws of conscience and laws of God.

"A speaker recently in showing the awfulness of sin brought four suggestions. These were: Sin is irrevocable, it stamps character, it injures others and to acquire a forgiveness means a complete reversal of the soul. Isn't that a true situation? An act once committed can never be undone. Words once uttered have recorded themselves in the pages of time. We have only to think back into our own experiences to realise these truths.

"A man who burns a candle at both ends carries the stamp of his sin against nature in a weakened physique. One who plans to kill and then breaks this law of society carries the name of "murderer" to his grave. Sin goes even deeper than the eye can follow for it reaches into the subjective and leaves its stamp upon the soul of man which no eye can see except the eye of the Almighty. Sins do not involve ourselves alone. Many times our own loved ones become involved and are required to pay the price of pain and suffering for personal selfishness. We never sin to ourselves alone, but carry someone else along. In David's sin three others beside himself were involved, and two of the three lost their lives because of one man's selfishness.

"We have to pay the penalty here or hereafter. It is only right and just. In reality the penalty is often the smallest part of our sin. If we are true men we want forgiveness. This can come only through a deep repentence and an about-face from our sin. God's test is our sincerity. That sincerity is seen in our determination to alleviate the suffering of others, suffering which may have been wrought by another or by our own trangression, whether against nature, society, conscience, or God."

COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE VETERANS' BUREAU DELAYS

Six of Connecticut's leading citizens will comprise the survey committee, appointed by State Commander M. P. Armstrong of the American Legion, which committee will inquire into the activities of the Veterans Bureau in this state. Five members of this committee have thus far been selected: Brig. Gen. Morris B. Payne, chairman; Rev. Orville A. Petty, of New Haven, and Attorney Lewis A. Field of West Haven, these representing the ex-service men; Col. W. C. Cheney of South Manchester, Dr. George Blumer, of New Haven, and a sixth member to be selected, these latter three comprising the non-veteran members of the committee. Negotiations were being made Monday with a leading Catholic clergyman to serve on the committee.

The duties of the committee will be to investigate alleged delays in the handling of disabled and needy ex-service men's claims against the government and to ascertain where the blame for these alleged delays should be laid.

Eastern Connecticut Health.

FOREST FIRE WARDENS DISCUSSED THEIR WORK

State Forester Austin F. Hawes held an interesting forest fire warden's conference at the Chamber of Commerce rooms in New London, last week with nearly all of the forest fire wardens of New London county present, including Police Warden F. A. Benton of the Norwich district. The conference was called to discuss prevention of forest fires and kindred topics and to organize fire fighters and minimize the loss due to fires. Representatives of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. and the Central Vermont Railroad were present and showed how the railroads are co-operating in this work.

After a cafeteria luncheon which had been arranged by Scout Executive Burdick of New London at the Y. M. C. A., Boy Scouts acting as waiters, an interesting movie entitled "Forests of the Future" was exhibited. Scout Executives Burdick of New London and Benton of Norwich gave a brief account of the part the Boy Scouts are taking in this matter, and showed the effective work done by them during the past year in New London county.

ADMIRAL LANMAN PAPERS— NORWICH LETTERS OF 1854

(Written by Peter Lanman to his Son, Joseph Laman | U. S. Navy)

Norwich, April 24th. 1854.

My dear Son:

I should have answered your favor which came with the Naval Register forthwith but for the letter of your Sister, Lady Ba. (Miss Abby Trumbull Lanman) who wrote to you the afternoon of its receipt.

I now thank you cordially for the letter and also for the Register; in turning to your name in the list of Lieutenants and to the time you have served at Sea; my mind is taken back for a little over half a centry—to an obituary notice of a Midshipman in British Navy, aged 82.

I have a very sincere hope however; that the Secretary of the Navy will not be influenced by the remarks of the very learned Member of the house, Mr. B. Those old notions of the old democracy of France which came over to us in the early rage of the French Revolution and which totally overthrew the Naval power of France, while she adheres to them—the Navy is very justly indited to all the credit she gained both before and after the War of 1812—should the Secretary desire to carry out his plan to advance the interest of the Department over which he presides I think you cannot fail of being promoted.

We all of us sympathise with you in your Dental trials—your Dear Mother thinks you will not regret them when the work is done.

Say to Dear Bell that I have not forgotten her request & that I shall make the effort very soon to accomplish what I promised in relation to the prayer—she is ever remembered with the loved ones.

To Captain Williams & to Mrs. W. give my very best regards—& to your Dear Cornelia I tender my love with the hope that she will not let her usual good spirits leave her—With a full share of gratitude for your kind attentions

I am most affectionately

Yours

P. Lanman.

(Written by Peter Lanman to his Son Joseph Lanman)

Norwich March 25th. 1854.

My dear Son:

I thank you very cordially for the kind letter of the 21st. & also for the Box of Port Wine which came to hand safely yesterday morning. I have not opened it yet being more than usual on the sick list—a poor night—a sleepless night—is always to me an up-hill drag. I am very glad to notice your attention to the sons of your friends; nothing affords to the parents of Children greater pleasure than the attentions which their Children receive on their account. I have a very high regard for Mr. Willey & hope soon to be well enough to write him—if you have favorable pleasant weather I think Congress will move a little in relation to your claim for old Mexican claims.

Remember me very kindly to all your Dear ones and say to Bell that the moment my nerves are strong enough to write a page fit for her to read—I shall write what she has requested.

Very truly and affectionately

Peter Lanman

(Written by Peter Lanman to his Son Joseph Lanman)

Norwich, February 23, 1854

My dear Son:

I drop a line to say that your cos. Charles Lanman has a friend in the City of Washington who has left his card at your house—and his call has not been returned. It seems that Col. Green has been for a long time the friend of my nephew, Col. Lanman in the great West; he was appointed Deputy Collector for the Port of San Francisco and resigned his office on the change of administration—The City of Washington has been called the city of Magnificent distances and that may be the reason of your non notice of the Colonel's card; It is not I believe expected that the pay of a Lieutenant in the Navy is to meet the expenses of large dinner parties

Sin, debt & dirt are three things to be hated.

With kind love to all the dear ones at your house I am

Affectionately Yours

P. Lanman.

To Lieutenant Lanman.

P. S. Have you seen Mr. Walley!!

BAPTIST WOMEN HEAR HOME MISSION REPORTS

Miss Alice M. Dean of the Central Baptist church, this city, was re-elected president of the Woman's Baptist Mission Society, New London Association, at the annual meeting held Wednesday at the Central Baptist church. There were present at the meeting 67 delegates representing most of the Baptist churches in the county. With Miss Dean presiding, the meeting opened at 10:30 o'clock with a devotional service led by Mrs. Edward C. Dunbar of the First Baptist church, this city. Then followed the annual report of the secretary, Mrs. Horatio J. Chase, New London. In the absence of Mrs. Chase the report was given by Mrs. E. LaRue Bliven, secretary pro-tem. Mrs. Bliven also gave the report of the treasurer, Miss Grace Stetson, who has not yet returned from Florida.

Mrs. Charles E. Gardner of Waterford gave a report of the activities of the associational foreign secretary and the association foreign director.

The work of the continuation campaign was explained by Mrs. C. C. Gildersleeve of this city. Under the heading, Our Activities, the folowing reports were given:

In White Cross Overseas, Mrs. N. E. Whiting, Norwich; In White Cross, Overland, Mrs. M. S. Anderson of Waterford; In Mission Education, Miss Ruth Shipman; New London; In World Wide Guild, Miss Hagberg, Norwich; In Our College Councellor, Miss Charlene Elliot, New London; In the Mather Barrels, Miss Edith Ellis, Norwich; In some of the Things that the new World Movement Has Accomplished, Mrs. David A. Pitt, this city.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

President, Miss Alice M. Dean, Norwich; first vice president, Mrs N. E. Whiting, First Baptist church, Bosrah; second vice president, Mrs Walter Slocum, Huntington street Baptist church, New London; secretary, Mrs. H. J. Chase, Montauk avenue Baptist church New London; treasurer, Miss Grace Stetson, First Baptist church, this city. An interesting address on the work of the association was given by Mrs. J. D. Rough of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., after which adjournment was taken for dinner served at 12:30 o'clock.

The menu was as follows:

Meat Pie

Mashed Potatoes Peas

Pickles Beets

Rolls Pie Cheese

Coffee

The dinner was served under the direction of a committee of which Mrs. Henrietta Tefft was chairman. The afternoon session opened at 2:15 o'clock with Mrs. Charles Ellis, First Baptist church, Bosrah, leading. Then came the offering after which Mrs. Reuben P. Potter of this city was heard in a vocal solo. Mrs. Orrin R. Judd of Brooklyn, N. Y., gave a most interesting address and there was also an interesting address on the state continuance work by Mrs. J. H. Morahead, state continuance campaign director, of Waterbury. Word was received from Dr. William Witter of Assam that he met with an accident and would not be able to be present to deliver his address. Miss Carolyn Rice of Norwich gave a demonstration of the Italian schools in Alaska.

A pleasing feature of the devotional service at the morning session was a vocal solo by Mrs. Henry E. Church.

During the afternoon session the meeting paid tribute to the memory of Mrs. Charles W. Gale by adopting the following: Gertrude Hakes Gale at quarter before four o'clock on Saturday afternoon, April 5, 1924, entered into rest. For many years Mrs. Gale had been president of the Eastern Connecticut Foreign Mission Conference, giving freely of her time and means to its many interests. During this period she joined the Judson Centennial party and thus made a study of the mission fields in India, Burma and Assam. She was later a member at large of the National Board of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission society. She rendered valuable service on these boards as a member of the finance committee. As a hostess Mrs. Gale was exceptional. Her home was a haven of rest for all missionaries. Of a most kindly disposition and of great personal charm, the embodiment of friendship, Mrs. Gale will be lovingly remembered by us all.

Mrs. A. T. Utley, Mrs. J. D. Rough and Mrs. David A. Pitt were the committee which drew up the tribute and presented it to the meeting. The closing number of the programme was a three act play, A Willing Captive in Japan, given by the World Wide Guild of the First Baptist church this city. This was the play which the Guild gave at the First Baptist church Tuesday evening.

FOREST FIRE WARDENS ARRIVED JUST RIGHT

While on the way to Norwich Saturday from the forest fire warden's conference at New London, C. H. Larhrop of Franklin, Mr. Date and Scout Executive F. A. Benton ran into a dangerous fire which had burned from the Norwich state hospital through the pine grove and down to the Poquetanuck drawbridge. Fortunately Mr. Lathrop had a single forest fire pump in his automobile and stopping at the scene of action the fire was extinguished. Over 200 people of the state hospital had extinguished the fire in the vicinity of the pine grove but the fire had extended nearly to the drawbridge and threatened two houses there.

Mr. Lathrop is a new state patrolman on forest fires.

Planning Easter Sunrise Service.

The Senior and Intermediate B. Y. P. U. of the Central Baptist church are planning an Easter sunrise service to be held at 6 o'clock Easter morning at "strawberry hill." The B. Y. P. U. of the First and Third Baptist churches will be invited to take part in the service.

Was Visitor Here

DEMOCRATS NAME THEIR STATE CONVENTION DELEGATES

With an attendance of about 50, including a number of women, the democratic voters of the town of Norwich held a ten minute caucus at the town hall Wednesday evening for the purpose of selecting eleven delegates to the Democratic state convention to be held in New Haven, May 7th and 8th. The caucus was so called to order at 8 o'clock by William H. Callahan, chairman of the democratic town committee and John J. Corkery was chosen moderator, the caucus selecting William H. Harrington as clerk. Chairman Corkery spoke very briefly on the purpose of the caucus and on the political issues of the day. He said the republicans will probably nominate Coolidge for re-election as president but that he will have to face the people on the record of the party for the past three years. I do not believe the people will approve that record, said Mr Corkery.

The following delegates to the state convention were unanimously elected on motion of Patrick F. Sweeney who stated that the list had the approval of the town committee: Mayor Milo R. Waters, William H. Callahan, Earl Mathewson, Joseph F. Williams, Edward McNerny, Patrick F. Connell, Henry Gebrath, Mrs. Ellen C. Hayes, Mrs. Ellen Bowne, Mrs. Julia Casey and Mrs. Elisabeth F. Drew.

New London, April 9.—The summer residence of John K. Foran at 17 Riverbend place, Ocean beach, was broken into last night or today. Tonight another property owner at the shore found that the house had been entered, and Mr. Foran was informed. So far as is known nothing of value was taken from the place, as practically the only articles left there when the cottage was closed for the winter were of heavy and bulky character and their removal would require the use of a truck.

Patrolman Walter Rehn was assigned to the case and his investigation revealed that entrance was gained by smashing a window. It is the theory of the police, also the belief of Mr. Foran, that entrance to the cottage was made in order that the offender might use the place for shelter rather than from any attempt at burglary.

COMMITTEE APPOINTMENTS BY ROTARY CLUB PRESIDENT

The first meeting of the Norwich Rotary club under the new officers was held Wednesday noon at the Wauregan hotel at which the chairmen of the various standing committees were appointed by President Hugh B. Campbell. William G. Park was the song leader for the luncheon and Lionel P. Ethier presided at the piano in the absence of the club pianist, Henry La Fontaine.

The chairmen appointed by President Campbell will choose the personell of their respective committees and are as follows:

Program, Herbert B. Cary; Fellowship, Arthur M. Thompson; Public Affairs, Lucius Briggs; Rotary Educational, Joseph C. Worth; Boys' Work, Dr. Robert R. Agnew; Publicity, Edwin A. Harris; Business Methods, Charles R. Butts.

Dr. R. R. Agnew, who was re-appointed chairman of the boys' work committee, reported for his committee saying that the two crippled children which the Rotary club is caring for were being provided for to the best ability of the club. One of the boys has been given an artificial limb and the other boy will be sent to the Newington Home for Crippled Children where his expenses will be taken care of by the club.

George W. Carroll official spokesman for the local delegation to the spring conference at New Britain last week, told of the exceptionally good time the local Rotarians had as the guests of the New Britain club. Secretary J. Nelson Weymouth and Lew Carpenter also spoke on the conference and paid high tribute to Albert E. Lavery and was elected district governor.

Russell A. Clapp outlinde briefly the plans for Ladies' Night, Wednesday evening April 23rd. The members freely subscribed for the tickets and nearly the full capacity of the dining room of the hotel was sold out.

PROVIDENCE VISITORS AT CREDIT EXCHANGE MEETING

The regular weekly meeting of the Norwich Credit Exchange was held in the Wauregan hotel Wednesday night. H. Nelson Street, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Division of the Providence Chamber of Commerce, and Charles R. Sheldon, secretary of the Retail Credit Bureau of the same organization, were present.

The Norwich Exchange is composed of representative merchants who meet each week to discuss credit matters. It has been in existence for several months and the purpose of the visitors was to visualize the proceedings of the meeting and give of their larger experience the benefits to be derived and the advantage of their constructive criticisms and suggestions for greater efficiency.

It can be truthfully said that the visitors were agreeably surprised at the effective manner which the Exchange conducts its affairs. The Exchange is not a credit rating bureau at present, nor is it a collection agency. Its great value to its members is the exchange of information concerning unsatisfactory accounts. Its existence is necessary for the benefit of the merchants who give credit conveniences to their customers. These credit conveniences are often abused and in some cases wholly ignored by persons in whom busines confidence and trust has been reposed. Credit information is also exchanged with merchants in other large cities.

The Providence Retail Credit Bureau has an office force of fourteen and is rated among the best in the country.

WHAT IS BEHIND THE OFFER for the Gas and Electrical Property of the City of Norwich?

ITS BONDS are largely owned by fourteen of the great insurance companies and as most of the people of Norwich are insured, they have an indirect interest in this company.

ITS STOCK is owned by 900 stockholders—638 of these are residents of Connecticut, and 78 of these are employees of this company or its subsidiaries.

ITS PROPERTY consists of a great steam power plant on tide water. This plant has been doubled in size and its primary capacity doubled within a year. It has another steam power, oil burning plant, at Mechanicsville, near Putnam.

ITS WATER POWER consists of two developments on the Quinebaug, and it uses the surplus water power of the Baltic Mills and of The Connecticut Company from its hydro-electric station near Danielson. It also utilizes the surplus power of the Uncas Power Company, which it controls.

ITS TRANSMISSION LINES connect all these generating plants and convey the power throughout the entire eastern end of the state, a total circuit mile distance of about one hundred and sixty-five miles.

ITS MOST VALUABLE ASSET is its organization of highly skilled operators in each department of the business.

THE OUTPUT OF THIS SUPER-POWER SYSTEM for 1923 was over 60 million K. W. H., while the average for the central stations of the United States was under 10 million.

THE SAVING IN FUEL over what would have been used in the ten abandoned small plants represents, for last year, ONE THOUSAND CAR LOADS OF FORTY TONS EACH.

THE ECONOMIC SAVING is the prime reason for the closing down of small inefficient stations and the growth of the great Super-Power generating and transmission systems of which so much is written.

SERVICE AND ECONOMY ARE THE REASONS FOR OUR GROWTH.

HUGO STINNES, INDUSTRIAL PRINCE OF GERMANY, DEAD

Had Persistently Refused to Publicly Discuss Reparation Problems or French Occupation of the Ruhr—Was Greatest Industrial Organization Germany Ever Produced—Foe of the Eight-Hour Work Day—During the War His Wealth Increased From 30,000,000 Marks to More Than 1,000,000,000 Marks—Once Told French Interviewer That He Was the "Richest Man in the World"— Took Pleasure with His Children—Cared Nothing For Luxury.

Berlin, April 10.—(By the A. P.)—The death of Hugo Stinnes at the very moment the progress of disentangling the reparations knot seems about to enter upon its stage is felt in official quarters and industrial circles as a distinct loss to Germany. Whatever the popular or official attitude towards his political orientation or his far-flung economic programme may have been, there was a widespread impression that Stinnes was pre-eminently qualified to take an active part in the final adjustment of the problems on which the experts committees have rendered an exhaustive verdict.

Hugo Stinnes died this evening 7.30. He struggled against the impending end, and was conscious to the last.

Around him were gathered his wife and children. To them he had devoted his last years all the time he could spare from his vast business interests. There had been no hope for his recovery for many hours, and the foremost medical skill could do nothing against the ravages of disease.

Three major operations had been performed, the first about four weeks ago for gallstones, and it was owing to the impossibility of keeping the patient quiet, according to the surgeons, that complications arose, necessitating further operations, the last one on Sunday. It was also reported that pneumonia developed.

Since the grave nature of Herr Stinnes' illness became known to the people of Berlin it had been almost the sole topic of discussion; it far outranged in popular interest the project just published by the experts committees for the settlement of the reparation problem. The far-reaching business enterprises of the man, his great influence among the political leaders, his very eccentricities had since the war taken a strong hold on the German people, and his death, though expected, has caused anxious speculation as to who may arise to take his place.

Hugo Stinnes of his own volition and partly at the urging of friends persistently refused to enter into public discussion of the reparation problems or the French occupation of the Ruhr. He preferred to hold himself in readiness until the moment for ultimate action had arrived. Even during his four years incumbency of a seat in the Reichstag he declined to participate in its debates, and only once during the period he was a member of the economic parliament did the official minutes of that body contain a report of his utterances. That was when he unfolded his programme calling for "more production," and abolition of the eight-hour law, of which he was the unrelenting foe.

Opposed Eight Hour Day

His own working day averaged 16 hours, and he was uncompromising in declaring that a uniform eight-hour day was viciously inimical to Germany's economic recovery.

Stinnes would talk freely tonewspapermen with whom he was acquainted but not for publication. Likewise he was always accessible to financial leaders and business men from abroad, who made pilgrimages to Berlin solely for the purpose of meeting the men who had been vaguely dubbed "the uncrowned monarch of post-war Germany."

During their recent visit to Berlin the members of both expert committees met him informally, as they preferred to discuss the situation with him in private surroundings, rather than have him formally subpoenaed. One of the leading members of the Dawes committee remarked after a prolonged visit with Stinnes:

Stinnes is a man of decision, action and capacity, and when you find these three qualifications embodied in a man you truly have a genius."

Asked by his visitor which of his numberless lines of activities he enjoyed most, Stinnes replied: "I like boat best of all, because I feel I understand it."

Worked With Pick and Shovel

The great German industrialist began his career as a young man in his father's coal mine at Muelheim, where he worked with pick and shovel shoulder to shoulder with veteran miners.

To his associates and business acquaintances Stinnes was anything but a man whom popular legend portrayed as an octopus with widely ramifying tentacles clutching madely at smokestacks, buzzing dynamoes, ocean liners, hotel properties and newspaper plants.

He was a hard-headed business man, who cagied in the disrupted post-war economics everywhere a fertile field for the exploitation of his uncanny genius for swiftly appraising a situation and then applying to it his talent for constructive organization," said one of his associates in the Ruhr observed today.

His invasion of the financial world was of more recent occurrence, and is believed to have been actuated by a desire to command closer approach to the money markets. He held the controlling stock in several large Berlin and Rhineland banks. The administration of his diverging interests will devolve upon his sons, Edmund and Hugo, Jr., the latter at present in charge of his father's shipping interests in Hamburg, who is the oldest son, is resident general director in Berlin of the Stinnes interests located there.

Some Prematurely Old

"Both sons are said to be prematurely old," due to the Spartan-like business training to which they were subjected by their father, and the fact that they for the past five years have been contantly thrown in the company of men considerably their senior.

Herr Stinnes' family life was one of domestic felicity and simplicity, and although he was much on trains, traveling back and forth, he invariably timed his business trips so that his week ends could be devoted to his family.

Only with difficulty would he be dragged from his daily routine long enough to attend the theatre, and there is a story to the effect that he would invariably instruct his wife to select a house which had comfortable seats. Just as soon as the lights were dimmed he would take a nap, which continued throughout the performance. Upon his return home he would inquire of his wife just what kind of show he had attended that night.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF HUGO STINNES

Hugo Stinnes was spoken of in Continental Europe as the German who owned everything in sight, and from the peculiar pleasure he found in confiding the size of his fortune to all who would listen, the details of his vast industrial enterprises, and the extent of his mining, shipping and newspaper holdings were never left very much in doubt.

In addition to owning outright a score or more of the largest hotels in Berlin, Hamburg and Bremen, Stinnes shared control of the iron and coal industry of Germany with his friend, August Thyssen and a few others, and occupied a dominating position in the entire inland navigation of that country. He also directed several big ocean shipping concerns, owned most of the potash deposits of central Europe, and in 1920 was reported to have purchased 60 newspapers as well as several paper mills and pulp factories.

Enriched by the War.

Before the war Frau Bertha Krupp was said to possess the largest personal fortune in Germany. She paid taxes on property worth nearly 300,000,000 gold marks. At that time Stinnes' fortune was estimated at 20,000,000 marks, which, according to competent calculations, increased during the war and the revolution to more than 1,000,000,000 marks.

Although Stinnes proved himself to be perhaps the greatest industrial organizer Germany ever produced, he was never graduated, so to speak, from the working class. He had the appearance and bearing of a worker, and would go about in the clothes of a foreman or a miner without attracting attention. He was once described as like a piece of coal wandering about among his own coal mines.

His external appearance was devoid of pose, and he seemed heavy and solid. His massive head was set upon a stock trunk. His black hair was cropped close, his face was pale and expansive; his nose was decidedly hooked, his eyes heavily underlined, and his beard as black as coal. A German newspaper became popular over night by calling him the "Assyrian King."

Novelties and toys were a passion with Stinnes. He would be captivated in the street by the sight of a peddler's pack, and if he discovered a new kind of fountain pen or safety razor among the man's wares, his excitement was almost boundless.

Stinnes, like most men of action, was a person of few words except when asked to discuss his financial affairs, and then he was verbose to a degree that tried the patience of his auditors. His egotism was no less pronounced than his juvenility and his love of toys.

Boasted of Riches.

He once stated to a French interviewer that he was the "richest man in the world"; that he owned all Germany, and expected in time to possess Austria and perhaps Hungary. "They can't get along without me," he remarked with tragic gravity, then added reflectively, "neither can England."

He delighted in producing a huge bank roll, inviting inspection of its size, then restoring it to his pocket with the proud revelation: "All mine." When he passed a newspaper office he would remark that it was all his. When he walked into a big hotel he would proclaim that it all belonged to him. He was not in the least arrogant about it. There were moments, his associates said, when Hugo Stinnes even seemed sorry to be so rich. But as a rule he endured the fact with fortitude.

A genial character, Stinnes displayed irascibility only when the size of his fortune was disputed. He had one clinching argument. He would take doubters to one of his hotels and feast them royally.

Engrossed With Business.

The magnate himself took no delight in food, had no ear for music, never read books, saw nothing interesting in nature, and seldom was seen at the theater, although he numbered several of them among his possessions.

"My business," he would say, "so entirely occupies my mind that there is no room for anything else."

He owned his first evening suit in 1917, and was persuaded to purchase it by Albert Ballin, creator of the Hamburg-American line. Before that he always appeared at dinners and banquets in what he termed his working clothes. He was seldom asked to speak in public, for he invariably drifted into a tirade against the bureaucracy, which he hated with all the fire of his complex nature.

"Look at those high-brows," he would say. "What did they ever do for Germany? They lost the war for us, yet ask the airs they give themselves. I could buy them all up and never miss the money." This was a favorite extract from the heart of his socialistic beliefs.

Of Eminent Jewish Family.

Yet Stinnes himself did not start with nothing. He belonged to an eminent Jewish family long in commerce, and received substantial aid from his father after completing his studies in a technical school. He was born Feb. 12, 1870, and from earliest boyhood was trained in the principles of commerce and trade.

When the World war broke over Europe, Stinnes was transacting some business in Gustein. He read Austria's ultimatum to Serbia and instantly recognized it as war. He hurried to his Muelheim home, spent 14 hours in the telephone cell of his private apartment, and when he emerged all his enterprises were on a war basis.

Politically, Stinnes was an idol of the German people's party, formerly the national liberals, which he was said to have financed after the revolution. During the inter-allied discussions on the German indemnity at Spa in the summer of 1920, Stinnes' defiant stand as a national liberal blamed for the failure to come to immediate terms. It was at this conference, when taken to task for his arrogant attitude, that he electrified the assembly with the statement:

In the years that followed, however, he became more pacific, and urged the German people to adopt a policy of work and production, which he declared was the only salvation for the war-torn nation.

Pleasure With Family.

The most human side of Stinnes seemed to be domestic. He would spend hours in the company of his children, fashioning new toys for them and mending old ones, or searching the stores of Muelheim for novelties. When residing in Berlin, Stinnes and his little girl would go in the afternoon to the Zoo, and there the calculating magnate would temper his voice with a note of sadness and tell over and over again about the poor lion that had to be killed during the war because food was so scarce.

Cared Nothing For Luxury.

The industrial prince of Germany cared nothing for luxury, and had no personal extravagances. He owned several motor cars, but usually walked or rode in a trolley car. He was often seen running through the streets of Berlin like a school boy, but no one more than glanced at him, for all knew Stinnes and his eccentricities. If his presence were required at one of the mines, he might be seen plodding along the street with a group of blackened miners, or else clinging to a strap in a street car surrounded by his workers, who treated him as one of their number.

His apartments were modest, although he owned the hotel in which he lived. His country place outside Berlin was a simple cottage with a little garden. He bought no pictures or statues, for they were worthless, so he thought.

Hugo Stinnes had two favorite hoasts. One was that he could buy anyone in central Europe "without missing the money," and the other that he never had seen the former German emperor, and wouldn't have turned his head to look at him on the street.

Blair Was Slain By Housekeeper

Mrs. Johanna Tell Confesses —Says Killingworth Man Had Threatened to Kill Her When About to Leave Him.

New York, April 10—Mrs. Johanna Tell, 32, wife of a world war veteran, confessed to District Attorney McGeehan of the Bronx today that she had shot and killed Charles Blair, her employer and former fiance, on a farm near Killingworth, Conn., last Tuesday. She murdered him she said, because he threatened to kill her if she did not carry out a previous promise to marry him.

In an attempt to keep knowledge of the crime from her fourteen-year-old daughter, she added she had, after striking the prostrate man several times with an axe, to make his death a certainty, dragged the body to the cellar, and later buried it in a shallow sand pit fifty feet from thehouse.

Her confession was wrung from her by her tortured conscience, she told Mr. McGeehan, explaining that the haunting memory of the crime had compelled her to come to New York last night, and tell the tale to her uncle, Francis Martin. After sitting up with her through the night, she said her uncle convinced her that she should publicly confess, and she agreed to accompany him to a police station.

The murder, she explained, in unfaltering words and with little show of emotion, was the culmination of more than three years' association with Blair, for whom she served as housekeeper on the little Connecticut farm. She had gone there in September, 1920, she explained, because she thought life would be good for her daughter, Lillian.

Two months later, she said, Blair proposed that she remain in Connecticut three years to permit him to obtain a divorce from his wife, from whom he was separated, while she procured a decree from her husband, she acquiesced.

There followed months of extreme poverty, she explained. Blair told her he was kept almost penniless in financing his painting business in the Bronx.

"I slaved for him," she explained. "There was no money for clothes, for amusements. It was a wretched existence, but I thought that I was doing it for our future."

Disillusion came a few months ago she exclaimed, when she learned that Blair was banking considerable sums of money all the time she had accepted his word that he was penniless. She then told him she would not marry him, she said, but he continued to make arrangements for their divorces, assuring her that she would again change her mind.

They quarreled frequently the last two weeks and she secreted under a setting hen a pistol she had found among his possessions. Last Monday she said Blair demanded the weapon. She disclaimed knowledge of its whereabouts and the quarrel that followed ended, only when her daughter returned from school. The quarrel was resumed Tuesday when he entered the house with an axe, she said.

"As soon as your girl leaves for school, we'll settle this," she said he told her, brandishing the weapon.

"You'll either marry me, or—" Mrs. Tell said she left the room and took the pistol from beneath the hen, slipped it in her apron pocket, saw her daughter off, and returned to the room, the quarrel was resumed.

"He moved toward me with the axe," Mrs. Tell told the district attorney, "and I took the gun from my pocket, it went off. He was shot through the head. I was crazy.

I took up the axe and struck him with it, several times, fearing he wasnot dead. Then I put the body in the cellar, washed up the blood and spent the night in thinking what I should do with it. Wednesday morning, after Lillian had gone to school, I buried it."

Mr. McGeehan, saying he believed "this was a case where a woman should be protected," obtained a lawyer for her. She will be arraigned tomorrow, when Connecticut officials will take steps to have her removed to Middletown for trial.

$40,000 COUNTERFEIT MONEY SEIZED BY DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE AGENTS

Arrested Four Men and Two Women in Raid on House in the Main Street of Bayport, N. Y.—All Bills Seized Were of $20 Denomination.

Bayport, N. Y., April 10.—Department of justice agents today seized $40,000 in counterfeit money, several pistols and printing presses, and arrested four men and two women in a raid on a house in the Main street of the town.

The occupants of the house, the agents said, were engaged in bleaching one dollar bills which were to be converted into $20 notes. All the counterfeit money seized with in bills of $20 denomination.

It was reported that the raid was ordered by Washington officials, and that others had been ordered staged in Philadelphia and New York, in the belief that the same gang was working in all these cities. One report said the counterfeit money was to be used by bootleggers in the purchase of liquor along Rum Row.

Details concerning the raid were kept secret by the federal agents, who were aided by Sheriff Biggs of Suffolk county and several of his deputies. It was learned, however, that the house, belonging to a Bayport resident, had been leased by a man who gave his name as Paul Nasetta, who with his wife and two children started living there in February. Later two other men and a fashionably gowned woman and child came to live in the house. The three children were in the house today. Later three other strangers came into the town and one of them missing the money," and the other that he never had seen the former German emperor, and wouldn't have turned his head to look at him on the street.

was a department of justice agent and that the two came with him were his assistants.

The fourth man arrested in today's raid was said to have been a go-between for the alleged counterfeiters in thier dealings with rum-runners. It was learned that a quantity of nitro-glycerine was found in the house and that the agents had succeeded in seising plates from which the spurious currency had been stamped.

CAPTURE OF ENTIRE GANG OF COUNTERFEITERS

New York, April 10.—Simultaneous raids in New York, Bayport, Long Island and New Britain, Conn., by United States secret service men under Joseph A. Palma, operative in charge, resulted tonight in the capture of an entire gang of alleged counterfeiters of eleven men and two women and the seisure of $40,000 in spurious $20 federal reserve notes.

Mr. Palma characterized the raids as among the most important in his knowledge. He said the canter of the gang was at Bayport, where Mr. and Mrs. Mario Porcaro and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Nassappo and Vincent Brancaito of Brooklyn were captured.

The arrests were made, the agents said, just as the hand was about to circulate the counterfeit money. In addition to the notes seised the federal agents also took a complete counterfeiting outfit consisting of presses, plates and bleaching apparatus.

Observance of Law Prime Requisite

President Coolidge Tells Members of Women's National Committee for Law Enforcement.

Washington, April 10.—President Coolidge, addressing members of the women's national committee for law enforcement from the south portico of the white house today, told them successful law enforcement depended primarily upon the measure of public sentiment for observance of law.

"I sometimes wish," the president said, "that people would put a little more emphasis upon the observance of the law than they do in its enforcement. It is a maxim of our institutions that the government does not make the people, but the people make the government. That is why a gathering of this kind is so encouraging to me."

The president, who received the committee after they had heard addresses on the subject by the two new members of his cabinet, Attorney General Stone, and Secretary Wilbur, and other speakers, emphasized that the only practical method for stimulating respect for law was a ceaseless "awakening of the conscience through movements such as come from your activities, and through a determination that there shall be a new order of things."

Attorney General Stone declared the vital principles of respect for and enforcement of law must be held to apply equally to the "enemies of society," and to all the "enforcement agencies of the government." Prohibition Commissioner Haynes called the committee to a "second crusade in behalf of prohibition," and Secretary Hughes, in a message read to the gathering, declared the test of devotion to our institutions in respect for law itself.

Secretary Wilbur held up as a greater enemy of society than the robber or murderer the man who "violates the law because he doesn't like it or because he feels he can avoid its penalties."

"Some people think the volstead act and the eighteenth amendment a joke, but they are laughing at the stars and stripes," he said. "Law enforcement in its last analysis is a matter of patriotism."

Touching on the Boston police strike as an example of the dependence upon government for protection by the individual Mr. Wilbur declared, "Calvin Coolidge is president today because he declared in unmistakable terms that a man's first duty is to his country."

TO RESTRICT BILLBOARDS IN ADIRONDACK PARK

Albany, N. Y., April 10—Restriction of the use of advertising signs and billboards within the limits of Adirondack park sought in a bill introduced in the legislature by Senator Matthews V. Ferris, republican, of Essex, will become a law if governor signs the measure, which its advocates believe he will do, in view of the small amount of opposition which has appeared to it.

The assembly today passed the Ferris bill by a vote of 78 to 51, and the measure was also previously passed by the senate by a decisive majority. Under the terms of the bill, no person would be allowed to erect within the boundaries of the Adirondack park, without written permission of the state conservation commission any advertising sign or billboard. The bill does not apply to signs erected or maintained upon property in connection with a business which is conducted on it, or within the limits of an incorporate village.

TELLS HOW OIL FRAUDS WERE PERPETRATED

Texakarne, Ark., April 10.—J. L. Fallin, production foreman for Pat Marr., at the time Marr bought the first oil well in the Eldorado field, tetified today in Marr's trial on charges of misuse of the mails, that he (Fallin) threw oil on the derrick of the well, "to make it look like it had come in as a gusher."

Fallin also testified that he and his helper filled two 250 barrell storage tanks on the lease with water and then placed "three or four inches of oil on the top of the water to make them look like they were full of oil."

Senator Berates the Press and Asserts That the Republican Party is Dominated by the "Unholy Alliance Between Crooked Business and Crooked Politics"—Declares That Every Individual With a "Streak of Yellow" Has Been Opposed to Him—Remains Non-Committal on Report That He is to Curtail His Activities for Delegates to the Republican National Convention — It is Known That Some Friends Have Advised Him to Abandon the Contest for the Nomination.

Washington, April 10.—Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, a candidate for the republican presidential nomination, declared tonight in a formal statement that he is not quitting what he is attempting to do politically." That he defined as an effort to rid the republican party of "a corrupt and reactionary control."

There was no specific mention of his candidacy in his statement, nor was there any reference to persistent reports that he would at least curtail his activities in the remaining states that are to select delegates to the republican national convention at Cleveland.

Since his return to Washington yesterday, Senator Johnson has conferred with a number of his advisers here. While no formal announcement has been made, it is known that some of them, at least, have advised him to abandon the contest for the nomination.

The only public answer the senator has given to questions as to whether he intended to adopt that course is his statement tonight. In that he declared that the "unholy alliance between crooked big business and crooked politics," which dominates the republican party must be smashed and the party "revitalized and regenerated."

"In my humble way I have been trying to do just this," he declared, "and I shall continue trying to do it. I am neither discouraged nor despairing. The fight goes on until it shall be won."

Senator Johnson's statement is as follows:

"Of course, I am not quitting in what I am attempting to do politically. I began this contest from within the republican party to rid it of a corrupt and reactionary control, and since I commenced the necessity for such an effort, in some fashion, by some one has been demonstrated. The revelations of corruption in high places, the silence of those who should speak for the people, the apologies for crookedness in the department by spokesmen of the administration for oil leases obtained by bribery, demand that the rank and file of the party, yet undelivered and responsive to no private interest, should have at least opportunity of expressing themselves in detestation and protest.

"Above and beyond this, no man can render a greater service or perform a higher duty to the country than in speaking without limitation or fear in this era of exploitation and entrenched dishonesty. When every coward scurries to cover, every craven crawls to power, apologists masking as opponents, excuse, because they assert it runs rampant in every party, when a press, with few exceptions, unites to hide and conceal, palliate and belittle corruption in government; when ugly bribery excites not even convention indignation in those whose duty it is to speak a people's voice, somewhere, someone, however, weak or feeble, should publicly preach again, in highways and byways, the homely virtues of the republic.

"The republican party is dominated by the unholy alliance between crooked big business and crooked politics. This alliance must be smashed and the party revitalized and regenerated. The nation must be purged of those in power who divide their allegiance with special or corrupt interests. The former is essential if the republican party is to survive; the latter necessary for the preservation of our cherished institutions.

"In my humble way, I have been trying to do just this, and I shall continue trying to do it. I am neither discouraged nor despairing.

"Good men and good women everywhere, who seek neither office nor gain, who have no other thought than their country's welfare, have splendidly responded. Every financial power, every organization, every office holder, local and federal, money without stint, the press, with few exceptions, every avenue of publicity, the grand army of political crooks and crooked big business with all its ramifications, every individual with a streak of yellow, and every timid follow who expects political power or preferment, have been on the other side. That I have received as many votes as I have, without organization or funds or aid at all, is a tribute to our citizenship and a matter of congratulation; and spurs to renewed effort for decency in politics and government.

"The fight goes on until it shall be won, until the republican party becomes again a party of its rank and file, and until government is again responsive to the people alone."

MOTOR VEHICLE CONFERENCE HELD AT YALE UNIVERSITY

New Haven, April 10.—An enthusiastic sentiment against accidents is the solution of traffic problems, Robbins B. Stoeckel, motor vehicle commissioners of Connecticut, declared today before the motor vehicle traffico conference being held at Yale university.

"The automobile," Mr. Stoeckel said, "is a free agent, for the expression of its operator's character and desires. So the automobile injected temperament into traffic and participants quite suddenly found that the experiences and practices of the past were no longer applicable as accurate guides for safety. Each individual had to learn how to concentrate and solve every traffic problem as he met it. A wrong action of the mind, a mistake, is at the root of every motor vehicle accident where a person is involved.

"Therefore any plan for motor vehicle accident prevention must, as its basic and fundamental idea, take this mind factor into account, and must recognize that 'many men have many minds' and direct its efforts along corresponding lines of endeavor."

Mr. Stoeckel favored a draft of uniform traffic law which, unlike many traffic laws at present, will not be "so complete and final that it arouses opposition and insures defeat by its very completeness." He also advocated the education of the public as to dangers of traffic and the enforcement of discipline by the suspension and revocation of licenses. "The courts," Mr. Stoeckel said, "must standardize discipline and be more severe as time goes on."

The appointment of a committee to analyze and digest the discussions and ideas advanced at the conference and to draft a plan along broad lines, would produce a practical and useful result, he said.

STATE POLICE DOUBT THE STORY OF MURDER

Killingworth, Conn., April 10.—State police tonight were disinclined to believe the story of Mrs. Joanna Tell, who confessed in New York to having murdered her employer, Charles F. A search of the house and surrounding land failed to reveal any evidence tending to corroborate the woman's testimony and, according to information obtained from several residents, Blair was seen in Durham, Wednesday morning.

TRIED TO SUICIDE BEFORE EXECUTION AT SING SING

Ossinging, N. Y., April 10.—Anthony Viandante, condemned slayer of his wife was electrocuted in Sing Sing prison tonight. Viandante was convicted in Syracuse a year and a half ago.

Viandante twice attempted to take his own life before he was led to the electric chair tonight. He also threatened the life of Rev. Father William Cashin, prison chaplain. A strong guard surrounded him as he was led to the death house.

Father Cashin had visited the condemned man several times in the last few days, but this afternoon when he went into his cell Viandante assumed a threatening and sullen attitude. The prison officials persuaded the chaplain tonight not to walk with the convict to the chair.

Viandante first tried to take his life when he tore loose a thin wire from the spring of his cot and tried to hang himself. The wire snapped however, and after he had been given medical treatment for a cut on his neck he extracted a piece from the cot with which officials believed he intended to try to cut his throat.

In his alleged confession Sahlin involved an unnamed "New York friend," who had supplied him with the blanks at $15 a hundred. He, in turn, according to the police, disposed of them to agents for $50 a hundred.

Frank P. Fenton will head the Windham delegation to the state convention to be held in New Haven May 6 and 7. The other six delegates are: John R. Pickett, second; Hormisdas Dion, third; James J. Lee, fourth; James S. Donahue, Jr., fifth; David P. Ahern, sixth, and Russell A. Andrews, seventh. The delegates are to go to the convention uninstructed; they were empowered to appoint their own alternates, in the event they find they cannot attend.

Although there were less than fifty electors at the caucus which convened at eight o'clock Wednesday night in the town hall, the session was made lively by James Haggerty who delivered a spirited address.

Mr. Haggerty denounced William Gibbs McAdoo as an unsatisfactory candidate for president on the grounds that he was backed by the Ku Klux Klan in Georgia. He further exposed the design of Homer Cummings of Stamford, state central committeeman, as a movement to corral the state delegation in the interests of Mr. McAdoo for the approaching national convention.

James F. Twomey was elected chairman and Mr. Fenton clerk of the meeting.

Frank P. Fenton was the unanimous choice of the gathering as first delegate to the convention. His name was presented by Lyman Maine.

In seconding this choice, Mr. Haggerty called upon the democrats to select men who would be able to do their duty. He used strong terms in advocating a non-instructed delegation to the convention.

Mr. Haggerty is a strong supporter of Alfred E. Smith of New York, as a possible but reluctant candidate for the presidency. He made mention of the success of "Al" in the Wisconsin and Michigan primaries and in Rhode Island, saying that Smith was going like a house on fire. Although much in favor of Smith, Mr. Haggerty, however, was not asking that the delegation be instructed for that nomination.

The fact that no women were included in the delegation was a subject for some comment.

The criminal session of the Windham county superior court held in this city Thursday was not opened until late, due to conferences being held by the attorneys and the court. The March term of the civil side of the court was reopened for a short period at 12.35 o'clock, when Attorney Sabin S. Russell introduced several matters in connection with the sale of the Manhasset Manufacturing company plant at Putnam. The various motions introduced by Attorney Russell were granted by Judge Kellogg.

Court then resumed criminal business. John A. Connolly of Franklin, Mass., charged with abandoning his wife and living with another woman, in October of last year., entered a plea of nolo contendre. He was represented by Attorney King. A suspended sentence of one year in the county jail met the favor of Judge Kellogg and State's Attorney Searls. The accused was placed on probation for that period and ordered to pay the costs of the court.

Stating that William E. Jackson was his court investigater and that he had performed his duty well, State's Attorney Searls then asked that he be relieved of the prosecution of the case against Mr. Jackson, in which he is charged with assault on Philip Pagano. In consideration of the state's attorney's intimate relations with Mr. Jackson the court announced that Attorney Arthur G. Bill of Danielson, would be named as special attorney for the prosecution of the case.

Walter Broadhurst, 15, represented by Attorney Gancher, pleaded guilty to a charge of theft of a bicycle, the crime having been committed some months ago. The boy was previously found guilty in police court and he took an appeal. State's Attorney Searls pointed out that he had learned that the boy was behaving well under the supervision of his uncle, Arthur A. Warner. He asked for leniency. Judge Kellogg imposed a sentence of a term at the reform school for boys at Meriden, suspending the sentence and placing young Broadhurst in case of Mr. Warner.

Augustus Warren, an elderly man of Putnam, charged with abuse of a female child under sixteen, pleaded guilty and elected to have his case tried by jury. He was presented by County Defender Charles L. Torrey. Court adjourned until Wednesday morning of next week, at 11 o'clock, at which time the jury will be called, as already three cases are assigned to be heard by the jury.

The case of William H. Horton, charged with violation of the motor vehicle law was to have come up Thursday, but Horton failed to put in an appearance. His bondsman, Arthur J. Dubreuil of this city, was notified to present his man by this (Friday) morning but later it was decided to adjourn court until next week and it was announced that Horton's case would go over until Tuesday, April 22. The bondsman said that he would have Horton in court on that date. Mr. Horton is now employed in Providence as an automobile salesman. He was married in this city recently. Mr. Horton was formerly president of the Willimantic Motors company.

The case of John Haran, charged with reckless driving, has been nolled, according to announcement.

The jury in the superior court at Hartford, which heard the cases of Thomas Brondeau, Mrs. Mary Gorman and Miss Mary Gorman of New Britain, against Louis Delorme of Willimantic, returned after being out five hours Wednesday, and gave verdicts for Delorme, in the suit of Brondeau and Mrs. Gorman, and a verdict for Miss Gorman to recover $100 from Delorme. The suit was the result of an automobile collision in this city last year, between machines driven by Delorme and Mrs. Gorman's chauffeur, Erondeau.

After being out all afternoon the jury returned at the usual closing time of court but instead of returning a verdict asked for further instructions. The members desired to know how to return verdicts in each case, if it was found that the drivers of both cars were negligent. After an hour later the jury returned but a mistake in one respect necessitated its returning, for the purpose of making a correction.

The entire student body of Providence college began Wednesday a thirty day period of mourning for the dead undergraduates. A mass of requiem will be celebrated Saturday morning for the repose of the souls of the young men, by Very Reverend Dr. W. D. Nose, president of the college.

At Connecticut Agricultural college, Storrs, no new scarlet fever cases have been reported within the past week but the daily inspection of students will continue until every trace of danger is past. Of the five students in the college infirmary, two are now well started on the road to recovery and a third will be released upon the arrival of more favorable weather. All social activities have been suspended at the college until after the Easter recess.

Ex-Congressman Augustine Lonergan of Hartford, will be the speaker at the communion breakfast in St. Joseph's hall next Sunday morning. Members of San Jose council, No. 14, Knights of Columbus, will receive the Holy Eucharist in a body at the eight o'clock mass. The breakfast will follow.

GEOGRAPHIC FEATURES OF UNITED STATES OUTLINED

"Know America first" should be a maxim of wide appeal to Americans in these days, and a government publication recently issued affords public contributions to the general knowledge of some features of our national domain and history. This publication is entitled "Boundaries, areas, geographic centers and altitudes of the United States and of the several states, with a brief record of important changes in their territory," by E M. Douglas, and has been issued by the department of the interior as Bulletin 689 of the Geological Survey. The report is sold by the superintendent of documents, Washington, D. C., at nominal cost. It also gives numerous little-known facts relating to the organization of the original thirteen colonies and of the states after the Revolution. For example, how many know that the Colony of Virginia once included the Bermuda Island and also the country westward to the Pacific ocean, then call the "South Sea"—so christened by Balboa in 1513, because at the place where he first saw it the shore line runs nearly east and west—or that the area now called Vermont once belonged to New York and that Massachusetts controlled the area now controlled in Maine.

The reasons for the peculiar irregularities and jogs in some of the boundary lines are explained. For example, the "nose" projecting into Canada at the Lake of the Woods, on the Minnesota boundary, is due to the use of inaccurate maps by the makers of the treaties by which this area became United States territory. The "panhandle" at the southeast corner of Missouri is said to be the result of efforts of a prominent property owner to have his plantation included in the new state.

The indefiniteness of some of the early boundary lines is illustrated by a quotation from Rufus Choate, who in the boundary dispute between Massachusetts and Rhode Island said before the Massachusetts legislature: "The commissioners might as well have decided that the line between the states was bounded on the north by a bramble bush, on the south by a blue jay, on the west by a hive of bees in swarming time, and on the east by five hundred foxes with fire brands tied to their tails."

The state of California has within its boundaries the highest and the lowest points of dry land in the United States proper, and Alaska has the highest mountain peak in the possession of the United States. Colorado is the state having the greatest altitude; Delaware has the least.

The bulletin describes the outlying possession of the United States and tells when and how they were acquired. Of the newly added possessions (Alaska, bought in 1867, not included) the 7,000 or more islands comprising the Philippine group cover the greatest area. The Virgin Islands are the most recent acquisition and also the most costly. To obtain sovereignty over these islands, which have a combined area of a trifle less than 133 square miles, the United States paid nearly $300 an acre. For Alaska, which has been an important source of revenue, the United States paid less than 2 cents an acre.

It is generally supposed that the United States has never relinquished territory once acquired, but this is not the case. The United States gave up more than 30,000 square miles of western land when it purchased Florida from Spain by the treaty of 1819.

The bulletin contains a facsimile reproduction of a map of the British and French possessions in America as they were known in 1755. A copy of that map was used in the preparation of the treaty with Great Britain in 1782, when the United States was first recognized as an independent nation. The book also contains numerous other maps illustrating the growth of the United States and the changes in its boundaries from early colonial days up to the present time.

How Gods Became Men.

The Burmese have a myth that heavenly beings came down from the skies to the earth and there ate thaleman, a particular kind of rich rice, which gradually made them gross of habit, so that they were unable to make their way back to the higher heavens again and had to become men and women, says the Detroit News. The Chins have a story of the tower of Babel to account for the various clans that inhabit the range of hills looking down on the bay of Bengal, and traditions of a deluge are found everywhere. The Kachins tell a story of the passage over a bridge to the afterlife, which recalls Addison's "Vision of Mirza," and there are many more of the kind that suggest these folk myths come down from a long-gone past.

Kind Word for Old Garments.

I love old garments; they are tried friends, companions of toil and struggle. When I take my old walking stick and plant this venerable gear on my head, it seems to me that we covenant together to say in the face of a volatile and capricious world: We stand our ground! With this old mantle about my shoulders, I feel invested with fidelity and constant attachment to what is enduring. Do not filch it from me on the pretext of charity; where is the poor man who has ever refused a new garment? Let him have it; for my part, I prefer the old.—Charles Wagner, in "By the Fireside."

Chance for a Comeback.

It may be true that the old home ain't what it used to be, as the song says, but some of its glory could be recovered if the girls would learn how to make real pie.—Wabash Times-Star.

SECRET OF HAPPINESS

The greatest menace on earth to happiness is the ill health with which so many young women are afflicted. The young woman is subject to pain and irregularities, the mother to the tortures of displacements with consequent pains, aches and nervousness—the middle aged woman to the uncomfortable conditions caused by this critical age. The one remedy to control these conditions and restore the system to a normal healthy condition is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for fifty years has been restoring sick and ailing women to health and happiness.

APRIL FURNITURE VALUES

April brings the spring impulse to refurnish, and these unusual values bring the opportunity to save. Know What To Buy—How To Buy—Where To Buy Infant Firm Enjoying Rapid Growth.

The Live Wire Electric Shop at 67 Church street, Willimantic, was organized December 29, 1923, and is still in its babyhood stage, although daily gaining recognition as a good firm to do business with in this section. With George W. Larkin as manager of the shop's interests, the founders of the company are veterans of the electric field, both in this and other cities. Mr. Larkin has had twelve years' experience as an electrician. During two of these years he was employed in Norwich.

The company is fully equipped to give speedy and efficient service in any kind of electrical work. Estimates for wiring houses, business blocks, etc., are cheerfully submitted. In establishing its business, the firm has avoided carrying a large overhead expense and for this reason is able to bid considerably lower than its competitors on contract work, and has already met with much success in this field.

Mr. Larkin has also had four years' experience in constructing all kinds of electric motors and is prepared at any time to repair or rebuild the largest or smallest motor.

As part of its stock the Electric Shop carries a large variety of beautiful electric lamp fixtures and a complete line of the famous Hotpoint electrical appliances including flatiron, toasters, vacuum cleaners, percolators, marcel "Wavons", curling irons and heating stoves.

In preparation for the coming warm weather the stock room has been supplied with all makes of the widely known General Electric fans, Bradley-Hubbard table lamps in all the pretty designs and sizes can also be found at the Electric Shop.

Know With Whom You Deal.

The man on the corner says that there is a whole lot of satisfaction in knowing with whom you are doing business. If you purchase an article from a firm which has achieved success and gained the confidence of the buying public by dispensing only of goods of standard type and quality you will feel that you will receive wear or service, as the case may be, and that a promise of its durability will stand well with you even without a guarantee. Everyone is endeavoring to avoid disappointment but not many buyers follow the proper course to receive complete satisfaction.

The mere fact that an article is sold at a price greatly reduced from the average does not necessarily insure you that you did not get a "sticking." The secret of good buying is doing business with reliable firms. One cannot always secure the best material for the lowest price. The Wise Shopper knows where goods of high quality can be secured at right prices.

This knowledge is only too often gained through bitter experience and a waste of money, or you can learn What to Buy, Where to Buy, and How to Buy through careful study.

Avoid being flim-flammed. Let the Consolidated Advertisements tell you with whom you are doing business. Read the advertisements on Willimantic page of The Bulletin every Friday and select your wants.

DANIELSON

Earl Kimball Atwood, 60, died suddenly at his home in Waterville, Me., Thursday morning, after an illness of only a few minutes. Announcement of Mr. Atwood's death came as a shock to his relatives and friends here. He was a native of this town and lived here for years. For a long time Mr. Atwood was with the Williamsville Manufacturing company, at what is now Goodyear, later was with the Quinebaug mills and still later at Lowell, in responsible positions. For about fifteen years up to a year ago Mr. Atwood was agent of the Lockwood mills at Waterville and during his administration of the property, he greatly improved it, one of the developments being a splendid power plant.

Mr. Atwood was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Kimball Atwood. He is survived by his wife.

Following services in Waterville, Me., today (Friday), the body is expected to arrive here Saturday for burial.

Following a meeting of the Danielson Rod and Gun club Wednesday evening, it was made known that the club is to have a banquet May 1, at a hotel in Danielson. It has been proposed that the club have a rifle team and it is probable that a range will be laid out on the club's grounds in the Allen Hill section, where its trap shooting equipment is located. The club has a registered shoot planed for May 3.

Town officials charged with the duty gave consideration Thursday evening to framing a call for a special meeting. The call [illegible] meeting will be issued primarily to meet a request contained in a petition signed by Charles D. Mowry of Dayville and other citizens that such a meeting be warned, in order that the electors may pass upon a proposal that an appropriation be made to meet the cost of a general audit of the accounts of the town. Such a proposal was submitted by Mr. Mowry at the adjourned annual town meeting, but it was declared out of order as not rightfully coming within the scope of matters that could legally be considered at the meeting.

In view of the fact that a meeting is to be held, it is understood that clauses to allow action on matters pending attention will be included in the call, which will be issued within a few days.

William Henry Danielson, whose death occurred at Brooklyn Wednesday evening and of which mention was made in this column Thursday morning, was a son of Elisha and Sarah Ely Danielson and was born in Danielson in November, 1848. He was of a family associated with this community since its earliest history and from which the place takes its name.

In his earlier years Mr. Danielson was engaged in the dry goods business here in the firm of Ely and Danielson. Later he went to Philadelphia and for a few years was engaged there in the wool business. He has been retired for a number of years. Mrs. Danielson died about two years ago, while they were visiting in Hartford.

Mr. Danielson leaves a son, Richard Danielson, one of the new owners of The Independent, which, press despatches mentioned a few days ago, is to be published in Boston, instead of New York, under the new ownership. Mr. Danielson also leaves two brothers, George of Danielson and Walter, who is in Texas.

It is a safe bet that this item will surprise everyone in this town who is interested in real estate news: "The Attawaugan hotel, barn, shed, and other buildings with about three-quarters of an acre of good land will be sold at auction on the 28th, the sale to take place on the premises.

Said hotel is one of the first class country establishments in New England. It being three stories high above the basement and is 46 by 57 feet and built in modern style. The above property is pleasantly situated in Danielsonville on the Norwich and Worcester railroad and half way between these cities. Terms easy."

The surprise is in the fact that this is a reproduction of an advertisement that appeared in a local paper under date of December 6, 1865, and which came to hand from the old publication Thursday. It may be further stated that the property, now owned and operated by William S. Brown, is not advertised for sale at the present time.

Nearly 60 years have elapsed since the item herein quoted and signed by H. L. Danielson for the board of directors, appeared, and few here now will have any recollection of the sale.

Exceptionally fine work was done by the master and two assistant stewards, when the third and fourth degrees were conferred upon a class of thirteen candidates at a session of Brooklyn grange. Visitors were in attendance from Killingly grange, Wolf Den grange of Abington and Highland grange of South Killingly. Following the work a collation was served. The working of the degrees brought out an attendance of about 75, a number of communities in this part of the county being represented.

The second Windham County Older Boys' Conference is to be held in Plainfield Saturday, April 19th, beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning and continuing through the banquet in the evening.

The number of boys who may attend from any given community is not limited. There are two provisions, however. The first is, all delegates must be 14 or over; second, each delegation of seven boys or less must be accompanied by an adult leader.

A very interesting programme has been arranged, the principal speakers being J. B. Palmer, remembered from last year's conference. He will be accompanied this year by a deputation of young men from the Hartford Y. M. C. A., and E. P. Conlon, state boys' work secretary of New Hampshire. Mr. Conlon has had much experience in the Hi-Y work and his coming to Windham county should be a source of great inspiration to Hi-Y clubs.

A new and interesting feature of our recreation programme this year will be a swimming meet in the Plainfield Community Association pool.

County Secretary John H. Corbett, Putnam, is making arrangements for the conference.

Notwithstanding the high water in trout streams in this territory, fishermen have been constant this week in their endeavor to bring in the fish, and numbers of them have been successful.

Judge Sabin S. Russel was at Willimantic Thursday to appear in the superior court relative to the confirmation of the sale of the property of the Manhasset Manufacturing company in Putnam, for which Judge Russell is counsel.

At the Orpheum theatre Thursday evening a splendid company presented The Cat and The Canary, a mystery play with as many thrills as its predecessor, The Bat.

Members of Rose of Lima council, K. of C., are to assemble at their hall Sunday morning and march to St. James' church, where they are to receive communion in a body at the 7 o'clock mass.

The car bearing Providence College students that was wrecked in collision with a trolley in Hartford Tuesday, while en route to New Haven, the deaths of three of the students resulting, passed through Danielson about an hour and a half prior to the accident.

To date, there is no outward sign of baseball enthusiasm in Danielson, though the opening of the gib leagues' season next Tuesday heralds the advent of time for the call "Play Ball!"

Section men from this territory will be busy Sunday, in the big drive the New Haven road will make in laying rails between White's crossing and Dayville. In another week or ten days the rails will have been laid south to Danielson. The new rails are to be put in as far south as Quinebaug lake.

PUTNAM

A step nearer resumption of operations at the plant of the Manhasset Manufacturing Co., was taken Thursday, when Judge Kellogg, in the superior court at Willimantic confirmed the sale of the property by auction the past month, to the William Muir interests, of Providence. The court specified Thursday that deeds must pass within thirty days. The Muir interests paid $475,000 for the property and it is understood that they are anxious to take it over at once and make ready to operate it.

Next Sunday another big drive will be made by railroad workers, to forward the work of laying new rails southward from this city toward Central Village, on the route to Norwich and New London. The work was given a fine boost last Sunday and has continued through this week. Thursday the regular track laying crew was putting in the new rails south of Attawaugan crossing.

For the big drive planned for Sunday, section gangs from all the territory hereabouts will be assembled to augment the regular working forces and it is likely that the crew of the Midland division work train also will be on the job. It is believed that the new rails will have been put in as far south as Dayville by the time work ceases, Sunday evening.

Rails weighing 79 pounds to the yard are being replaced with rails that weigh 107 pounds to the yard. These rails are being set on metal plates, spiked to the sleepers, making a better road than has been known on the line, that is undergoing improvement.

The attendance Thursday evening at the closing exercises of the evening school in the assembly hall of the high school indicated the very general interest in what the school has been doing, through the 75 sessions it has held since last fall, under the direction of Principal L. F. Battey and his competent assistant teachers.

An address was delivered by Attorney Charles L. Torrey, secretary of the town school committee, and the certificates were presented by Ralph C. Jenkins, superintendent of Putnam's schools.

The list of those who received certificates for work completed in the different courses follows:

Napoleon Quesnette, Wenssalus Orwart, Henry Dufresne, Charles Moondjian, Mrs. Agiai Stoumbelis, Marie Rose Paul-Hus, Anna Paul-Hus, Leopold Lemery, Hortense Lecomt, Rose Sylvan, Charles Paleologon, Maretisa Moondjian, Anna Archambeault, Fabiola Lavallee, Irene Labonte, Melina Labonte, Bella Bonneville, Alfred Bonneville, Eva Miour, Henrietta Tremblay, Touissant Marc-Auredo, Alfred Gallant, Doris Bouthillette, Eva Benoit, Augusta Brenek, Leo Caron, Lila Bertrand, Dolores Billings, Lillian Gosselin, Doris Card, Lionel Gaucher, Harry M. Cornell, Henri Trudeau, Bessie Oblotz, Samuel Oblotz, William Gibbons, Dorothy Keefe, Wilfred A. Park, Viola Tetreault.

Funeral services for Mrs. Emma Beausoliel, 55, wife of Henry Beausoliel, were held at St. Mary's church Thursday morning, and attended by many relatives and friends. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, five brothers of Mrs. Beausoliel and a brother-in-law acting as bearers.

Mrs. Beausoliel was born in Woodstock, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Maynard, and had spent her life in this vicinity. She leaves her father, her husband and six children—Louis, Rosario, Raoul, Salvadore, Corade and Lillian.

Newell Banks, champion match checker player of the country, attracted many interested spectators when he made an appearance at the Assembly hall of the high school Wednesday evening. Mr. Banks gave a convincing demonstration of his capabilities simultaneously against local opponents. He won 27 of these games and five were draws. No one beat him. Playing blindfolded at onther stage of the evening he won two games and drew two.

The attendance was surprisingly large. So many can who would have liked to play against the champion, but there were not boards enough to accommodate all. Everyone was deeply interested in watching the play, however, and felt satisfaction at having seen Mr. Banks in action.

Mrs. Pierre H. Myers of this city will be the organist and Miss Emma A. Burbank of Danielson the soloist, at the fifth and last in a series of organ recitals to be given at St. Phillip's Episcopal church Sunday afternoon.

A passenger train from New London due here just before 10 o'clock week day mornings, was materially delayed in its arrival Thursday morning because a big motor truck disputed the right of way with it at a grade crossing in the town of Plainfield, as told elsewhere this morning.

Street department men under the direction of Frederick Dumas were engaged Thursday in resetting curbing fronting the Seder building in Main street. Similar work has been going on in the business section throughout the week.

Matters of special interest to Putnam were up for consideration at the session Thursday of the superior court in Willimantic.

A brighter prospect in the cotton manufacturing industry as the week draws to a close and the announcement that operations will be resumed in mills in the big textile centers, is cheering news to residents of textile villages hereabouts where work has been slack of late.

Rev. S. E. Cozad, Thursday afternoon conducted funeral services for Mrs. Daniel N. Medbury, who died in Pomfret Monday.

An innovation in banking here will be inaugurated next week when the savings institutions of the city will begin opening Wednesday evenings, which is also an opening night for the stores of the city.

A force of workmen began Thursday on the work of renovating the Thomas J. Corcoran house, which has been closed for several months. This property has just been purchased by James B. Tatem.

Water in the Quinebaug river was receding Thursday after having been at an unusually high level throughout the week.

Palms will be blessed and distributed at the high mass at St. Mary's church on Sunday, in accordance with the usual observance of Palm Sunday.

Keen resentment is again finding expression from residents of rural districts hereabouts over the fact that daylight saving schedules that will become effective Sunday, April 27, will have their effect on train service through this territory, which will remain on standard time, having recovered, as many view the proposition from a form of war time foolishness.

Rev. W. S. Olmstead, headmaster of Pomfret school, will preach the Easter Sunday sermon at St. Phillip's church in this city.

Jobless Shah Of Persia

Ahmad Kadjar, Shah-in-Shah (King of Kings), of Persia. Reports from Teheran, by way of London, state that the Persian Parliament has abandoned the idea of a Republic of Iran, but has deposed Shah Ahmad Kadjar in favor of this two-year-old son, and a regent will be appointed to act until the infant attains his majority. Ahmad Kadjar was born in 1898 and succeeded his father, Mohammed Ali, who abdicated, in 1909, under a Regent. He was crowned in 1914 and since then has spent most of his time playing around in Paris and at the French watering places, occasionally varying that by visiting his royal pal, King Alfonso, of Spain.

JEWETT CITY

A local member makes this appeal: Eugene P. Armstrong, of Waterbury, commander of the Connecticut Department of the American Legion, has issued an appeal to all eligible non-members of the legion to become enrolled. He announced that a statewide drive for 50,000 members was started and expressed the hope that the objective would soon be gained.

If wisely and courageously led, the legion should be the most vital force in our land for the defense of family and human and property rights. Every observing man knows how the veterans of the Civil war steadied the nation and held it sound at heart. We will do the same thing in the coming half century.

It is the legion that has guarded with utmost consecration and genuine sympathy the hospitalisation of sick and broken comrades.

We have become brother or father to the child made orphan by the war. We have befriended the unemployed among our numbers. We have stood guard over the graves of our comrades.

I urge every comrade the joining of the legion. I ask you to join the fellowship of that memory to come together in its sacred comradeship. The best thing we got out of the war was a fine and wholesome fraternity. Class prejudice, race prejudice and bigotry—these we lost to our lasting good.

Join the legion.

Wednesday night at the local range the third match of the series being run by the Rifle club was shot and the following scores made:

D. Ballou 4, A. Stebbins 48, R. Gust 47, E. Gutknecht 45, O. Gilbert 44, G. Gutknecht 44, A. Myott 37.

Next week is the final match of the series.

People who remember Albert Bryant, when he was designer, about thirty years ago, at Slater's mill, are interested to learn that his wife's father has just died in East Orange, N. J., leaving a fortune of $3,264,713. Charles Fletcher was the founder of the Centaur company, manufacturer of Castoria. He leaves his wife and two daughters, Mrs. Ettye Bryant and Mrs. Lucille Fletcher Betts. Mr. Bryant was connected with Slater mills while A. H. Woodman was superintendent.

Mrs. Nelbert Myott and Miss Doris Myott went to Boston Thursday and will attend Saturday evening the wedding of Miss Louise Putney and Harry Nickle. Miss Myott is to be the maid or honor.

The truck was traveling toward Plainfield.

Jewett City has another honor to add to its unusual list. Mrs. George H. Prior has been elected president of the International Order of the King's Daughters and Sons. She arrived Thursday from Charleston, S. C., where she has been attending the general convention.

The members of the local Rifle club must have interviewed the wrong Cluey Watson. For the old hunter does not take any stock in this promiscuous shooting of crows, and in all his experience never heard of a crow carring around eggs in its bill all over the place. Maybe he is wrong, but that's what he says.

NEW FOLIO OF GEOLOGIC ATLAS OF THE UNITED STATES

Clinton and Marion counties, in the heart of the Eastern Interior coal field, in southern Illinois, have produced in a single year more than two and a half million tons of coal, about half of which was taken from an area in the vicinity of the towns of Carlyle and Centralia. Several workable coal beds about 5 feet thick are found at places in this area, but they are deeply covered with glacial drift. The Carlyle, Sandoval, and Junction City oil and gas pools also lie within this area, which contains besides considerable deposits of brick clay, though this has not yet been much utilized.

These facts and its agricultural development give economic interest to an area that the Geological Survey, Department of the Interior, calls the Carlyle and Centralia quadrangles, which are mapped and described in Folio 216 of the Geologic Atlas of the United States entitled the Carlyle-Centralia folio. The facts of merely economic interest, however, are not the only ones set forth in this folio which contains also a description of the geologic features and the geologic history of the area.

Nearly the whole area which includes 466 square miles, is a gently rolling plain, incised by the shallow valleys of the principal streams, and practically its entire surface is occupied by glacial and alluvial deposits. Because of the low gradient of Kaskaskia river, its greatly meandering course, and the large drainage basin of its headwaters, floods are common and much of the bottom land along the river is swampy; hence reclamation by levees and drainage ditches is necessary before it can be brought under cultivation.

The older rocks are exposed at only a few places, but deep wells bored in search of oil and coal have shown to a depth of nearly 3,000 feet the character and thickness of the beds that lie beneath the glacial drift.

The glacial history of the area tells how the great ice sheet crept over the area from the north several times and how the melting ice flooded the lowlands, giving rise to fertile soils along Kaskaskia river and its tributaries.

AMALFI

"Amalfi has had slides before," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society concerning the picturesque little Italian town about which there have recently been disastrous land-slips. "The sea has been remorseless in eating under the red rock cliffs on which the town and its neighboring villages perch," continues the bulletin; "but more important has been Amalfi's figurative slip from its position as the world's first naval power to comparative obscurity and unimportance.

"The Amalfi district just south of Naples is one of the most beautiful, scenically, of Italy's beauty spots. A collection of views showing quaint Old World villages clinging to cliff-sides could hardly escape including Amalfi. It seems the archetype of them all. The rough, red cliffs spring steeply from the sea along this coast, and it must have been a daring builder who first conceived the idea of planting his structures there. But there they have clung for more than a thousand years, and when the sea, at times, has swallowed some of the buildings, the people of the region have stubbornly built others farther up the precipitous slopes.

"Hans Christian Anderson, who between fairy tales wrote charmingly of Italy's lovely scenery, described Amalfi in a phrase when he called it 'a city singularly piled upon itself.' Its little streets run not only among, but through, the houses, and some of its dark, tortuous passages must be lighted in midday. Its main street with its curious archways gives a touch of the Orient. Behind the town in a deep ravine is the picturesque 'glen of the mills' where a rolling stream leaps toward the sea in cascade after cascade, driving the machinery of dozens of clanking paper mills. Paper-making is one of the trade industries of Amalfi, and in addition there are the inevitable macaroni factories and soap-making plants.

"It is difficult to realize that little Amalfi, precariously stuck upon its cliffs, with a population of only about 5,000, was once a wealthy independent city-state whose might was recognized throughout the Near East. In the early Middle Ages before Venice and Genoa and Pisa rose to power, Amalfi was the great mercantile and naval power of the Mediterranean. Its traders started the order of St. John, later the Knights of Malta. Its fleet was the scourge of the Saracens in the trying days when their boats preyed on Mediterranean commerce. Under the city's doges a maritime court was maintained whose code was the acknowledged maritime law of Europe for centuries. And as a further contribution to the nautical world an Amalfian citizen is believed to have invented the mariner's compass, whose north-seeking needle, though known to the Chinese, was not previously used for navigation.

"Ribbons of highway skirt the cliffs in the Amalfi district, rising over ridges, and falling into hollows, turning sharp corners and dodging into and out of little tunnels. Always below lies the blue Mediterranean and tied together by the balustraded highway are charming little villages. It was among these villages and towns clustered about Amalfi—Atrani, Mulini, Furore, Praiano—that greatest damage was suffered in the recent landslide.

"Amalfi's decline from its high medieval state is partly traceable to the inroads the sea has made upon it. The sea began to undermine the lower parts of the town in the twelfth century, and about the same time came subjection from the Norman rulers of Sicily and Naples. In 1343 came a terrible inundation which destroyed most of the town and its harbor. From then the decline was rapid, and before long the city of 50,000 inhabitants had shrunk to one-tenth its former size. But picturesqueness and beauty have clung to Amalfi as tenaciously as Amalfi has clung to its cliffs. Nothing can shake these assets. Boat loads of tourists sail from Naples between the Sorrentine peninsula and Cyri to enter what is left of Amalfi's harbor and admire its beauties from the sea, while other sightseers drive down along the sparkling highways to enjoy the obverse of the picture. High over the clinging town hotels are perched in hollows of the cliffs to command incomparable views. Guests, forewarned, barely escaped from some of these aerielike hostelries."

WHEELER'S INDICTMENT.

So far as known the indictment of Senator Wheeler of Montana took place in the usual manner and it is to be expected that it will be disposed of through the usual channels. That the senator should declare that there is nothing to it and that it is a frame up, because of his activity in the investigation of the department of justice, is only what might be expected. It is a customary response. It may be true, but if it is there should be rejoicing on the part of the Montana senator for he would be helped rather than injured by the manner in which he can prove his innocence.

For the most part grand juries, or federal grand juries, are not disposed to vote for indictments unless there appears to be good ground for it. They require evidence that indicates a probability of guilt, and according to the senator himself state as well as federal authorities have been concerned in setting forth the matter to the grand jury. Perhaps a wrong impression can be given to those who decide whether there should be an indictment or not, but it is not the case that flimsy evidence and unsupported say-so are accepted as warranting an indictment.

When the time comes for answering to the indictment it is certain that the evidence will be of a far different character than that which is accepted by senate committees. The district attorney will be obliged to deal with facts and to provide proof of the allegations. Naturally those are available, or obtainable, before indictments are sought. There can be no desire that Senator Wheeler would be found guilty, or even indicted of trumped up charges. There is no chance that a court or jury would go that far.

Under the charges that have been brought against him of unlawfully receiving money to influence issuance of gas and oil permits on government land since he was elected to the senate, he is certain of a fair trial. There will be no chance to snow him under with a lot of hearsay testimony, the reported statements of dead men or testimony that is not in keeping with the rules of legal procedure. He will likewise have full opportunity to be heard.

PEPPER'S PLAN.

Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania in his advocacy of a resolution advising the president that it is the opinion of the senate that the time is ripe for the calling of a world conference, for the consideration of questions affecting the peace of the world along the lines of those conferences held at The Hague, seems to have voiced his own views without previously making sure that he was right.

Perhaps he figures that the peace of the world is a subject that might well be discussed and advanced at any time. It is something in which a great many people are interested and which they desire to see accomplished, but the mere thought that such a thing is desirable and the advisability of undertaking it at a certain time are decidedly different.

There can be no good purpose served in getting the representatives of nations together unless there is reason to believe that something can be accomplished. Mere discussion without favorable action accomplishes nothing. Rather are there times when it really throws cold water upon such movements.

It was within a few weeks that it was stated by the white house that conditions in Europe were such that it would be inadvisable to undertake to get the nations together for the purpose of endeavoring to get an additional agreement concerning disarmament.

If that is the situation relative to disarmament, which is so closely associated with the peace of the world, it must be regarded as holding true [illegible] to the discussion of any peace questions. Senator Pepper appears to have launched out on his effort without consultation of those more closely in touch with the situation. It is a question whether the sentiment of the senate is favorable to his resolution in view of known conditions. There are times when such conferences can be called with the hope of a favorable outcome. Until that is the case any such effort must be regarded as inadvisable, even though the cause is a worthy one.

WHAT BOLL WEEVIL HAS DONE.

The fight against the boll weevil has been carried on over a long period. The results are not what have been desired. This pest has been a great handicap to the cotton raisers. It has not only caused discouragement among the planters but it has greatly affected the production. Not a few have abandoned the growing of cotton in disgust over the inability to overcome the destructive insect, while others have curtailed their activities. Various methods of fighting the weevil are employed but not what can be regarded as satisfactory headway has been made.

Cotton raising has been the big business of the south. Conditions there are ideal for its growth and with the boll weevil held in check it could satisfy the markets of the world. But it has been demonstrated to the cotton raisers that there are disadvantages in one crop operations. It may work well for one year or for more, but there comes sooner or later a time when the value of a diversified is shown. The south has had its lesson in this respect. It got it before the wheat growers of the northwest did and for the past several years there has been greater attention given to the production of something that can be used for food as well as something that can be sold. And the south has not been given to growing just one kind of foodstuff but devoting its efforts to raising a variety.

To a certain degree the boll weevil can be charged with having brought the south to a realization of the manner in which it has been handicapping itself. Diversifying the crops has been needed longer than it has been practiced. It is a valuable substitute for cotton. The fight against the boll weevil must and will continue. Increased cotton production may have its effect in aiding that fight but while it is on the advisability of utilizing the soil for something that can be put to good use in supplying the necessities of that very section means the prevention of want and relieves what might otherwise be the helplessness of a large section. The boll weevil has forced the south to do something which it has steadily neglected, and which it now accepts chiefly because it must.

A SORRY SPECTACLE.

Not an inspiring spectacle is that which is being presented by Senator Hiram Johnson of California. He has gone before the people with his candidacy, he has made all sorts of unwarranted charges during his campaign thus far, he has maintained that he was endeavoring to put through a purifying process and he has set forth his own accomplishments and merits in a manner that was expected to captivate and disarm. He has been devoting two-thirds of the time that he should have been in Washington to such efforts. He has been his own exponent and yet in spite of all the time and effort that he has put forth he has been able to get endorsement in only one state, and that by a very narrow majority.

That he is sore because he has not carried the primaries in the states where he has been working he does not attempt to hide. He is in fact displaying his resentment in a manner that cannot fail to disgust those who have been anxious to accord him a chance or who have even befriended him. He has sought every advantage for himself, got it and now because the party has been frank enough to tell him in many states that it prefers someone else he begins turning agonising somersaults, making threats and getting provoked at himself because he has lost.

Senator Johnson is simply emphasizing the fact that the people in the primary states knew what they were about when they decided against him. By his conduct as a campaigner he has made a bad impression and it grows worse with subsequent statements. He is a hard loser, one of the worst that has been brought to public notice for a long time. The revelations thus far in his campaign are such that he should abandon it and particularly so before the people of his own state get a chance to throw him down. It is time for the senator from California to throw up the sponge and cry "Enough."

A BIG CLEANUP JOB.

General Butler's efforts to better conditions in Philadelphia have not ended. Neither does it appear that they have grown perceptibly less strenuous. He undertook the cleaning up of that city when conditions were decidedly bad. He has made more than a flourish. He has not accomplished all that is desired but he is making headway against a big job.

How big the handicaps are that he has experienced can be judged by the statement which he made this week to the effect that about half of the lieutenants of the police force are to go. They have been tried at their respective posts and it has been found that they are not rendering the service that is expected. In deciding they must go they are not to be discharged. Some who are aged will be placed on the pension list, others will be changed to other posts, some will be demoted. It has been found necessary to get a police force that will function in keeping with the orders of the director of public safety, and something besides threats is necessary.

When it becomes necessary to treat half the lieutenants of a police force in a city the size of Philadelphia in such a manner it can be easily recognized how impregnated that force must be with influences that are operating against law enforcement. General Butler is determined that the police force must do its duty and when the members do not they must make room for others who will. He has a job of housecleaning in that city which permits of no letups or oversights. It must be a continuous performance.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The man on the corner says: Not very stimulating for pennant predictions.

There was nothing in the Milwaukee primary that gave much satisfaction to Hiram Johnson.

Will Senator Wheeler be disposed to think that he ought to resign now that he has been indicted but had no trial?

When Senator Johnson insists that the fight has only just begun, it is hard to understand what fight he refers to.

Germany could hardly have expected that even the experts would back up its conduct and urge leniency in its behalf.

That airplane that is crippled at Prince Rupert didn't get far, but it is better it happened there than on the hop to the Aleutian isles.

Perhaps the best way to demonstrate the mistake of church newspapers is to let them go through with the experiment and the experience.

One bank on the Bowery (in New York) showed an increase of $12,500,000 in deposits in a year. Surprising is registered because it wasn't supposed they did such things in the Bowery.

DAY OF DISASTERS

"I am not graceful," admitted the tall and husky young man, somewhat belligerently the minute he got inside the door. "I don't claim any Valentine agility, but what I do object to is suffering the outrageous slings of fortune beyond my control!"

"What a pretty black your left eye is!" crooned his observant roommate. "Some sling! And what a remarkable successful aim!"

"Every time," proceeded the husky young man with humorous pathos in his voice, "every time I am just getting edged in so that a girl is beginning to take an interest in my necktie and tries to arrange it correctly for me, something happens to crash things!"

"And here I was debating whether to buy you a silver pickle fork or an ash receiver. Do you mean to tell me it is all over?"

Practically, the husky young man admitted, with a huge sigh. "I don't know how girls manage it but did you ever see one who was not of symphlike grace when out in public.

"They don't walk—the husky young man went on; they swim across a floor. They don't grab things; they just extend their finger-tips and the object clings to their hands and when they get up or sit down they have Delsarte just laid out cold. Ethel is the best of the lot and of course I have tried to live up to her standard. I thought she would say to herself that here at last was a large man who would not be a baby elephant around the home.

"By dint of holding my breath and going on tiptoe when indoors I had carried out the illusion and then I called at the Gilreadys on the way home the other night to get Ethel, who had gone over there to an afternoon bridge party. Naturally she wanted to show me off particularly, as the other girls all had to go home alone.

"'Mrs. Gilready,' Ethel chirped in the casual tone used by the owner of a string of real pearls in referring to it, 'Mr. Breakstone!' I was just about laying down my coat and hat and I completed the process as I gave Mrs. Gilready my most superb look and bow, but the crash that followed sort of took away the effect.

"My coat had pushed over a slender cutglass vase holding one perfect rose—you know that kind—and the vase had smashed against an art lamp, the water had poured into a $8 illustrated book of travels with a red cover which came off on the satin table spread. Backing away in dismay I then knocked over Mr. Gilready's pet smoking stand and broke the glass dotummy on it that holds the ashes. At which Ethel led me firmly to the divan and sat me down, smiling all the while in the pained way your mother used to smile when she was leading you out to a session in the woodshed.

"Talking very brightly and rapidly Ethel helped to mop up debris and then began helping the Gilreadys put away chairs and tables. Was I to sit there like a dummy and watch the women work? With my sturdy muscles? Springing to my feet I grabbed up the nearest chair and swung it airily by one hand asking where it went. Instantly the seat, which was removable, sprang out into the void and sailing like a boomerang returned and smote me in the eye. Everybody said dear me wasn't it too bad, but I am certain I detected a satisfied glint in Mrs. Gilready's eye.

"Ethel was very reserved all the way home and naturally I was anxious to do something to prove to her that the extraordinary ill fortune which had dogged me that afternoon was a sort of comet not due again for a thousand years more or less. We went out and sat down by the big low window in the sun parlor in Ethel's house and just as I opened my lips to say in deep vibrant tones, "Ethel!" the rear northeast leg of the small chair on which I was seated, all 200 pounds of me, cracked, collapsed and I went backward right through the large pane of glass into the prickly shrubbery. Ethel's father says it will take two years for those shrubs to grow out properly again. Maybe I'm nervous but I don't like the kind of finis accent Ethel put in her good-by when I came away!"

"Well, I'll say you were in luck to be let come away alive," declared his roommate. "Why, you're not safe to have around outside of a cage, boy!"—Exchange.

LINCOLN'S MANY FAILURES

Abraham Lincoln was born in a log cabin in the then "wilds of Kentucky." His mother died suddenly when he was ten years old.

With less than one year's schooling learned law from friend's books and the light of the log fire.

He wanted to be a Mississippi river pilot but stayed with his roving, thriftless father until 22 years old. Striking out for himself, he handled practically his first money while clerk at New Salem, Ill.

Promoted from private to captain in the Black Hawk war, he returned to New Salem, ran for the legislature and was overwhelmingly defeated. He, with a worthless partner, bought a store. It failed, and "Honest Old Abe" spent 17 years paying the obligations. Appointed county surveyor, his horse and instruments were attached for the store's debt, and a friend saved them for him.

He and blue-eyed Anne Rutledge were engaged. She died suddenly and friends feared he would commit suicide.

Elected to the legislature, he had to borrow funds to buy suitable clothes. He was re-elected three times. He learned in front of his book, and was admitted to the bar.

Snowed under in his race for Congress, he won two years later. Seeking to be land commissioner, he was offered the governorship of Oregon and his wife rejected it. He lost two races for the United States senatorship following the debates with Douglas. His name was proposed for the vice-presidential nomination, and he ran second.

He was elected and re-elected President of the United States. He guided the country through the Civil war. He accumulated the equivalent of half a million dollars. Today his examples have guided statesmen of the world; his name is honored, and his memory revered.

"I have been driven many times to my knees," he once said, "by the overwhelming conviction that I had nowhere else to go. My own wisdom and that about me seemed insufficient for that day."

Tomorrow—Helen Keller Found Happiness.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Vigorous old age is represented by Giovanni Giolitti, the Liberal leader in the Italian electoral campaign. Giolitti must now be nearly the oldest man in active politics, and he has always been a great worker. Born 82 years ago, the son of a clerk in the law courts, it has been said of him that no Italian statesman has ever understood better "the feelings, the aspirations and the prejudices" of the common people. He was a youth of 17 when Italy fought her war of liberation. His entry into active politics came in 1882 and ten years later he attained the premiership, a post he has been called upon to fill several times since that date. Now, at over four-score, he is still the active leader of his party. Signor Giolitti is a statesman who follows the simple life. He has lived for 40 years in the same modest house, and never goes into society. Well over 6 feet, he is a giant both physically and intellectually.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

No Danger from Sanatorium Sewage

Mr. Editor: I noticed in your paper a protest from "One Who Likes Children" against the practice of discharging the sewage from the state tuberculosis hospital into the Yantic River.

This department is also interested in the health of the children of Norwich and the whole state and would not permit anything which would in the slightest degree endanger it. The hospital had been having some trouble with the old system of sewage disposal and called for an engineer for advice in relation to it. He prepared and submitted for approval to this department plans for the new system. These were approved by us and consist of tank treatment of the sewage followed by chlorination before discharging through a submerged outlet into the main channel of the Thames river and treatment of the sludge from the tank upon sand beds.

If the chlorination is properly carried out, we feel that there will be no danger to any person bathing in the Thames river below the outlet and the objection of odors from the old system will be probably removed.

Sincerely yours,
STANLEY H. OSBORN,
Commissioner of Health for Conn.
Hartford, April 9, 1924.

Origin of Honeydew Melon.

The original seed of the honeydew melon is said to have been obtained from a melon shipped from Africa to New York city. The seed was planted at Rocky Ford, Colo., and crossed with other varieties for two or three seasons. The so-called honey-dew melon is the result. As yet this melon has not been brought into a stable condition of reproduction.

Author Of "The Face Upon The Floor"

Hugh A. D'Arcy, famous composer of "The Face upon the Floor," or as it is generally known "The Face on the Barroom Floor," who at the age of 61 is still hale and hearty. His club, the Thursday Nighters, a branch of the Elks, recently gave him a testimonial dinner wishing him all possible success for another score of years. He claims he was inspired to write the ballad on one summer night, in 1887, when a ragged derelict was "bounced" out of a Brooklyn cafe. On investigation, the derelict was found to be a former artist of culture and refinement, ruined by drink.

Stories That Recall Others

Exit the Man.

Despite the fact that leap year is well underway and eligible women should be looking about for prospective matches, a young woman clerk the other day flatly turned down an offer for a husband.

A woman, who comes into the office regularly, asked: "Why don't you get married?" When informed that it was the lack of a man she said that she would get her one. A few days later she returned and announced: "Well, I've got you a man."

The man who was anxiously waiting out in the corridor, departed hastily, however, when the clerk exclaimed: "I don't want him."

Want All Facts.

The teacher had been trying to indicate the principles of the Golden Rule and turn the other cheek.

"Now Tommy," she asked, "what would you do if a boy struck you?"

"How big a boy are you supposing?" demanded Tommy.

Mrs. Charles W. F. Billings.

The many friends of Addie L. Avery, beloved wife of Charles W. F. Billings, of 40 Bentley avenue will be grieved to learn of her death, shortly after 12.15 o'clock Thursday morning. Mrs. Billings had been confined to her home because of poor health for about five years but her condition became more serious during the past three years, resulting in her death Thursday.

Mrs. Billings was born in Poquonnoc, January 17, 1873; the daughter of Irving Avery and Jeanette Crandall Avery, her family being among the oldest residents of Poquonnoc, ancesters having fought in the Revolutionary war.

Thirty-two years ago in New York she was united in marriage with Charles W. F. Billings of Norwich, and immediately after her marriage came to this city where they made their home ever since. They had lived at 40 Bentley avenue for about three years.

Mrs. Billings was a member of the Central Baptist church but because of ill health was unable to take any active part in church work for many years. A woman of kindly manners she endeared herself to many Norwich people. Patient during all her years of suffering she was ever cheerful, her chief joy being in having her family about her.

Surviving besides her husband, are two sons, Percy Avery Billings and Leon Witter Billings of Norwich; two sisters, Mrs. Alfred Johnson of Westerly and Mrs. E. S. Carrington of Noank and one half-brother, Clarence Clark of Westerly.

Besides her husband she is survived by two brothers, Leonard Smith of Springfield, Mass., and Clarence A. Smith of Norwich Town, also several nieces and nephews.

Joseph L. Smith, now of Fisher's Island, was brought up by Mrs. Vergason from the time he was a small boy.

Dwight E. Smith.

After an illness of about one year, which took a more serious turn about six weeks ago the life of Dwight E. Smith came to a close Thursday morning at his home at 141 Franklin street.

He was twice married, his first wife being Miss Edith Gardner. Two sons of this marriage survive, Bertrand Gardner Smith of Pitchville and Lester Ely Smith of Norwich Town.

In February, 1914, Mr. Smith was united in marriage with Olivia Vergason who survives him with one daughter, Lora Alice Smith of Norwich. One sister also survives, Mrs. Lora Buddington of Norwich.

PORTLAND RECTOR PREACHES IN FINAL UNITED LENTEN SERVICE

Service Under the Cross was the topic of the sermon delivered Thursday evening by Rev. George H. Heyn, rector of Trinity church, Portland, this state, at the united Lenten service at Trinity Episcopal church. This was the final service in the series held by Christ and Trinity churches. The service was led by Rev. H. R. Graham, rector of Christ church. As the first scripture lesson, Rev. Mr. Graham read Jeremiah 51, beginning with the 45th verse and as the second lesson, Matthew, 20th chapter. Rev. Mr. Heyn preached from the text, Hebrews 12.2—Who for the joy that was before Him endured the cross. In part he said:

Christ had to endure the cross before he could have the joy of saving the world. Do you not think we need the power that comes as we learn to endure the cross? Some people say, I cant believe in God because my money has been taken away from me, I can't believe in God because prayer does not bring me what I ask for; because things go against me. Is it not because we have forgotten that in order to have joy we must bear the cross? How do I know that you have taken service under the cross of Christ? You have not done so if there is hidden about you somewhere an unforgiven sin, if the claim of the world seems stronger to you than the claim of the church.

Before we talk about enduring the cross we need to ask ourselves if we have taken service under the cross. May I persuade you to take service under the cross by reminding you of the uniqueness of that cross. It was all planned from the foundation of the world and that makes it an absolutely unique thing. What have you done for Him? I wonder if we could answer in terms of service under the cross? May I persuade you to take service under the cross by reminding you of the pardon of the cross?

Think what it would mean Good Friday if we could feel that we had confessed all of our sins and received the pardon of the cross. May I persuade you to take service under the cross by reminding you of the love of the cross? It was the sense of love that brought St. Paul to be one of the greatest servants under the cross.

To those who have taken service under the cross, I ask, what is the message for you? It is simply to endure the cross, whatever it may be. To those who feel they have been forsaken by God, there is only one thing to say—that God did not forget His Son and He will not forget you. Whatever is the message of the cross, endure it.

Surely we want to carry into the next world, some scar, to show that we were willing to bear up under hard, something worth while. How shall we endure the cross? We were told not to lit down under it, but to take up the cross and bear it. Have you ever asked Jesus Christ to help you bear your cross? Perhaps you have been trying to do it all alone. We will not be called upon to bear the cross very long. It is only for a little time. The joy that is coming to us far transcends the bitterness of the cross.

JEWETT CITY WOMAN IS K. D. INTERN'L PRESIDENT

Mrs. George H. Prior of Jewett City, state president of the King's Daughters, was elected International President at the seventh general convention held the past week at Charleston, South Carolina. This is the highest office that can be conferred on a King's Daughter, and the hundreds of members in this vicinity and the state will be very proud to learn that such a distinction has come to their state president. Mrs. Prior is admirably qualified for the position both in talents and experience. She has been the leader of her home circle in Jewett City for several years, and is now the state president. She is also a council member, and one of the editors of the Bible Study Department of the Silver Cross, the Order's magazine. She has been much in demand as a speaker at conventions in several states, and at the general convention in South Carolina was toastmistress at one of the luncheons, conducted a Bible study session, and was the chairman of the resolutions committee. The office of international president holds jurisdiction over circles in every state in the Union and also in Canada, which includes seventy thousand members. Mrs. Prior received beautiful bouquets from South Carolina, Vermont and Massachusetts. Connecticut delegates were obliged to leave before the election was announced, but met her in Washington.

RE-TRIAL BEGUN IN BATES VS. CARROLL

Re-trial of the $25,000 suit of Mrs. Mary Bates, widow of Arthur W. Bates of Preston, against George W. Carroll of this city, was started in the superior court at New London Thursday morning before Judge L. F. Waldo Marvin and a jury. In a former trial of the suit, which was brought for the death of Mr. Bates a verdict of $1,500 was given for the plaintiff but on an appeal to the supreme court a new trial was ordered.

It is the claim that the death of Mr. Bates on Aug. 28, 1921 was the result of injuries he received Oct. 24, 1920 in Lisbon when it is claimed a car driven by Mr. Carroll failed to swing wide enough when passing the Bates machine, but struck it and caused it to upset. There are three other suits against Mr. Carroll because of the same accident, none of which has been tried.

SPORTSMEN WILL WAGE WAR ON THE CROWS

War on the crow as a destroyer of the eggs and young of game and useful birds, young rabbits, poultry and crops will be carried on by the sportsmen and farmers of this vicinity during this spring in an effort to save game and crops from his depredations. Local gunners who are familiar with the crow's habits state that he is the worse enemy that useful birds have and that he is responsible for more dmage than any other bird in wild life. J. W. Titcomb, superintendent of the Connecticut state board of fisheries and game, states that this board includes the crow in the list of vermin and considers it destructive to the eggs and young game and useful birds. Sportsmen in this state are strongly recommended to kill crows.

The effort of local sportsmen and farmers will be helped by the fact that a general movement against the crow is in force throughout the country. A canvass just completed by one of the largest states shows that crows pick out the eyes of young lambs and calves, besides doing other damage. At this time of the year the nesting season for birds begins and if they are to be protected from the crow's ravages and allowed to raise their young, quick action on the part of sportsmen and farmers is necessary. In many sections the depredations of crows have been so serious that farmers have had to go to the expense of replanting crops.

In one of the western states a census shows that there are from ten to fifteen millions of crows and that it costs the people of that state a dollar a head per year to feed them.

Thirty-eight states of the union through their game protection authorities and agricultural officials are back of their sportsmen and farmers in the fight against the crow. It is expected that through the efforts being made this year to lessen the number of crows millions of dollars worth of game birds, poultry and crops will be saved.

JOHNSON PREDICTS YANKS WILL DUPLICATE THIS YEAR

Chicago, April 10—Ban Johnson, president of the American League, tonight joined the ranks of the "first guessers," making the prediction that the champion Yanks, if the proper discipline can be maintained, would again capture the 1924 championship of the American League.

President Johnson believes that Detroit and Cleveland will be dangerous contenders, while the Boston Red Sox, he thinks, are virtually certain to finish in the first division.

"The Yankees naturally are first choice," he said. "This club's pitchers cannot be excelled."

"Detroit will be a contender and so will Cleveland, in my judgment. The Tigers' pitching, which has been a weak spot, has been improved, and manager Cobb is favored with a splendid, hard hitting infielder."

The American League executives believes the showing of the St. Louis Browns will be dependent upon manager George Sisler, who was lost to the game last season due to impaired vision. If Sisler can return with all of his baseball skill the Browns undoubtedly will be dangerous, President Johnson thinks. He says it is difficult to measure the strength of the White Sox, who have a larger number of young players.

At Boston—Connolly and Dineen.
At Washington—Evans, Nallin and Rowland.
At Chicago—Owens and Holmes.
At Detroit—Moriarty, Hilderbrand and Ormsby.

ACADEMY PROSPECTS BRIGHTEN AS PRACTICE PROGRESSES

After nearly a week of outdoor practice the Academy baseball team looks better than it did at the close of the season last June. The student body is much encouraged over the showing of the squad so far. There seems to be a new spirit instilled in the players and practice goes off with more snap and pep than has been shown in a number of years. Rookies as well as veterans were working hard, the rookies to land a regular position on their team and the veterans to hold their places.

There is some mighty likely looking material among the recruits and if they show the same ability under fire as they do in practice the Academy will have an exceptionally good team. Coach Brigham is working hard with the boys and has brought back some of the old time spirit of the Academy teams and if he can keep this spark of enthusiasm burning he will have done good work.

In the catching department Perry Holander is the most likely looking candidate but is being hard pushed by "Butch" Mileski who did the bulk of the receiving last year after Holander was injured. Both boys stand up well and both are fairly good stickers.

The bulk of the pitching will be done by Ellie Segal, veteran of last season's team. Ellie has put ton considerable weight during the winter and his pitching is even better than last year. Another candidate is Steinman, the Wild Bull of Bosrah, who is a fast ball pitcher that will show up better as the season progresses. Steinman is also working out in the outer field where he is performing well. Steinman is also a hard hitter when he connects. Other pitching prospects are Ed Healy, Johnny Fellows and Couture, the last named being a freshman who pitched for Saint Patrick's school last year.

Two candidates are trying out for the initial sack position, Everett Gee, a veteran of a number of teams and Burke, a promising youngster who held down the position part of last season. Burke is covering the . . . in good form but is weak in hitting. Gee is the stronger hitter but he is by no means a slugger.

Tombari, veteran of last year is battling with Haslem for the keystone position, who is giving him strong opposition. Tombari is a promising boy with a natural baseball instinct handling himself well in the field. His hitting is a trifle weak although he is showing marked improvement over last year. Haslam is showing up well and may be shifted to short where McGowan is showing up well. These three will probably be shifted around the short field as the second sack until the right combination is secured by Coach Brigham.

Capt. Phil McNamara has little opposition at third there being only one candidate that is out against him. This is Cimilonki, who is showing up fairly well but is lacking in expirne for the hot corner. He hits fairly well, however.

The outfield positions are eagerly sought by a large number of candidates. Among the most promising are Jack Hinricks and Dinty Kilroy, both veterans of last year's team. Bush a new recruit is showing good form in his fielding. He has a fine arm and handles himself well on fly and ground balls. He also sits well. Other candidates for the outer garden are Fellows, Pitt, Sayles, Waters and Steinman. All show promise.

It is too early yet to predict what the team will be but at all events it will be better than last year. The recruits may show that they are ball players when the warm weather starts and surprise the veteranb.

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch

Runner on first base. Any inning. Batter singles to right field.

Here's a solution that is distinctly up to the judgment of the right fielder. But in most cases the ball should be thrown on a line toward third base, so as to reach the third baseman on the bound. When that is done the shortstop runs to a position about ten feet in front of third base and on the line of the throw. If the third baseman thinks he can catch the runner coming to third from first on the hit, he takes the throw from right field. If he sees he can't catch this runner he tells the shortstop to take the ball. As many hitters round first and continue on to second on such a play an easy put out is then made by the shortstop throwing the ball to second base.

GARTLAND WILL MANAGE FIRPO IN AMERCA

Buenos Aires, April 10.—If Louis Firpo, the pugilist, returned to the United States, Hugh Gartland will be his manager. Gartland made this statement today prior to sailing for New York on the steamer Western World, after having been for three months in Argentina acting in the capacity of manager for the Argentine heavyweight.

Gartland said he had in his pocket a contract signed by Firpo authorizing him to negotiate matches "subject to the aproval" of Firpo. Firpo, while admitting that he had signed such a document, said it did not mean that he would return to the ring, as he still was determined to give up boxing. On the contrary, however, Gartland expressed confidence that Firpo eventually would change his mind.

Gartland is being accompanied to New York by Guillermo Widmer, former secretary to Firpo, who said he was returning to resume business in the United States. Firpo made the voyage with Gartland and Widmer to Montevideo.

On the steamer bound for the United States, were Erminie Spalla, the Italian heavyweight, and Al Reich, American fighter, who was defeated in one round by Firpo last Saturday night.

WEST STILL CONTINUES TO IMPRESS BALTIMORE FANS

Tony West, local boy who is now robed in the uniform of the Baltimore Orioles still continues to impress the supporters of the Baltimore team and incidentally Manager Jack Dunn. Glowing reports of the boy's work in practice comes from the south where the sport writers are enthusiastic over his pitching. He was slated to go against the Newark club in yesterday's game but a last minute decision by Dunn kept him from performing. There is little doubt but that he will be on the regular hurling staff and take his turn with the veterans in the box this season.

SEVERAL BULKELEY PLAYERS ARE DROPPED BECAUSE OF STUDIES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 10. — Bulkeley High school chances for the Connecticut state title were handed a terrific blow today, when it was announced by Headmaster Homer K. Underwood that several of the first team players would be barred from participating in baseball games due to the low grade of scholarship. Among the players that will be affected by this ruling that was announced in the regular morning assembly, are Harold Hutchinson, regular third baseman; Joseph Gaetano, at shortstop; Edward Taylor, utility outfielder; Montgomery, third baseman; Lonergan, first baseman; Donohue, first baseman. George Sheflott's name has also been mentioned as one of the players that are ineligible to represent Bulkeley on the diamond for at least four weeks. However, Sheflott, who has been the regular catcher for the past three years, and Harold Hutchinson, whose sensational play at third base last year was a deciding factor in the gaining of the state championship for the Bulkeley nine, will take a makeup examination Friday morning. The ruling that affects the Bulkeley players is a state rule and reads that students must pass in five hours of work weekly in order to be eligible to play in any branch of sport.

The ineligibility of the above named players comes in the manner of a death blow to the chances that were extended towards the state high school championship. The Bulkeley team has been practicing for the past two weeks on and off and the team was rapidly assuming the shape of a formidable baseball machine. In case the players that were declared ineligible can not make up their work in the subjects that they flunked, it will mean that Coach Robert T. Aldrich will have a job on his hands replacing the above named players. As in the case in other high schools in this section of the state that have very few students to pick an athletic team from, a shortage of material has been one fault for the non-production of championship teams. There are men enough to compose a first team and may be it is a fairly good team that will win the championship. But when reserve men are wanted to fill the positions of regular players that are sick or for some other reason are unable to play, they are not to be had.

Such is the situation at Bulkeley at the present time. Eight veterans have reported for the baseball team. This makes it possible for the Bulkeley supporters to expect another propitious season. However, if several of the veterans are ineligible to play it will be a difficult task for the Orange and Black mentor to even expect another state championship team with the material that is on hand outside of last year's men.

Three of the most important positions on the nine would be affected if the players are not reinstated before the first game with a high school team in this state or out. Sheflot behind the bat, Hutchinson at third base and Gaetano at shortstop, are the three players that will be lost to the team. The breech at the right side of the infield will almost be impossible to patch up with other players. The absence of Sheflot from behind the plate is where the biggest loss will be occurred. There is nobody at the school that can step into Sheflott's shoes and perform as he did both on the defense and offense.

If both Hutchinson and Gaetano were declared ineligible for the present at least, there would be only one veteran in the infield, Joe Barry. Barry's fielding last season, when he erred but twice all season out of a total of 101 chances, stands out as a performance that has not been duplicated at Bulkeley. Tuttle, a senior, has been practicing with the first team all week and it is expected that he will hold down that position against the Alumni Saturday.

The Bulkeley outfield will compose of Capt. Wally Rice in leftfield, Booth in centerfield and Mansfield in rightfield. There are four twirlers on hand, two veterans, Tillie Daniels and Joe Parisi, and two rookies that have been giving a good account of themselves on the mound. These rookies are Montali and Locke, both sophomores. Besides Sheflott for the catching department, there are Collins and Morris Ulanoff.

Because Saturday's game against the Alumni is not a contest with a high school team, the Bulkeley nine will be the same that has played together in practice games all week.

SPORT NOTES

George Steuland, sent to Seattle by the Cubs in the Jacobs deal, looks so good to Manager Wade Killefer of the Indians in the spring workouts that the latter predicts he will win 25 games.

The Southwestern Inter - State League was launched at a meeting in McAlester, Okla. Sherman, Denison, Ada and McAlester were admitted and two, or possibly four, other towns may be given franchises.

Nick Dumovich's fate for 1924 has just about been decided by Manager Bill Killefer of the Cubs. Nick has been showing enough stuff to be retained. Los Angeles had half-way been banking on him.

William A. Harbridge, a catcher for the Phillies and Cubs, many years ago, died recently in Philadelphia. He was an assistant foreman in the customs service, having been appointed to the servide in 1895.

Johnny Miller, a pitcher from Suffield, Conn., and Pete Burnett, an infielder, have signed with Albany. Miller was with Worcester several seasons ago and was turned over to Albany but refused to report.

Organization of the Cotton States league for 1924 was virtually perfected at a meeting in Jackson, Miss. There will be six clubs in the league—Jackson, Vicksburg, Hattiesburg, Brookhaven, Miss. Monroe, La. The schedule will contain 168 games and the season will open early in May and close Labor day.

Jack Dunn says Baltimore will have another all star pitching staff this year. Besides Parnham, Groves, Thomas, Ogden and Frank he is banking on Ed Tomlin, obtained from Newark; George Earnshaw, former Swarthmore star; Cliff Jackson, former Illinois Varsity player, whom he secured from Syracuse and Bill Henderson.

Hornell, rated at one time as the strongest outlaw baseball town in New York, has thrown up the sponge. Two years ago the club claimed the independent championship of the United States, having such players as Scott Perry of the Athletics; Harris of the Red Sox, and Herbie Moran, who once was with the Braves.

Reorganization of the Blue Grass League as a four-club loop, adoption of an 84-game schedule and re-entrance of Lexington into the organization has been announced. Representatives of Cynthiana, Winchester, Paris and Lexington also is to be represented in the Kentucky-Indiana-Ohio League.

Lu Blue had his eye on the ball in the Detroit-Toronto exhibition game of March 26. He rapped out two doubles and two home runs.

Kenny Williams, Babe Ruth's rival for home run honors in the American League, connected for his first homer of the season on March 26.

The outstanding feature of the White Sox team is the hitting of the veteran Eddie Collins. He reported late, but started hitting as soon as he reached camp.

Bill Terry, who is trying to beat George Kelly out of his job as first baseman of the New York Giants, has been the hitting star of the Giant players in camp.

Ty Cobb has started the ax swinging on the Detroit rookies, George Smith and Sam Gibson, both pitchers, being sent to Asheville of the South Atlantic League. Cobb expects to cut his squad further within the next few days.

The first triple play of the 1924 season was pulled by the Detroit Tigers on March 26, against the Toronto team, Cobb, Pratt and Blue were the players in on the play.

Frank Ellerbe, third baseman of the St. Louis Browns, has gained the reputation of being the best dressed, most cheerful and most polite ball player in the American League.

In the game between Indianapolis and the New York Giants played on March 28, Donie Bush of the Indians played shortstop. Just 16 years ago Bush played that same position for Indianapolis.

Manager Jack Hendricks of the Cincinnati Reds is making no claims of the National League pennant, but he does say that the Reds will finish higher than the New York Giants this year.

The work of Al Simmons and Pitcher Gray has been the leading feature of the Philadelphia Athletics on their training trip. That of Simmons especially. He looks like the find of the season.

John McGraw is satisfied with the work of Travis Jackson at shortstop and has released Infielder Fred McGuire to the Toledo Club. McGuire has been with the Giants since leaving Holy Cross in 1923.

Joe Sewell pulled a "John Anderson" in the game of March 26 by stealing third base with a teammate standing on the bag. The play finally wound up with both Sewell and Gurley, who was occupying the bag, being retired.

Hack Miller, left fielder of the Chicago Cubs, had a field day on March 26 against the Oakland team of the Pacific Coast League. In his first two trips to the plate Hack cracked out doubles and singled in two of his remaining three times at bat.

Clark Griffith has released three of his Washington players to the Minneapolis team. They are Pitchers Dudley, Moon and Brogan. It is understood that Griffith has an option on Shortstop Hugh Critz of the Millers in return for the three players.

Jim Yeargin, a right-hander who quit the Braves last season because of homesickness, showed no signs of nostalgia pitching against the Brooklyn Dodgers on March 26, when he set them down with a single hit in four innings that he worked.

Imagine the satisfaction Donie Bush got out of the game of March 26 when his Indianapolis team handed the Washington Senators a 7 to 4 defeat. Last year Bush managed the Washington team and finally finished in fourth place, still was released after the close of the season.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

At Broadway Tonight.

The brilliant musical comedy success, The Gingham Girl, will be the attraction at the Broadway theatre tonight only and from all reports prove prove to be the musical event of the season.

The Gingham Girl is the biggest musical comedy of this and many other seasons.

Its tremendous popularity is due to its youthful daintiness, which is the keynote of the story, a capable cast, and a chorus as fresh and pretty as it is snappy. But the striking beauty of the whole structure is the charming simplicity of the theme, with its quaint, yet picturesque old New England settings, and those characters that are so lovable and sincere.

Broadway Theatre, Saturday Only.

The elaborate Universal Super-Jewel spectacle film which was for months in the making and cost an impressive figure, will be the local theatre's attraction Saturday only.

Merry-Go-Round is a dramatic love story involving a poor girl of the Prater, the Coney Island of Vienna, Austria, and a high-born count, who goes to the Prater and courts the girl while pretending to be a "necktie salesman."

War, sublime and terrible, wrecked the imperial glory of Austria, but it helped free the furious thought and military philosophy which kept its under classes tied down to misery for centuries before 1914.

It is on the basis of the social change just after the recent world war that the plot of Merry-Go-Round is built.

Rolfe & Edgar Gardiner, the musical comedy favorites, held down third spot with a fine routine of song, patter and dances.

Naomi and her Brazilian Boys South American Entertainers, put over a wonderful act brim full of syncopation, harmony and pep.

Fair Week, a new Paramount picture starring Walter Hiers, opened at the Strand theatre yesterday. It's a story of a big man in a small town. There's love interest, a villain and all that sort of thing. But it's not just another comedy. Far from it. And Hiers who plays opposite the star? Constance Wilson, Lois' sister. Carmen Phillips is in the cast, too, and so are J. Farrell MacDonald, little Mary Jane Irving and a host of others.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

BREED THEATRE

Tragedy that follows in the wake of unjust suspicion is vividly depicted in the William Fox screen version of Hoodman Blind, taken from the remarkable old stage play of that name, first produced in London in 1885. In the same year, the play was brought to Wallack's theatre in New York, where Kyrle Bellew and Annie Robe played the leading roles. In the London play, Wilson Barrett, co-author with Sir Henry Arthur Jones, played the male lead, handled on the screen by David Butler. The picture comes to the Breed theatre today and Saturday.

Gladys Hulette has the dual role of Nance Yeulette and Jess, her half sister. A capable cast lends notable support from such well known performers as Frank Campeau, Marc McDermott, Trilby Clark, Regina Connelly, Jack Walters and Eddie Gribbon. The picture was directed by John Ford.

The story tells of Jack Yeulette, who suspects his young wife of infidelity, thinking he saw her in the arms of another man. In fact, the woman he saw in the compromising position was Jess, her half sister, but he is not convinced of his error until tragedy brings home the truth. The story is replete with dramatic situations and according to advance notices, the cast handles the emotional scenes with exceptional ability.

Other features on the bill include The Way of a Man, the Pathe News and a Sunshine comedy.

PALACE THEATRE

Daddies is the story of five bachelors. No, there is no inconsistency here. You see the "daddies" were all bachelors to begin with, confirmed and foreworn champions of the state of single blessedness. They became daddies by adopting a bevy of war orphans. The process of making honest-to-goodness dad out of a determined bachelor is exemplified in all its delicious humor in the screen version of David Belasco's great stage success Daddies, at the Palace theatre which opened yesterday for a run of 3 days today and tomorrow.

The story opens with five heart-free college men who decide that there shall be no place for women in their merry journeys through life. They thereupon form a bachelor club which demands a five thousand dollar contribution from any members who seeks his release from the club for matrimonial purposes.

From its inception the club is a success. However, certain women members of the club members' semi-immediate family bring pressure to bear upon the theme of bachelorhood which they claim the club typifies. In a measure to deflect this torrent of criticism, the members decide to adopt a war orphan each. Then the fun begins. Jumping in the sacred state of fatherhood by the adoption route has its complications. The situations are mirth-provoking in the extreme. These situations finally reach a climax where the would-be bachelors agree that "the hand that rocks the cradle" is a mighty necessary appendage to have about the house on a equally night. The picture comes to a finish in the pleasing a solution of the problems as could be wished.

Everybody is happy. Particularly the audience. After seeing this splendid picture no one could wonder at the tremendous hit the original production made on the spoken stage. The screen of course, makes it possible to carry the situations to greater extremes and also makes them much more realistic.

Daddies is presented by a most capable cast including Mae Marsh, Harry Myers and other prominent screen celebrities. A particularly brilliant performance is given by Miss Marsh, whose very wistfulness just makes you love her. Every single member of the big cast seems to have been carefully selected for his or her particular role. Certainly Belasco's famous play has gained entertainment value in its transmission to the screen. It is certainly a "better picture" in every single sense.

Due to the importance of the vehicle, Mr. Fitzmaurice determined to produce it in the actual locale of the tale. He took his company, the principals of which Barbara La Marr, Lionel Barrymore, Bert Lytell, Richard Bennett and Mantagu Love, to Rome. The first thing he did was to seek permission of Roman authorities to use the historic Colliseum and other ancient ruins for backgrounds. To his surprise, not only was his request granted, but the government officials issued orders that the military assist him in every way.

Bennett and Lytell, under these special arrangements, dressed in the barracks of the famous regiment and wore its regalia in the scene depicting them leaving for the battle front. During the filming of the scene, which included a poignant farewell between a lover and his sweetheart, the entire regiment was used to keep the street clear, the highway being blocked off for half a mile.

The First Italian Regiment was formed in the year 1000 and on its staff are direct descendants of the organizers.

SOME IMPORTANT FACTS ABOUT WATER

The water of the earth may be divided into three parts—that which rests on the surface, that which floats in the atmosphere, and that which lies below the surface. The subsurface or ground water occurs largely in the pores or open spaces of rocks, but some of it is joined with the mineral matter of the rocks as "water of crystallization" and "water in solution." Water is also perhaps imprisoned deep in the earth, where no open spaces can exist because of the pressure caused by the tremendous weight of the overlying rocks.

Ground water is found partly in a zone that is saturated and partly in an overlying zone, where it is suspended. The water in the zone of saturation is divided into two parts—that which supplies wells and springs and that which will not flow out of the rocks even when wells are drilled down to it; and the water held in suspension is divided into three parts—that which lies in the soil within the reach of plants, that which forms a capillary fringe immediately above the zone of saturation, and that which lies between the soil water and the fringe water. But plants, even when they are desperately thirsty, are not able to obtain more than a certain part of the water in the soil. Thus, the earth contains water that is available for plant growth and water that is not available for plant growth. Even that remnant which is of no use to plants is divided into two parts—that which may be removed by evaporation and that which is called hygroscopic water, which is not removed even when the soil is fully exposed to the atmosphere for a long time.

A report recently issued as Water Supply 494 by department of the interior, through the Geological Survey, entitled "Outline of ground-water hydrology, with definitions," by O. E. Meinzer, sets forth in detail the main concepts of groundwater hydrology. It is a book of definitions of terms, of descriptions and classification, and is illustrated with numerous diagrams.

HAD 30,000 CHILDREN ATTENDING NORWICH PLAYGROUNDS SEASON

There was a total attendance of over 30,000 children at the several playgrounds last year, according to the annual report of the playgrounds commission.

The report, which was presented at the April meeting of the court of comman council Monday evening follows:

Upon call of Mayor Waters, the members of the Playground Commission assembled at the office of the mayor, September 29th, 1923, at 8 p. m. Present, His Honor the Mayor, Corporation Council Shields, and the seven members of the Commission: Mrs. Betty Pasnik, Mrs. Elizabeth Drew, Miss Helen B. Royce, Messrs John M. Lee, William Fitzgerald, Frank Leonard and Richard Lewis. With Mayor Waters presiding, temporary officers were elected—Chairman William Fitzgerald, and Miss Helen B. Royce, Clerk.

With Chairman Fitzgerald presiding, by unanimous vote Mr. Fitzgerald was elected Chairman, Mrs. Betty Pasnik, Treasurer, and Miss Royce, Secretary. These officers have continued in their respective positions, with the exception of Miss Royce, Secretary, whose resignation became effective upon July 1st, 1923, Richard Lewis being elected to fill her unexpired term as secretary. Mrs. Louise Atterbury was appointed by Mayor Waters to replace Miss Royce upon the Commission.

On the 21st of June, 1923, Mr. Harold Anson Bruce of Easton, Penn., was engaged as Supervisor, with seven young women assistants, and recommendation was made that three male assistants be secured by Mr. Bruce, which was afterward done. It has been stermined that seven playgrounds would be maintained, in the following locations. Through the courtesy of the School Board, grounds of the Falls, Hobart avenue, Elizabeth street, Laurel Hill and West Thames street schools. Through the courtesy of the Shetucket Company, grounds in Greeneville; and the City grounds on Lake street.

A constructive athletic and instructional plan was laid out by the Supervisor, which was carried out to a successful conclusion by the Supervisor and staff. A brief summary of this program is appended to this report.

The Playground Commission, and the City of Norwich are deeply indebted to the National Playground Commission for assistance throughout the season, which terminated upon August 31st. A field representative of theirs, Miss Sherburne, conducted an institute here for instruction of the workers. When certain citizens, residing near the Elizabeth street school grounds sought to have these grounds discontinued, through injunction proceedings, the National Play Ground Association sent representatives to assist the Commission in every way possible. This was done without charge.

To many individuals, and to organizations we are also indebted in various ways: to the Norwich Commercial school: to the Y. M. C. A.; to the Elks; to the American Legion, and to the Parent - Teachers Association of Laurel Hill.

In addition to the daily program at each playground, many inter-playground contests were made a very important feature of the year's program. Various outdoor dramatic events also made very interesting features. Sewing and kinred forms of handcraft were taught the girls in addition to the regular work. In fact, an effort was made to have the Playground work a practical summer extension of much of the work carried on in the winter by our schools.

There was a total attendance at the various grounds in excess of 30,000 children. There were no accidents or injuries of any major character, and the children were kept off the streets so successfully, that during the time the playgrounds were open no child was the victim of an automobile accident.

Mistakes were made. There were errors of judgment. But in the opinion of the Commission a mode of procedure was established, which, modified by this first year's experience, would produce good an lasting results.

It is to be regretted that we overstepped our appropriation. We had planned our work so that we would be well within it, but a certain bill for labor in betting apparatus, was considerably greater than we had anticipated, and we were unable to curtail other expenses sufficiently to offset it.

In our financial report there are two items listed as "Equipment" and "Minor Equipment." Of these two, the one represented by "equipment" is principally large apparatus, which will have a comparatively long life. "Minor" equipment covers expenditures for balls, bats, and smaller pieces which are of a less permanent nature, and cannot be considered entirely as an investment.

The following is the financial report:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Appropriation | $4,000.00 | |
| Reappropriated | 893.40 | |
| Equipment | | $1,631.20 |
| Minor Equipment | | 600.96 |
| Salaries | | 1,810.60 |
| Operating expenses | | 952.93 |
| Total receipts | $4,893.40 | |
| Total expenditures | | $4,995.69 |
| Ovedrawn | 102.29 | |
| | $4,995.69 | $4,995.69 |

STONINGTON MAN DIES SUDDENLY IN BROOKLYN

Allen Dewey, 62, of 471 Fifty-third street, Brooklyn, N. Y., and for many years a resident of Stonington, was found dead in bed at the rooming house of Charles A. Albrecht, with whom he had made his home for the last eight years.

He claimed to be a relative of Admiral George Dewey.

Mr. Dewey left Stonington about eight years ago and very little has been heard of him since he left that town. It is known, however, that he worked in a restaurant in Brooklyn, and that he was a night cashier of the Brighton restaurant at Fifth avenue and 54th street, Brooklyn, where he was known simply as Admiral Dewey to the other employes. Efforts to find Julian D. Heath, a lawyer in New York, a nephew, failed Wednesday night. The body is in the Kings county morgue in Brooklyn.

Mr. Dewey was formerly employed at Stoneridge, the home of Charles P. Williams, but a year before leaving Stonington he conducted a restaurant in the Riley building on Water street. He has one brother living, Jerome A. Dewey, of the Quiambaug road, Stonington.

It takes nine tailors to make a man, but if he happens to be a married man one dressmaker can break him.

He laughed at Kellogg's Bran!

Now read this letter of thanks from Mr. Kane. It speaks for itself. Remember, it is because Kellogg's Bran is ALL bran that it was so effective in his case—just as it has been in thousands of others. Only ALL bran can produce 100 per cent results.

My dear friends

Imagine a young man weighing 143 pounds in the course of a few months parked in bed, a weakling weighing 94 pounds. An elderly lady whom I knew since I was a kid paid me what she thought was a last visit. Upon being told of my plight she immediately mentioned your product for such an ailment. Maybe some of us didn't look upon her views very lightly . . . it was to laugh!

My dear friend, I am still laughing . . . not at your product, but because I am able to. I am telling you and the world at large, "Eat Kellogg's Krumbled Bran!" It should be called "Constipation's worst enemy." I owe you my heartfelt gratitude. I can talk, and whenever the opportunity presents itself, my mouth is always full of bran—Kellogg's Krumbled. Wishing you countless days of progress, I am

Yours for success,
John M. Kane,

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

Accepting an Invitation

Well, Old Man Weasel didn't jump out from behind a tree to frighten Little Jack Rabbit and Uncle Lucky, and either did Danny Fox, as I feared they might in the last story, and after the two little rabbits had put the new tires on the Luckymobile they rode away to seek another adventure. For they were always on the lookout for something new, and perhaps that's the reason they were always getting into trouble, although sometimes people who stay at home get into packs of trouble, so I've heard.

After a while, but not so very long, Uncle Lucky spied up in a tree a little white pigeon singing all to herself:

"I love the quiet shady wood,
The sheltering leaves of green,
The cosy nooks and silver brooks,
The ferns of emerald sheen.
But best of all I love my mate,
With breast of purple hue.
With him, I'll build a pretty nest
And sing the summer through."

"Why don't you come and live in my old barn?" asked the old gentleman rabbit. "There's a cute little pigeon house on the roof. You needn't pay rent."

"That's very kind of you, Mr. Luckyiefthindfoot," said the pigeon's purple breasted mate. "I guess we'll accept your kind invitation," and the two little pigeonb hopped into the Luckymobile.

"We'll take you right home," laughed the little rabbit, delighted to think the two pretty pigeons were going to live in the old barn.

As soon as they reached the little white house where dear Uncle Lucky lived, they put the Luckymobile away in the garage, and showed the pigeons their new home. It was a very pretty little house, let me tell you, with a small porch, a nice door and two little windows.

It didn't take Mrs. Pigeon long to make the bed for what do you suppose she used for sheets? Why, two of Little Jack Rabbit's linen handkerchiefs and for a coverlet Uncle Lucky's blue silk polkadot handkerchief, which the dear old gentleman rabbit gave her. And in the next story, maybe I'll tell you some more about the little pigeon house.

WATER POWER RESOURCES OF RIVER IN WYOMING

Recent investigations of the water-power resources of streams in the basin of Colorado River by the Department of the Interior have included detailed studies of possible dam sites on Green River, the largest tributary of the Colorado. Green River has its source in glaciers and glacial lakes on the west slope of the Wind River Range near the Continental Divide. The investigations made show that probably nine of these lakes, having a combined storage capacity of more than half a million acre-feet of water, may be utilized as reservoirs for use in irrigation or in generating power.

The basin of the river above the town of Green River, Wyo., covers about 18,000 square miles of land in the southwest corner of the state which ranges in elevation from 5,840 to 13,800 feet above sea level. Some of this land is already irrigated, and about 400,000 acres may be brought under irrigation. The only crops for which the climate is favorable are the very hardy grains and hay.

A report on the work on Green River, which was done by R. R. Woolley, of the Geological Survey, is open to inspection at the office of the Geological Survey in Washington and at the district office of the Survey in Salt Lake City, Room 317, Federal Building.

The report, which contains maps and photographs, shows the physical features and the meteorological conditions in the basin of the river, as well as the extent and growth of agriculture. Ten possible power sites are described, which range in capacity from 120 horsepower with the natural flow of the river to 2,580 horsepower with regulated stream flow.

Carlsbad Cavern Made a National Monument

Carlsbad Cavern is an immense cave in New Mexico that shows beauty and a great variety of natural features. It is in the eastern foothills of the Guadalupe Mountains, about 10 miles north of the Texas line and 22 miles southeast of Carlsbad, the principal town in southeastern New Mexico.

The cavern is said to have been discovered in 1901 by J. L. White and Pige Bong, whose attention was drawn to it by the great numbers of bats they saw coming out of a hole in the side of a small valley. They entered the hole and found a cave containing large deposits of bat guano. These deposits were worked for several years.

Mr. White has recently explored several miles of the chambers of the cavern. About half a mile from the opening from which the bats were seen coming the cavern becomes phenomenally large and spectacular. About three miles of its hallways and chambers, including its most ornate parts, were surveyed in the spring of 1923 by Robert A. Holley, of the General Land Office. In September, 1923, the cavern was visited by Willis T. Lee, a geologist of the Department of the Interior, who spent three days in examining and photographing it. On Mr. Lee's return from New Mexico the National Park Service recommended that the cavern should be made a national monument, and a proclamation setting it apart as recommended was issued by the president October 25, 1923.

Cavern Not Fully Explored

No part of the cavern has yet been thoroughly explored, but enough is known of it to show that it will rank high among the famous caverns of the world. Visitors to it who say that they are familiar with other great caverns assert that some of its chambers surpass in size any others yet discovered. One room is more than half a mile long and several hundred feet wide, and its ceiling is so high that torchlights failed to illuminate it.

The floor of the cavern is 700 feet below the entrance, which was formed by the fall of a small part of the roof. In a distance of less than 3 miles from this point the floor descends 500 feet, yet the bottom of the cavern lies still deeper, for Mr. White has found chambers and hallways 200 feet lower. The depths of the cavern therefore lie at least a thousand feet vertically below the entrance.

The geologic conditions in the vicinity of Carlsbad Cavern are unusual. The limestone in which the cavern has been carved is about 1,300 feet thick and is underlain by an equally thick series of beds of soft red shale and sandstone that include thick beds of gypsum and rock salt. The occurrence of these easily soluble beds under the 1,300 feet of hard yet soluble limestone may have produced a cavernous condition of the rocks that will show spectacular results.

OIL AND GAS FIELDS WEST AND SOUTHWEST DESCRIBED

The Department of the Interior has recently issued Bulletin 736 of the Geological Survey, which is made up of eight reports that have already been published as individual booklets. This bulletin will be of particular interest to geologists and oil and gas operators working in the Rocky Mountain, Mid-Continent, and Gulf Coast fields, for it contains the Geological Survey's reports on the geology and oil prospects in the Osage oil field of Wyoming, the Crow Indian Reservation of Montana, the El Dorado oil field of Arkansas, the Madill-Denison area of Oklahoma and Texas, the Ranger district of Texas, and the Brooks, Green, and Grand Saline salt domes of Texas. The bulletin is illustrated with maps, geologic sections, and well logs, which should be of use to drillers and operators in the areas described.

HIGHEST AND LOWEST POINTS IN THE WORLD

The maximum difference in elevation of land in the United States is 14,777 feet, according to the Geological Survey, of the Department of the Interior. Mount Whitney, the highest point, is 14,501 feet above sea level, and a point in Death Valley is 276 feet below sea level. These two points which are both in California, are less than 90 miles apart. This difference is small, however, as compared with the figures for Asia. Mount Everest rises 29,002 feet above sea level, whereas the shores of the Dead Sea are 1,290 feet below sea level, a total difference in land heights of 30,292 feet. Mount Everest has never been climbed.

The greatest ocean depth yet found is 32,088 feet, at a point about 40 miles north of the island of Mindanao in the Philippine Islands. The ocean bottom at this point is therfore more than 11 1-2 miles below the summit of Mount Everest.

The difference in the land heights in Europe is about 15,868 feet.

High Mountains of the World

Nine mountain peaks in Wyoming rise more than 13,000 feet above sea level, and three of them rise above 14,000 feet, according to the Geological Survey, of the Department of the Interior. The three highest peaks are Gannett Peak, 13,785 feet; Grand Teton, 13,747 feet; and Fremont Peak, 13,730 feet. Cloud Peak, one of the most beautiful mountains in the state, is 13,165 feet high. Wyoming also has 31 other named and about 40 unnamed mountain peaks in the west are nearly double the height of the very highest mountain in the entire Appalachian mountain system, in the eastern part of the country.

Market Ratio of Gold and Silver.

At the present price of foreign silver, 68 cents an ounce, an ounce of gold, $20.67, is worth practically thirty times the value of an ounce of silver. The United States government paid a dollar an ounce for silver produced in the United States under a law passed during the World war, which provided for selling about 300,000,000 American silver dollars, melted into bullion, to the English government, and for the replacement of these silver dollars by purchase of silver from domestic producers at a dollar an ounce, regardless of its world value. On this basis the ratio of gold to silver value is about twenty to one.

Probably, Yes.

Probably some men meander around all night for the purpose of satisfying themselves that there is no place like home.

ONE BIG UNION DISORDERS IN DOVER, N. H.

Dover, N. H., April 10.—With squads of police from Nashua and Haverhill, Mass., as well as a number of citizens volunteers reinforcing the local force, this city tonight found respite from the disorders which caused the arrest of four men during strike demonstrations last night. Picketing of the closed Pacific Mills end of the home of the mill agent, H. A. Newton, was not attempted.

Bert Emsley, of Lawrence, Mass., organizer of the one big union, pleaded not guilty in district court today to charges of interfering with a workman engaged in his lawful occupation and disorderly conduct and tumult. He was held in $300 bail for hearing tomorrow. Fred E. Beal, of Lawrence, and Charles Pasas and James Hughes, both of Dover, entered similar pleas to charges of disorderly conduct and tumult. Beal was held in $400 bail, the others in $100 each.

According to the police the disorders were due to agitation by the One Big Union among former operators of the Dover branch of the Pacific Mills, normally employing 1200 persons, but closed since last November by a strike. Bert Emsley came here from Lawrence to organize a branch of The One Big Union among the workers and, according to the police, speeches were made urging the strikers to seize and operate the mills if the company refused to reopen them. Recently picketing was begun at the plant, although it was empty save for watchmen and the home of the agent also was the scene of nightly demonstrations.

Matters reached their climax yesterday. When Daniel Daly, who had charge of the company's horses, was exercising the animals, he was followed and molested by a large crowd. Later the crowd gathered about the engineer's home, and volunteer citizens joined with the police to disperse the assembly. It was then that Emsley and the others were arrested.

Angry crowds gathered about the jail throughout the night and early today and the authorities called in outside assistance. The Nashua squad responding brought machine guns and sidearms. While court was in session the forenoon the police cleared the streets and throughout the day and evening prevented groups forming.

The strike at the mills was called when the operatives claimed that a rearrangement of working conditions announced by the management imposed additional work on the weavers without any increase in pay. One attempt to reopen the plant was made by the company but the workers refused to return on the ground that outside help had been brought in to do some of the work. When the strike began many of the workers were members of the United Textile Workers of America.

MAKES HOME BAKING WORTH-WHILE

Much interest has been aroused by the discovery at Quallacoya, on the Bio-Bio river, about 30 miles from Conception, Chile, of what is asserted to be an extensive deposit of anthracite coal. The vein is said to be of good quality and proportions, although a technical survey of the property has not yet been completed. According to press reports, a company has been formed in Santiago to undertake mining operations.

Have You Piles?

Then You Have Something to Learn.

Thousands who have piles have not do the same for you.

learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with internal medicine. Neither cutting nor any amount of treatment with ointments and suppositories will remove the cause.

Bad circulation causes piles. There is a complete stagnation of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Dr. J. E. Leonhardt was first to find the remedy. His prescription is HEM-ROID, a tablet medicine, taken internally, that is now sold by druggists generally. Dr. Leonhardt tried it in 1,000 cases with the marvelous record of success in 93 per cent., and then decided it should be sold under a rigid money-back guarantee.

MANSFIELD DEPOT

Fenelon McCollum and Fenelon McCollum, Jr., were in West Stafford Friday, on business.

Excitement prevailed in the village Friday evening when fire was discovered at the foundry of the Mansfield Organ Pipe works. It looked for awhile as if the two tenement house connected with the foundry and occupied by Edward Gengler and family and Roy Thompson and family would be destroyed by the flames but plenty of water, fire extinguishers and hard work by the neighbors kept the fire confined to the foundry, though the main building caught in several places.

A party was given Miss Helen Bowers Friday evening in celebration of her 17th birthday. Games were played and ice cream and cake were served.

Sunday was dollar day at the church, the proceeds to be used to make the final payment on the mortgage. The sum raised was not sufficient to cover the amount due on the mortgage, but the church society is hoping to raise the balance by Easter.

JUST PASS YOUR SMILE AROUND

When you hit the job each morning,
Bring something that's worth while;
Besides your good intentions,
Bring a cheerful little smile.
Then you'll surely start the day right—
For it always has been found,
That we like to meet the fellow
With a smile to pass around.

If you've got a "grouch" from last night,
Forget to bring it down;
If you can't let in the sunshine,
Don't bring that awful frown;
Don't simply nod your head and pass,
Speak up, you'll like the sound—
"Good morning to you. So and so,"
Then pass your smile around.

Just use your appreciation
And think how you would feel,
If the other fellow met you
With a look as cold as steel;
Keep a few smiles ever handy,
And your heart with joy will bound—
When you see each face reflecting,
The smile you passed around.

Ask Your Husband

IF you want to know how a man feels when his wife's personal appearance compares unfavorably with that of other women—ask your husband. Unless he's too timid, he'll tell you he even notices their hands.

To avoid having red, rough and coarse looking hands, a woman must avoid using common household soaps which irritate the skin. She must be as careful about the kind of household soap she uses as she is about her toilet soap.

Thousands of intelligent, careful women who realize this, insist upon Kirkman's Soap for all their household and laundry uses.

* * *

THEY know that Kirkman's is as harmless to the hands as is the most exquisite toilet soap and, being free from irritating lye, will not injure the most delicate fabrics.

It is made of the purest and finest materials. It contains absolutely no adulterants such as starch, talc or water-glass, which have no cleansing value.

For the sake of your hands insist upon Kirkman's Soap.

DAUGHERTY COMMITTEE PROCEEDINGS

Washington, April 10.—The senate Daugherty committee back trailed today over the wide field of its investigation in search of evidence tying up loose ends of charges before it bearing upon the administration of the department of justice.

Land fraud cases in Oklahoma, government action touching upon war contracts of the Old Hickory Powder company in Tennessee, and the shoving of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight films were given attention in quick succession while by a sudden change of plan decision was reached to send Chairman Brookhart and Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, the committee prosecutor, to Washington Court House, Ohio, immediately in connection with its investigation.

Late in the day another question was presented to the committee for determination when H. F. Taft, Washington superintendent of the Western Union company, gave notice that the company would refuse to deliver messages sent and received here by Former Attorney General Daugherty during the past three years.

These files had been requested and the committee at once took the refusal under consideration but without indicating what action it might decide upon. In the past the company has opened its files to several congressional committees, notably the senate oil committee. What had influenced its decision in this case was not revealed.

The sub-committee of two, which left for Washington Court House tonight, proposes to get at the books of the Midland National Bank, headed by M. S. Daugherty, the former attorney general's brother. Complete access to the books has been refused the committee. The sub-committee expects also to take testimony bearing upon stories given the committee by Roxie Stinson, divorced wife of the late Jess W. Smith. In the absence of the two senators, Senator Moses, republican, New Hampshire, as acting chairman, was authorized to take testimony at a hearing tomorrow of J. J. McGraw, former republican national committeeman from Oklahoma, in connection with Indian land fraud cases.

A. T. McLane, United States attorney at Nashville, Tenn., went over the situation presented by the Old Hickory Powder company's war contracts for the committee today and declared that no investigation of the facts had ever been placed by either the war or justice department. He cited again the report to investigators that "between 15,000,000 and 18,000,000" might be recovered from the Du Pont interests, which owned the plant.

Under cross examination by Paul Howland, attorney for former Attorney General Daugherty, he expressed the opinion that the five year delay in the institution of government proceedings in the matter was probably due more to the war department than to the justice department. He also corroborated testimony previously given by George W. Storck, department of justice accountant, that the preliminary reports of the government's inquiry into the plant accounts had been turned over to counsel for the Du Ponts.

George L. Miller, one of the firm of Miller Brothers, owner of 101 Ranch in Oklahoma, had a stormy session before the committee, in attempting to read a statement defending transactions with Indians by which he said he had acquired $400, acres of land, and in which he pleaded guilty to fraud. He employed J. E. Todd, of Columbus, O., a former law partner of Mr. Daugherty, to defend him in the prosecution which followed, "to get a square deal," he asserted. Mr. Howland dropped him on cross examination after a single question, to which Miller responded that Mr. Todd had said the former attorney general would not permit his law partner to appear before the department of justice. Todd did get a fee of $9,000, Miller said, originally paid by John McCahay, of Pittsburgh.

In the examination of A. J. Bates, former assistant corporation counsel of Chicago, in connection with the showing of the fight pictures, Senator Wheeler threw out frequent suggestions that a conspiracy for interstate showing of the Dempsey-Carpentier films had the approval of "the attorney general." Bates, to all the suggestions, and to the implied assertions that he had told agents of the committee differently, insisted he had no knowledge of such a fact, but had an understanding that "the pictures would go through," in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, and other states, when "somebody paid a fine in each state."

DISALLOWS CLAIM FOR WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

The workmen's compensation claim of Earn E. Parks of 69 Norwood avenue, New London, against the New London Ship and Engine Co. has been dismissed and disallowed. Parks received an injury March 2, 1922, consisting of a minor abrasion over the left eye when he was struck by the crane of an automatic machine upon which he was working. He continued at his work from March 2, 1922 up to about Aug. 16, 1923 and on Aug. 19 he was found unconscious at his boarding place, was taken to the hospital and remained there about 8 or 10 weeks.

The evidence shows that the injury received by the claimant in March, 1922, was of a very trifling nature; not of sufficient magnitude to cause the claimant to quite work or to return the next day for a new dressing. He continued at his regular work with no intermission or complaint of any kind attributable to any injury until August, 1923, which is nearly sixteen months after he received this slight abrasion on his forehead. On the 22nd of August, 1923, he was found in a rooming house in an unconscious condition, suffering from indiscretions in diet which was unquestionably an important factor in the production of the condition in which he was found. He had a high blood pressure and arterio-sclerosis. The testimony shows that his method of living and his diet are the governing factors in producing the condition which has caused his permanent disability. At the present time he is suffering from a left hemiplegia due to cerebral enbolus. The symptoms which are found to be present in his case are of such a nature that they cannot be intelligently connected with any injury such as claimant received in March, 1922, and his present condition is found to be due to other causes which have been mentioned above which causes cannot in any way be traced to the slight injury received by him on the date mentioned, and the conclusion is therefore that he is not suffering from any condition traceable to an injury arising out of and in the course of his employment.

Whereupon, the claim for compensation is hereby disallowed and dismissed.

SEMINOLE BRINGS TO NEW LONDON FOUR SUSPECTS FROM RUM ROW

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 10.—Mrs. Raymond Brown and infant son, of Baker avenue, Groton, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were able to return home today.

Patrolmen Michael Dorsey, in making his rounds late last night discovered the store of the New London Candy company, 661 Bank street, open. An investigation of the place revealed that the door of the safe was open and indicated that a robbery had taken place. One of the owners of the concern was notified and soon appeared. When the owner arrived he could not determine whether any plunder had been obtained. It is believed that a careless employe was responsible for the entrance being unlocked as a key was found inserted in the lock.

Miss Harriet Nothnagle of Meriden, will be presented in the police court Saturday morning on a charge of violation of the automobile law in refusing to reveal her identity. Miss Nothnagle was in New London yesterday afternoon and while operating her machine on Ocean avenue, an airdale owned by L. Tracy Sheffield of No. 1000 Ocean avenue, ran into the highway and was struck by the machine and killed. Mr. Sheffield was near at hand and attempted to ascertain the name of Miss Nothnagle, but the latter refused to make it known. Mr. Sheffield, however, obtained the number of the markers on the Nothnagle car, which were 35-923, Connecticut issue. Mr. Sheffield complained against the driver of the car and provided the information he had obtained in order to secure the prosecution of the woman. Today the police were given the name of the owner of the machine by the state motor vehicle department and Miss Nothnagle was communicated with by telephone. She admitted being the owner of the car that killed the Sheffield dog and she was then ordered to present herself in court Saturday.

The condition of Geraldine Cornell, aged 7, of 74 Goshen street, struck by a city automobile truck driven by William L. White on Shaw street, yesterday afternoon, is reported at Lawrence hospital as being vastly improved today. It was believed yesterday afternoon when the child was admitted to the institution that she had suffered internal injuries, but with the such indication being manifested today, the hospital authorities have reported the little girl as out of danger.

Alec Camalucci was fined $25 in the police court, this morning, for creating a disturbance at the Rialto theater last night. He pleaded guilty, but made a distinction in that he was not fighting. In passing out penalty to him Judge Prince gave him a warning that if he came back during the next year for the same offense he would put into effect a jail term of ten days, which he this morning suspended. Camalucci's offense was the lighting of a cigarette in the theatre and loud talk when the first performance came to an end. John Bonanas is employed at the theatre and has the authority that it possessed by constables, as he is appointed every month a special constable. He is stationed at the theatre to preserve order and maintain decorum. When Camalucci and a friend stepped beyond the bounds of good behavior Bonanas rebuked them and did so positively. Camalucci took offense and struck Bonanas in the face. Then the police station was asked for assistance and Camalucci was arrested. He did not seem to appreciate the unenviable position in which he had placed himself and in court was inclined not to regard the case as a very serious one. It was his department there that brought the rebuke with the judgment of the court. It cost the accused $25 dollars to visit the picture show last night.

Revenue cutter Seminole, one of the craft assigned to the task of running down rum-vessels in the vicinity of Montauk Point, came into port this afternoon with four suspects of the bank robbery and murder perpetrated at a Belmore, L. I., bank, last Friday. The prisoners, however, are not the bank robbers and murderers, but are more probably bootleggers, although there is not sufficient evidence in possession of the federal government to warrant their prosecution. The four suspects are Ralph Blakeslee, 35, of North Haven; Edward Smith, 37, of Bridgeport; Arthur Roland, 44, of Bridgeport, and Joseph Sanchez, 37, of Bayonet street, New London.

The gang is undoubtedly a part of the operators of boats that receive cargoes of whiskey from the craft at Rum Row, for it is known that Blakeslee and Smith are reputed bootleggers.

Following the arrival of the Seminole in port, Sergeant Clifford Giorgas of the Groton barracks boarded the cutter and identified Blakeslee and Smith, recognizing them as former prohibition enforcement agents and at the time assigned to duty in Connecticut.

Last Friday four young men, none of them over 30, entered the [illegible] at Bellmore and after ordering a girl clerk to go to the basement of the institution where another employe was eating lunch, the robbers rifled the bank, getting away with about $6,000. As the gang were about to leave the bank a bond salesman entered and before he realized he was facing bank robbers the gang opened fire, one .38 calibre bullet and another .45 calibre bullet entering his body, resulting in almost instantaneous death.

The girl was the only person in the bank who could furnish any description of the robbers and since then the authorities have been seeking the gang, who are said to be either Hebrews or Italians and between 24 and 30.

The state police at Groton obtained a clue last night that led to the belief that the robbers are aboard some craft in the vicinity of Rum Row. A radio message was sent to the master of the cutter and late yesterday afternoon the rum-runner, J-1013 was sighted. A chase of several miles was made by the cutter before the power boat was overhauled. A search was made for liquor, but none was found. Although that the gang was in quest of liquor there was little doubt. Two thousand dollars was found aboard the craft and it is believed that no money was intended for the purchase of liquor.

Acting on the theory that the men were the robbers, Lieutenant Commander Dench, in charge of the cutter, ordered the quartette brought aboard the cutter and made prisoners. The J-1013 was taken in charge by members of the crew of the cutter and brought to the coast guard academy wharf, reaching port during the night.

A message was sent to the authorities of Mineola, N. Y., that the Seminole was headed for New London with the suspects. This evening County Detective Schlamm, assigned to the district attorney's office of Nassau county, New York, came to New London for the purpose of establishing the identity of the prisoners and to interrogate them in an endeavor to connect them with the robbery and murder, but when he arrived here and talked with Sergeant Gorgas, it developed positively that the gang was not the one sought for the crime. The suspects, however, have not been liberated and are prisoners aboard the cutter, which took up an anchorage off the New London line pier instead of tying up at the coast guard academy pier.

Youths, to amuse themselves this afternoon, caused a dog to be frightened and chased about the Post Hill section, the animal finally being driven from fright into a sewer at the corner of Addison street and Berkley avenue. The office of the water and sewer department was notified and the animal was freed.

David Connors of State street, employed by the city water and sewer department as stock clerk, sustained a painful injury to his right foot this afternoon when a heavy piece of lumber fell on it. The foot was badly bruised. Connor will be unable to work for several weeks.

There is a movement starting to keep the stores of the city open during the summer season as in years past, but what the talk will bring no one can tell. Merchants are complaining that they lose much trade that goes to the little stores that are kept open till nearly midnight the year round, while the larger stores having big overhead expenses close at 6. No merchants in the city is doing the business he formerly did. No decision about opening has been reached, nor is one likely until the Easter season trade is here.

The work of getting Howard street in condition for paving is progressing slowly, but it is being pursued every day. Gas and water connections are being installed or renewed, so that the street is practically closed to traffic. The changes being made in the bridge just north of Hamilton street will consume a great deal of time, but will be substantial when completed.

The ever-present problem of how to prevent congestion of traffic on Bank street will not be solved until there has been a meeting held that will give expression to public opinion on the matter. City Manager Holt intends to hold such a meeting when he gets around to it, and in the meantime he is sounding opinion from any source that will express an idea of what is best to be done. There seems to be a growing opposition to parking cars on Bank street. In other cities parking is forbidden on the principal streets and in some places one-way streets are established at intervals of two or three blocks.

Union lodge, F. & A. M., had candidates for the entered apprentice degree last evening. The lodge is growing rapidly.

The regular meeting of Daughters Pocohantas, held this evening in Odd Fellows' hall, was attended by a large number of members. A class of candidates received the initiatory degree.

Miss Teresa Cook, bookkeeper in the employ of Tate & Neilan, is confined to her home on Warren street by illness.

Mrs. Anna Bradford, 609 Eastern Point road, Groton, and Mrs. Nolan Nesbit and infant daughter, 2 Union street, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Forest Cowin, a student at a school in Lyme, is spending the Easter vacation with his mother, Mrs. Fred W. Wilson, of Eastern Point.

Mrs. Thomas C. Spears has returned to her home on Mohegan avenue, after having spent a week with friends in Worcester, Mass.

Announcement is made of the engagement of William McCann of Bridgeport, to Miss Madeline Rinehart of New Jersey. Mr. McCann is a nephew of Mrs. Earl Friars of 70 Montauk avenue, this city.

An autostruck, owned by Frank Hewes of Groton and operated by Reginald Davidson, of Groton, and a machine owned and driven by Tony Angelo of Water street, New London, were in collision, corner of Thames and School streets, Groton this afternoon, the collision occurring when both machines attempted to make the turn, traveling in opposite directions. The crash of the two cars caused Angelo to sustain cuts about the face and head from flying glass from a broken windshield. Davidson escaped injury. Both cars were considerably damaged. Capt. Andrew McCarthy of the Groton police, ordered both Davidson and Angelo to appear in the Groton town court Monday next to answer a charge of reckless driving.

Another entrance to a cottage in the vicinity of Ocean Beach was revealed this evening when it developed that the vacant house at 1163 Ocean avenue, owned by Miss Mary Rutterford of 70 Neptune avenue, where she is proprietress of a tea room, had been searched for plunder. Patrolman Walter Rehn determined that entrance to the cottage was gained by a rear window being forced. Miss Rutterford visited the cottage and her inspection showed that nothing of value had been stolen.

The democratic city convention, held last night and which nominated delegates to the state convention to be held in New Haven, has caused turmoil in the ranks of the party because William C. Fox was not chosen one of the delegates and Mr. Fox's friends are openly voicing their displeasure at the ignoring of one of the leading democrats of the city. The delegates elected were Alton T. Miner, John F. Murray, Mrs. Isaac W. Browne, Mrs. Donald Mitchell, William T. Connor, Charles J. Ducy, James R. May, Andrew J. Collins and J. D. Farrell.

Scott Original "Great Unknown."

The expression, "The Great Unknown," is applied in a hundred different ways—in politics, in financial operations, in criminal investigations, in fact, every time there is doubt about the identity of something or somebody. The original "Great Unknown" was Sir Walter Scott. He had published his "Waverly Novels" anonymously. All literary England was wondering about the author, but Scott and his friends kept the secret because he was a clerk of sessions, and his superiors considered novel writing beneath the dignity of such a high official. "Serious" works he wrote under his own name, but for years all the fame and success for the author of the immortal Waverly books went to the "Great Unknown." The veil was only lifted after everybody had guessed the truth.

Religion in Men's Lives.

Let men know that it (religion) is not mere trifling, it is not a thing to be dallied with for an instant, it is not a thing for a man to convince himself by an argument, and then keep as it were locked in a shelf; it is something that is so deep and serious that when a man has once tested it there is no more chance of his going out of it than there is of his going out of the friendship and the love which holds him with its perpetual expression, with the continued, deeper and deeper manifestation of the way in which the living being belongs to him who has a right to his life.—Phillips Brooks.

THE MOVEMENT FROM THE FARMS TO THE CITIES

(Written Specially for The Bulletin.)

There was scarcely a single newspaper between Boston and 'Frisco which didn't carry that item, somewhere in its columns, last week or week before.

The counted 'em was never stated and I don't know. Nor do I know whether the count was correct or a few hundred thousand out of the way. If it was accurate it was certainly significant. If it was not quite correct I feel confident that the inaccuracy was in the direction of understatement. It is more likely to have been a larger number than a less. Which makes the significance even greater.

There is nothing new about this movement. It has been going on certainly ever since the only inexact observer the race has ever known called attention to the many who go in at the gate and the broad way, and the few who stick to the straight gate and the narrow way.

But the flow has increased markedly in the last few years. The steadily rolling stream has grown into a rushing torrent. It is taking on the proportions of a freshet, not to say a deluge.

Of course, it means eventual disaster if not checked. No student of human nature, no reader of human history, no man capable of using his reason and willing to do so but recognizes the danger which lies in this unbalancing of life. Study of that curious complex which we call human nature, and analysis of that record of human blunderings which we call history, and a calm use of the reason with which some of the more boastful of us assume that men and women are endowed,—all three unite and conjoin in warning that this off-the-farms back-to-the-cities exodus spells mischief for the future. In fact, if needs but the most cursory glance at the situation in any rural town, east or west, north or south, to see that the skirts of danger are already upon us.

Everywhere, from the potato-fields of Maine to the wheat-prairies of Dakota, the cry to Macedonia for help arises. That pitiful call going unheeded, in some quarters, particularly in the west, the note is changing to one of more sinister omen, to a hoarse growl of resentment. There is a rising feeling in many states of the west that, since assistance is denied, punishment is called for. Punishment of those who are more or less blindly asserted to be responsible for the failure to help.

Make no mistake about that western storm-cloud which some whitewashing editors call "liberalism" or "radicalism," and whose directors they permit their reporters to call "liberals" or "radicals." There is no faintest trace of consanguinity between the liberalism which seeks broadly to enlarge the greatest possible good to the greatest possible number, or the radicalism which aims to graft improvement on the root rather than on some feeble outlying twig, there is no trace of consanguinity between these worthy motives and the combination of disappointment, resentment, unreason and revengefulness which dishonestly calls itself by their names. It is to be regretted, from the viewpoint of the plain speaker, that the newspaper men whose writings are the chief reading of most of us should permit such slipshod misuse of English.

Liberalism and radicalism are both phases of a highly creditable forward-looking spirit which seeks in a helpful way to make smooth the roads of the future. But this western hysteria is not at all concerned about the future. It is the outcome of a belief that its victims have been ill-treated and a resultant rage which "sees red" and wants revenge. Its motto is, "Pay me what I think you've cheated me out of or I'll burn somebody's barns."

As if the burning of a million barns would increase storage facilities! Or as if the wrecking of existing institutions would automatically create, over night, better and more substantial ones.

Well, no one thing has had greater influence in bringing to life this undesirable progeny than the steady, continuous blood-draining of the country to the cities. It is today the most ominous cloud in our national sky. It is not only a major cause of the hard times on the farms by reason of its bleeding them white, it is also a cause of suffering to the cities by the lowered congestion which it produces in them. Worst of all, it is a black omen, portending still worse things for the future, if not checked.

But how shall that be done? When the very stars in their courses seem to fight against Sisera, how shall he or his captains stay them?

Well, when you're trying to check or change the course of a destructive stream which is gullying your fields and washing banks away, you don't jump into the middle of the torrent with a tin-cup and try to stop it by main strength and idiocy. You go upstream and hunt for the source, meanwhile keeping a sharp eye open for available curves or curves where an emergency dam might be improvised.

You know perfectly well that you can't prevent a freshet-swollen brook in full spate from playing mischief on your fields in any other way than by damming or diverting it before it gets to those fields. In other words, you've got to find out the cause and course before you can apply any effective remedy.

If a million people, more or less, are to be kept from migrating every year from country to city, we've got to find out why they migrate, first of all.

Now, that is a mighty big field for observation and study. It is an old one, too. It has been plowed and harrowed and drilled and cultivated by scores and scores of more or less careful students and able men. Can we hope to find out anything new in it or about it?

Perhaps not. But there's one thing noticeable about almost all that has ever been written or spoken concerning this exodus from the country. The injuries have usually been made in very general terms and the results tabulated by hundreds of thousands. It seems to me that we, you and I, that is, might get a little closer to the terms of the problem if we'd take it up as it is seen from our backyards. If we'd consider, for instance, not why a million people are drifting city-ward every year, but why Bill Smith's boy next door, is going. Why Matty Bingham's grown-up daughter is going. Why Hank Jones is offering his stock and tools and farm at auction, preparatory to going,—why in a word, our immediate neighbors, whom we've known all our lives and can read like books, are going.

It seems to me that, in such a way, we'd get a little closer to the grass-roots. In a general way, I deplore with proper manifestations of disapproval the departure of the million from all over the countryside. But it comes a good deal nearer home and means a good deal more when some old neighbor, with whom I've summered and wintered, he, these many years, suddenly pulls up stakes and deserts the old farm. Moreover, it's possible to find out, in his case, what it isn't practicable to find out in the case of the million, the why's and wherefore's of his change.

For instance, in my own small rural town five neighbors have this spring left the farm for the city. I happen to know some of the reasons in each case.

1.—There's Barnaby Goss, for one. Barnaby doesn't like to work any more than he has to. Barnaby also likes to flivver. Barnaby also prefers tenderloin steak to chuck stew. Barnaby, therefore, has gone where he won't have to work but eight hours a day; where he thinks he will get steak a little oftener, and where, thanks to urban adoption of "daylight saving," he will have half the long summer afternoons to play either in or with his ramshackly flivver.

2.—There's "Tumps" Barrows. — I don't know what his first name really is, all his associates call him "Tumps," and "Tumps" he must be for this chronicle.—He has a rather over-developed sense of his own abilities. "Tumps" has, and a firm assurance that he isn't fully appreciated by either his family or his friends. Also, he is convinced that there isn't room enough in "this dead old hole" for his expansion and flowering. Therefore, he has gone to the city where men of his calibre have a chance to show what's in them.—He's now standing by a slow-moving belt, screwing half-inch nuts on half-inch bolts, eight hours a day, six days a week, barring two hours off Saturday afternoons.

3.—There's little Susie Wickersham. She's gone to the city because she can't keep up with the very latest styles in flapperdom in this rural and up-side-walked community. There are more and bigger show-windows in town. There are frequenter "bargain-sales." Incidentally, there are also more "fellas."

4.—There's "Wally" Tobin. He's been a pretty good farm-worker for fifteen of his thirty years. Always as a hired hand, but in demand because of his soberness and general trustworthiness. But the farmer for whom he's been working the last five years has given up in discouragement, and "Wally," thus deprived of a job, has decided that eight hours in the city at $5 a day for easy work look better than ten or twelve hours on the farm at $2.50 for hard work.

5.—There's, lastly, Owen Branch, the "discouraged farmer" for whom "Wally" wprked last. Owen has a big and once valuable farm. Taxes on it are high; labor sufficient to keep it going is not available; prices for its products are too low to return wages and taxes and a living for the owner. He is a shrewd business man and for several years has pulled all the wires and tried all the stunts which an inherited and carefully developed business sense showed available. All to no purpose. So he's going to the city where, as he hopes and believes, his business acumen will be worth something.—It's a good deal more informative and instructive to me to know why these five very real persons, my immediate neighbors, are acting as they do, than to be told that a million people are acting similarly. The five come home to me; the million seem far off and vague. The five concrete cases at least disclose certain reasons and certain motives and certain hopes. They aren't dim abstractions on the horizon of Somewhere-else. They're mighty real critters, just over my line fence.

Of course, it's poor philosophy and risky dogmatism which generalizes too broadly from insufficient details. All the same, it is only by the slow and careful accumulation of adequate details that trustworthy generalizations can be assured.

Suppose, just in the interests of sociological science, you take up the cases of your own neighbors who have forsaken the fields for the sidewalks. Reckon them up, their pretexts and their obviously real motives both considered. "Ex uno disce omnes," said the old Romans. "From one case you'll understand all others." Perhaps that's putting it a little strong. But it is sure that you may, possibly, understand one or two or half-a-dozen cases, while it's beyond any of us to comprehend a million, all in a bunch.

Certainly, we'll never know what remedy to apply, or even to look for, till we know what the disease is.

Putting a porous plaster on the back is seldom effective in curing a tunion on the toe.

That's just what too many so-called "statesmen" and "political economists" are doing.

We farmers are, perforce, rather practical-minded old codgers. Let's come down to brass tacks in this matter, town by town and neighborhood by neighborhood. Then, may be, we'll get somewhere.

THE FARMER.

PLAINFIELD

The Ladies' Bowling League, after bowling last Tuesday evening, decided to give a play. No definite plans were formulated, but the following committee was appointed to make the arrangements: Miss Lillian Heap, chairman, Miss Neisie Hartwell, Miss Scmon Laperle, and Mrs. Margaret Eastham.

The high single this week went to Miss Hartwell, who rolled 117. The team scores for the past two weeks follow.

Run Aways 2150, Spark Plugs, 2112, Wildfires, 2106, Go Get Ems, 1952.

At the Grange Tuesday evening, the second number, a solo was rendered by Lewis Green, not Lewis Frink as stated Thursday.

Miss Mae Gulle, violin teacher will be in Plainfield Tuesday, Apr. 15 to interview prospective students. If interested write her. Phone 782, Norwich.—adv.

The interest of the community centers just now in the swimming meet scheduled for this (Friday) evening, between the Plainfield team and the Norwich Y. M. C. A. mermen. Two meets have been held between the two teams, each team having won in its own pool, so the one tonight is to break the tie. Plainfield has a great deal of confidence in its team, the swimmers having developed wonderfully during the past two weeks, under the leadership of Captain Ray Greene, and a close and interesting match is expected.

At the gymnasium of the high school Wednesday evening, there was the second high school social of the year, when the class of 1926, held a Junior Hop. Dancing began at 8 o'clock, the music being furnished by an orchestra. The social was over at 11 o'clock, this being made necessary by a new ruling of the town school board, that any social event in the high school must close at 11 o'clock at the latest.

At the last meeting of the standing committee of the Congregational church, the resignation of Clarence W. Jeffers, as assistant superintendent of the Sunday school was accepted. Clarence Winsor was elected to succeed him.

The subject of the cottage meeting held at the home of charles Hopkins Wednesday evening, was The Unbroken Life. A short program followed the meeting, consisting of a reading by Mrs. Edna Mathewson, a violin solo by Miss Joanna Dorrance, vocal solos George Inglis. Miss Emily Hopkins was the pianist. After the meeting a fine radio concert was heard over Mr. Hopkin's new radio.

LEFFINGWELL

Mrs. William White spent Friday with Mrs. Frances Swan of Connell street, Norwich.

The officers of the Sunday school for the following year were elected Sunday morning. Superintendent, A. H. Beebe; assistant superintendent, Mrs. Jesse E. Rogers; secretary and treasurer, Miss Carolyn L. Beebe; assitant secretary and treasurer, Miss Elsie Beard.

Miss Alice A. Bishop of Bozrah was a recent guest of Mrs. William Clegg.

Tuesday evening, the men of the Bozrah Baptist church gave a very successful supper in the church vestry. Supper consisted of cold sliced ham, escalloped potatoes, rolls, coffee, pie and ice cream. A good sum was realized and a large crowd was in attendance.

Miss Viola Leffingwell was a guest Tuesday of Mrs. Nancy Chapman on Franklin street, Norwich.

Those from Leffingwell attending the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Gardner of East Great Plain, were Mrs. Carrie Park and Mr. and Mrs. John I. Ross.

Rev. Wm. B. Oakley and Herbert E. Beard attended an ordination at the Huntington Baptist church in New London Friday last. Mr. Oakley, Mr. Beard and C. Emile Geoffrey heard the ordination sermon Sunday evening.

The new roads already contracted for and the resurfacing of Main and East Main streets will amount to about twelve miles. With the total cost will approximate $382,856. The contract for the borough streets has not yet been let.

The officers of the grand lodge, order of Eastern Star, visited Baker chapter, Wednesday evening. There were 110 present at the luncheon in the Congregational chapel and many others attended the reception in the lodge rooms.

Excellence in Poetry.

Supreme excellence in poetry is never attained by a sudden leap up from the common level of ideas and common speech, whether a man's everyday neighbors are rustics, or men and women of art and fashion and culture. The world in which his imagination moves is never entirely of his own creation. The great poet must have had pioneers from whom he derived some of the ideas and resources of his craft—enough, at least, to feed and stimulate and direct his inborn energy.—William Minto.

College Boat Races.

The first college boat races held were between boats owned by Yale students in Boston harbor in 1844, the contestants being an eight-oared gig and a dugout canoe. The first intercollegiate race was rowed by Yale and Harvard crews in eight-oared barges over a two-mile course on Lake Winnipesaukee in 1852.

REACTION IN MARKET

New York, April 10—Renewal of selling pressure based on unfavorable trade news brought about another sharp reaction in today's stock market, net losses in the active issues ranging from 1 to 5 points. More than two score stocks including U. S. Steel, commons, Baldwin, American Can Studebaker and other industrial leaders established new low prices for the year.

Unfavorable trade developments which furnished the ammunition for bear attacks, included a decrease of slightly more than 130,000 tons in the March unfilled orders of the U. S. Steel corporation, a shrinkage of 28,728 in the carloadings for the week ended March 29, as compared with the same week last year and reports of further curtailment in the automobile industry.

Speculators for the decline, who have been hammering the market successively for the last five days, had little difficulty in uncovering weak spots in all sections of the list, but opinion varied as to the amount of real liquidation that they had brought out, while the daily turnover was the largest of any day this week, it was well under 1,000,000 shares. Commission houses reported that the number of margin calls was relatively small considering the extent of the decline. This was construed as indicating that stocks generally were in fairly strong hands.

Publication of the unfilled tonnage statement was the signal for another attack on United States Steel, which was depressed to 95 1-2 and then rallied to, 96, off 3 1-2 on the day. In view of the uncertainty as to what action the directors will take concerning an extra dividend on United States Steel at their meeting later in the month, bear traders were reported to be rather cautious in extending their commitments in this stock.

Speculative selling of the motors undoubtedly was influenced by the announcement that the Paige Motor car company had curtailed operations and that industrial employment in Detroit had shown a decrease last week. Studebaker (old stock) dropped more than 5 points to 99 1-8 Willys Overland preferred broke more than five points to 58 5-8, and most of the other motor and accessory issues slumped 1 to 3 1-2 points.

Woolworth broke 3 1-4 points to 193, Fisher Body 8 to 202, and American Can, Davidson Chemical, Dupont, General Electric, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, National Lead and Otis Steel preferred were among the many issues to sag 2 1-2 or more points. American Sugar refining sold at 46 1-4, the lowest price on record.

Rail shares yielded with the rest of the list, independent strength was shown by Texas & Pacific which moved up nearly 3 points to 30 a new 1924 top on rumors of a forthcoming consolidation with Missouri Pacific and two other Southwestern lines. Norfolk & Western dropped more than 3 points to 124 5-8.

Call money opened at 4 1-4 per cent., and then advanced to 4 1-2 where it closed. The time money market was dull and the commercial paper market fairly active, the ruling rate in each being 4 1-2 per cent.

Foreign exchange trading was quiet, with the principal rates holding fairly steady. Demand sterling ruled slightly above $4.33 and French francs were quoted just below 6 cents. A further stiffening was noted in the Canadian rate.

CURB MARKET

New York, April 10—Stock prices lost ground under the weight of heavy short selling in today's curb market but the presence of substantial support just under the market resulted in net losses in the standard issues being held to 2 points or less.

Speculative selling of the oil shares failed to make much progress because of the improved statistical position of the industry although a few ordinarily inactive shares such as Standard Oils of Ohio and Nebraska, Swan and Finch and Illinois Pipe, dropped 3 to 4 points. Prairie Oil an dGas dropped from 237 to 233 1-2 where it was off 2 points on the day. Standard Oil of Indiana, Vacuum Mutual and International yielded fractionally.

Buying of Glen Alden coal, which advanced 2 1-2 points to 30, was the feature of the industrial list. Dechlar die casting, Lehigh Power securities, Grand stores and American Light and Traction yielded a point or more.

Changes in the bond and mining group were relatively small and unimportant.

BOND MARKET

New York, April 10—Bond prices wavered in today's dull trading, with interest confined almost to standard railroad and traction issues.

Passage of the compromise transit bill at Albany stimulated buying of Interborough, B. R. T. and Third Avenue Railway issues on the ground that the measure would benefit the companies and also arouse more interest in the market for their securities.

Mixed movements prevailed in the speculative rail group, firmness of Chicago and Alton and Grand Trunk issues being offset by the weakness of Pitsburg, New Haven, Chicago and Great Western and other liens. The industrial list also presented a spotty appearance, chemical company liens scoring additional recoveries while prices of sugar and copper bonds were shaded further.

Action of foreign government obligations failed to reflect the attitude of the bond market on the Dawes report.

New financing, announced for tomorrow, is the largest in several weeks. Bankers will offer $20,100,000 Pennsylvania railroad one to 15 year five per cent. equipment bonds at a price of 99 1-2 to yield an average of about 5.65 per cent. offering also will be made of $8,500,000 Consumers Power company 20 year, 5 1-2 per cent. bonds at 95 1-2 to yield 5.83 per cent. proceeds from the sale will be used to finance expansion of the companies property in Michigan.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, April 10—Wheat and corn scored something of an advance in price today, chiefly as a result of late buying in which one of the larger houses took the lead. The buying movement was apparently due more or less to indications that selling had been overdone. Wheat closed firm, a shade to 5-8c net higher, May 1.01 7-8 to 1.02 and July 1.03 1-2 to 1.03 5-8, with corn 1-4 to 1-2c up, oat ashowing 1-8 to 7-8c gain. End provisions varying from unchanged figures to 5 a7c decline.

At first, the wheat market was considerably influenced by the government crop report, and was forced down under 1.01 a bushel, May delivery, within a fraction of the lowest level so far this season. Sellers contended that the government report if figured on the basis of the final par yield would suggest production of 750,000,000 bushels more than the official estimate. On the decline in prices however, talk became current that weakening factors had perhaps been well discontinued, and that a change for some investment purchasing was open.

Gossip that rehabilitation of German finances would ultimately have a stimulating effect on commodity markets was given rather increased notice today among wheat traders. During the late dealings, a little attention was also fixed on Indiana and Illinois reports pointing to heavier losses in acreage than has heretofore appeared likely.

Reports of a better cash demand for corn at Omaha helped turn the corn marketupward. There were predictions, too, that demand here would improve with the opening of lake traffic. The oats market was stimulated by word of enlarged inquiry northwest.

Provisions were without any decided support.

SPRAYING STRAWBERRIES TO CONTROL FRUIT ROTS

One season's experimental work in attempting to reduce and control the leaf-spot diseases, and rots in strawberries by spraying is reported by the United States Department of Agriculture as showing favorable results. Spraying for the control of these diseases has been frequently recommended, and a few growers in widely separated localities have sprayed regularly for fruit rots and have reported an apparent reduction in losses. The first systematic experiments, however, for the control of fruit rots of strawberries by spraying are those reported in Department Circular 309 just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The strawberry fields chosen for the experiments were all in the vicinity of Beebe, Ark., and were known to have suffered heavy losses from rot during the previous year. The spray period extended from early March, when the first buds were opening on the Klondike variety, to April 21, when the first berries were beginning to show pink. Bordeaux mixture (4-4-50) was applied with a horse-drawn power sprayer. Copper-lime and sulphur dusts were applied with a hand blower. The results seem to justify the conclusion that spraying with Bordeaux mixture, and in some cases dusting, reduced the loss from rot which developed on the fruit after it was picked sufficiently to more than justify the expense of the treatment.

It is planned to extend the spraying schedule as satisfactory, or as a general practice.

ALL ABOUT THE ONIONS

The most quickly grown onions come from sets, whether young onions for the table or the mature bulbs to be stored or cooked later in the season. There are two kinds of onion sets, bottom sets, and tree onion sets. They come from two distinct varieties of onions. The usual bottom set is merely an immature onion, prematurely dried off the preceding season. Set out the following year, it completes its growth and produces a large bulb. The tree onion or top sets, are small bulblets produced in the seed cluster.

Onion sets come by color and there is little choice so far as quality is concerned for young onions, red, white, or yellow. In addition to sets, the earliest of all young onions come from the perennial varieties or "multipliers" as they are generally known which live from year to year and are ready to pull when growth starts in the spring. The shallot, known as of particularly delicate flavor for cooking, is a yellow multiplier onion.

For the later young onions and for the later crop of big dry onions for winter storage, seed is the chief supply. The seed may be sown early in the hotbed, or house, to be transplanted for big onions of the Bermuda type in the open ground and thinned for the medium sized which are a favorite in the market.

The seed may be sown early, as soon as danger of freezes is over. The plants should be thinned from time to time so that they may maintain a steady growth if good dry onions are desired. Onion soil must be rich, moderately moist and in perfect tilth. The onion requires a large quantity of quickly available plant food for its success. Another prime requisite is the quality of seed sown.

SPINACH SECRETS

Within only a few years spinach has become an all season crop in the green grocers windows. Texas and the southern states keep a constant supply coming to the northern markets all winter and until the home supply is ready in early May. Spinach is a cool, moist weather crop and is one of the first vegetables that should be sown in the spring. Some gardeners even sow it in the fall and cover the beds with leaves or straw.

The increased popularity of spinach is due to the fact that its unusual food value as a source of vitamines and its value in the diet of babies are discoveries of comparatively recent years. It is now a staple

Spinach matures in from 45 to 50 days. When hot weathers sets in it rushes up to seed and the crop is finished. A near relative of the pigweed, it is very easily grown and a usable crop can be produced on almost any soil, but to be worth while the soil must be well enriched and capable of promoting fast, frank growth so that the big crinkled leaves will reward the gardener.

The development of spinach has been towards the introduction of types not so prone to run to seed as the old fashioned kinds. Triumph is one of the earlier of these and the fillbasket types have found favor. Denmark has furnished the finest of the heat-resistant spinaches in "antvorskow," sometimes called King or Denmark. This variety maintains its dwarf leafy growth in early summer heat when all others have spun up to seed and ended their days of usefulness.

In addition to being the last of the spinaches to remain good for use, it matures as early as any of them and is generally recommended by those who have tried it as the best allaround spinach for the average garden.

The New Zealand spinach is not really a spinach, but it furnishes a fine supply of greens during the hot summer days. It should not be sown until May as it is a hot weather plant and the plants should be given plenty of room as they sprawl over the ground. Rows three feet apart with the individual plants two feet apart will furnish "greens" from midsummer till killing frosts.

CLOVER AND ALFALFA SEED —A FINAL WARNING

A large number of Connecticut farmers have made the first step towards securing a crop of alfalfa or clover hay for 1926. Orders for high quality seed have been placed by a great many farmers in all parts of the state, many shipments have arrived. Those men will rest assured that they have removed doubt in the quality of their seeds. They are not wasting time or money on clover which needs a "Palm Beach" winter to continue living. A few others would buy seed of known origin well adapted to our winters, but it costs a little more and Italian seed looks just as good anyway. A still larger number of farmers thoroughly believe all they have heard the Agricultural college and County Agent say about good seed but have not yet placed their orders. The clovers should be sown in April yet the ordering is delayed.

Objections to the loud pleas for home grown northern clover seed are being invented daily. One objection should not be overlooked. Foreign seed has been cheaper than domestic. In fact, our own western farmers have been unable to get prices for their seed which will encourage production. Seed which does not suit our conditions is unfair competition. It is not the cost of a bushel of clover or alfalfa seed but the amount of clover hay that will be grown from that bushel that counts.

Claims are being made that foreign seed is being rejected because of low germination. This is not correct, foreign seed does germinate well but the plants do not survive our winters.

It is possible that seed with a guarantee covering origin and quality may be misrepresented. Of course, there can be no misrepresenting if nothing is claimed or guaranteed. All know a guarantee of a reliable firm is worth much. There are organizations handling seed with the sole object that of furnishing high quality seed and controlling that seed until it reaches the farm on which it is sown. This method of handling seeds is well known in this state through the use of certified seed potatoes. In a very similar manner large amounts of grain and grass seeds are handled in states such as Michigan and New York. In requiring a guarantee of origin, we are only adopting a practice thoroughly tried and proved elsewhere.

GREENS FOR ALL SUMMER

"Greens" form an important factor in the all-season diet and any small garden may produce a sufficient supply by planting spinach in the early spring and then following it with the main dependence, Swiss chard. The chard is a beet which does not form a big root, but gives a great quantity of leaves and is one of the finest materials for greens that can be grown. It grows as easily as the common beet, grown for its roots, and produces all [illegible] when young, the entire plant may be pulled to thin the row and [illegible] may be cut from the remaining plants and others will follow.

The chard is the main dependence for all season greens, but it may be enhanced with dandelions which are common enough, as a rule, without introducing them into the garden and form the earliest spring crop for greens. Mustard, sown for greens, does not receive the attention it deserves. It is a short season crop and small plantings should be made at intervals and as soon as large enough, as it soon runs to seed. Mustard is particularly valuable to add to beets and spinach for the pungency of its flavor, adding considerably to the tastiness of the dish. It is also excellent by itself.

In European countries, lettuce is boiled for greens, but it does not strike the American palate, as it is rather insipid and loses the crispness and flavor it possesses in a salad.

For late greens, all winter from the open ground, in fact, the kales make the year's cycle. The kale is a member of the cabbage family, but does not form a head. It makes a rosette of long curley leaves, frilled like those of parsely and will withstand the [illegible] weather and may be cut at any time during the winter months. It has a mild flavor somewhat suggestive of cabbage. It is grown in the same way as late cabbage, planting the seed in July and transplanting to 2 1-2 feet apart. Dwarf Curled and Excelsior Moss Curled are excellent varieties. A few plants of kale will give a supply of "greens" for the winter table which will be a welcome variety. It needs precisely the same soil and cultural requirements as late cabbage. Corn salad is also hardy and is much used in winter in place of lettuce.

Pests.

All near-sighted persons don't wear glasses. New York farmers have almost exterminated blacksnakes. Now they go to the Reptile association of the world, buying snakes at fancy prices, to check field mice and rats that are ruining crops. The snake has his right of place and function in nature. So have most of the other "pests" which men destroy without reason, to satisfy his repressed lust for killing. Scientists say that each toad is worth $19.44 to a farmer, by reason of the insects and worms that it consumes.

TWO MEN IN TRUCK UNHURT WHEN TRAIN HITS IT AT BISHOP'S CROSSING

Leonard Bogue and Frank Bruette of this city had the most exciting experience of their lives—and probably the most lucky—Thursday morning at Bishop's crossing, on the road between Jewett City and Plainfield, when the motor truck in which they were riding was hit by a passenger train and carried along for about 300 feet in front of the locomotive before the train came to a stop. The men were in the motor truck cab from beginning to end of the wild ride but came out of it unscratched, although the truck is nothing but a heap of junk.

Bogue, who is employed as a driver by C. D. Joslyn of this city, was driving one of Mr. Joslyn's motor trucks northward on the highway about 9.30 Thursday morning with the unloaded truck and was accompanied on the trip by Bruette. As they reached the crossing which is on a straight stretch of road with a good view of the railroad track in both directions, both men looked along the track, they told Mr. Joslyn, and neither saw nor heard any train. A westbound train caught the truck square on its right side just as it reached the tracks, turned the truck over on its side and carried it along in that position, bumping over the ties and rails, until the train came to a stop about 300 feet west of the crossing. The two men emerged from the cab unhurt, thanking the good luck that saved their lives.

The truck was practically torn apart by force of the collision and the way it was dragged and pushed along the railway roadbed in front of the engine.

APRIL THE TIME FOR WATER-GLASS EGGS

With egg prices at what may normally be considered as the low point for the year, April is the proper time to put down eggs in water-glass according to Roy E. Jones, poultry specialist for the extension service of the Connecticut Agricultural College. Cost of preserving eggs in this way is said to be slight and the quality of the water-glass eggs is claimed to be superior to that of cold storage eggs.

"Fifteen dozen eggs for each member of the family will provide one egg each day for the six highest-priced months of the year—from August 1 to March 1," according to Mr. Jones. "For best quality and greatest economy, eggs should be preserved early in the spring and used early in the fall.

"The eggs preserved in April are of better quality and keep better than the eggs preserved in May. While prices may show some slight variation, the average price in April is usually lower than the average price in May.

"Egg prices are usually sufficiently high by August 1, to warrant the use of water-glass eggs. From then on, the price gradually increases until the last of November or the first of December, when the turning point comes.

"Water-glass or sodium silicate is a liquid which makes an air-tight coating over the egg shells without affecting the quality of the egg. It can be purchased from almost any drug store with complete directions for using.

"Provide a container—either galvanized iron or earthenware, of a capacity of five gallons for each 15 dozen eggs to be preserved. Use only fresh eggs with clean, sound shells.

"The eggs for preserving must be of first quality—else you cannot hope to take out a satisfactory product. Many poultrymen make a practice during this period of the year of supplying at wholesale prices infertile eggs, carefully selected, for preserving."

HIGHWAY TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS COST $1,113,753 IN U. S.

Highway traffic accidents in 1923 cost the United States $1,113,753, it was estimated Thursday by William Phelps End of Washington, D. C., chairman of the Eno Foundation for Traffic Regulation. He addressed the Yale University—State of Connecticut conference on Motor Vehicle Traffic and Control and estimated that the past year avoidable mishaps caused 27,000 deaths, 675,000 injuries and 5,062,500 property damages.

He summarized as imperative need for immediate steps to be taken; uniformity in traffic regulations; more exacting examination form in granting licenses; courses in traffic training for officers and school children.

GOLF CLUB ANTICIPATING ACTIVE SEASON ON COURSE

The board of governors of the Norwich Golf club has announced that the golf couse will be opened for the season today (Friday). Green Keeper Skelly has been busy getting the course into shape during the past few weeks, and George Falconer, professional at the club closed his in-door golf school in the Disco building on Thursday to get ready for the opening of the season. The indoor school has been a success and new players have learned the game and club members kept in condition through the winter. It is expected that there will be a large influx of members into the club this year.

RESIGNS AS ATHLETIC HEAD AT LAFAYETTE

Harold Anson Bruce, who was the Norwich playgrounds supervisor last year, and has been for fifteen years head of the department of physical training at Lafayette college, and coach of track, has tendered his resignation to President MacCracken. Mr. Bruce has accepted an offer to become director of athletics at Union college, Schenectady, N. Y., with an increase of over one thousand dollars annually in salary. Coach Bruce will take up his new duties at Union about the first of September.

Mr. Bruce's decision to leave Lafayette came as a surprise to all connected with the college. Several weeks ago, Union college began negotiations with Coach Bruce in an endeavor to secure him to take the place of Lieutenant Olyphant, the present athletic director, who has resigned to enter business at the end of the current year.

The college paper spoke of the resignation of Mr. Bruce as follows:

"The resignation of Harold Anson Bruce as physical director and coach of track to become athletic director at Union college, Schenectady, N. Y., has come as a surprise to the undergraduates, faculty, alumni, and his many friends. For fifteen years Mr. Bruce has been a popular Lafayette figure, building up in that time records unequalled by any college of similar size in the country. His decision to leave Lafayette deals a severe blow to this college.

"Since 1909, when Mr. Bruce first came here, he has been a true "Lafayette man." He has always been one of the most ardent supporters of Maroon activities, yet his particular interest lay in the field and track teams. In this branch of sports, Coach Bruce's teams have enjoyed more consistent success than any other athletic teams representing the college.

"During his fifteen years here as coach, Mr. Bruce has become one of the most illustrious and widely known men connected with the college, and his achievements are of inestimable value to Lafayette. It is regrettable that this college cannot offer him the position and advance in salary that would offset the Union College inducements. The records that Harold Anson Bruce has brought to Lafayette are ones in which every undergraduate and alumnus can take lasting pride, and The Lafayette joins with the campus in deploring the conditions which have given rise to his decision to leave Lafayette. This paper congratulates Union college upon obtaining Mr. Bruce as athletic director, and it wishes the greatest success to Coach Bruce in his new post."

GEORGE A. HASKELL DIES— PROMINENT JEWETT CITY MAN

(Special to The Bulletin)

Jewett City, April 10.—George A. Haskell, 79, died at 7 o'clock this evening after an illness of eight weeks.

Mr. Haskell was the son of Walter B. and Meribah Burton Haskell. He was born in Lisbon, October 1, 1844. He attended the public schools of his town until he reached the age of 18, when he enlisted as a private in Co. F, 2nd Regiment, Connecticut Volunteers, Aug. 31, 1862. The term of his enlistment was for nine months, but his regiment was not discharged until August 17, 1863. He was present at the bombardment of Port Hudson; in the last engagement he was wounded by being shot in the leg. Upon his return home he engaged in farming, which occupation he followed both in Lisbon and Jewett City. For many years he conducted a market business in Jewett City, and years ago used to drive his meat wagon through Canterbury, Packerville and Lisbon, becoming widely known in those localities.

Fifty-four years ago he built the house where he died, and he has owned nearly all the property adjacent to his home on all sides, as well as in other parts of the town.

Mr. Haskell married Jane M. Wilcox August 13, 1867. He has always been prominent in republican politics and represented the town in the state legislature in 1889. He has served on the board of selectmen, town committee, board of assessors, as one of the borough burgesses, enumerator of school children and a member of the school board. He was treasurer of the committee that had charge of the erection of the soldiers' monument in David Hale Fanning park. It was entirely through his efforts that the Reed-Herskell cemetery in Lisbon has a fund for its care.

No more patriotic man ever lived in the town. For years, Mr. and Mrs. Haskell had charge of all the Memorial day arrangements for this town. Of his own accord Mr. Haskell later asked the local American Legion post to take over this work, and has assisted them in every way possible to enable them to become familiar with the routine.

After J. B. Palmer gave up the care of the Baptist cemetery, Mr. Haskell, without any remuneration, would each year, with the aid of a few others, make the cemetery presentable for Memorial day, until he was physically unable to perform the work. He has been one of seven since then to help pay for someone else to do the work.

He was a deacon of the Second Congregational church and a member of the board of trustees, a member of the Sunday school and was particularly interested in the Christian Endeavor society, of which he was an honorary member, and attended all its meetings.

Fraternally, he was a member of Mt. Vernon lodge, No. 75, F. and A. M., Faith Chapter, O. E. S., a charter member and past noble grand of Reliance lodge No. 29, I. O. O. F., and its financial secretary for about 25 years. He was a member of Ruthie Rebekah lodge, Ashland lodge, A. O. U. W., of Undaunted lodge No. 34, K. of P., and Sedgwick Post No. 1, G. A. R., of Norwich Mr. Haskell was also a member of the Army and Navy club.

He came of honored Colonial and Revolutionary ancestry, being a descendant of the Jewett family. A member of this family, Eleazur Jewett, founded Jewett City.

He is survived by his wife, a brother, Albert Haskell of Plainfield and two sisters, Mrs. Charles Larkham of Oxford and Mrs. Martha Jordan of Montville. Two nieces, Mrs. George Cooley of Enfield and Mrs. Grace Webster, of Jewett City, were members of Mr. Haskell's household from childhood.

Mr. Haskell was always very generous in his financial support of any worthy cause in the town. In his home he was hospitable and it was his delight to have his friends about him.

My Beauty

Came from clay—and clay has kept it

By Edna Wallace Hopper

Today you hear much about facial clays. I learned about them 20 years ago in France. Then they were crude and muddy, like most clays now. But they multiplied my beauty. And now that same clay, vastly perfected, keeps me a beauty at my grand old age.

Some of you have been amazed at what clay does for women. Even those old-type clays. No other aid to beauty ever did one-tenth so much.

But there is now a new-type clay, white, refined and dainty. French scientists, by 20 years of study, have multiplied its powers. Mark what that clay did for me. After 40 years in the limelight, I look like a girl of 19.

Now I am enabling all to get it, and I urge you to find it out.

The supreme help

Clay does more for women's beauty than all other aids bombined. It purges the skin of all that clogs it—the causes of sallowness, blackheads and blemishes.

It brings the blood to the skin to nourish and revive it. The result is that rosy afterglow which so amazes and delights. Many women, with one application, seem to drop ten years.

It firms the skin, combats all lines and wrinkles, reduces enlarged pores. My baby complexion, at the age of 62, shows what constant use will do.

No girl or woman who cares a whit for beauty can afford to omit clay. The users of clay stand out in every crowd.

A better clay

But there's a better clay that others offer now. It is a clay which France perfected for me. I call it my White Youth Clay.

If you have used another clay, this new clay will amaze you. If you have never used a clay, it will be a revelation.

Now this new clay is at your call. Out of gratitude for what it did for me, I am offering it to all.

Edna Wallace Hopper's White Youth Clay is supplied by all druggists and toilet counters. Price, 50c and $1 per tube. Also my Youth Cream, which should follow the clay. Also my Facial Youth—my famous liquid cleanser. Also my Hair Youth, which brought my luxuriant hair. My Beauty Book comes with each.

HUNG HIMSELF WITH PIECES OF SHEETING

Using pieces of sheeting Michael Dunn, 70, hung himself Thursday morning about 11 o'clock in his room at the almshouse on Asylum street. He had thrown the sheet over a transom and had not been there long when found and cut down: Dr. F. J. Harper was called but there was no chance for the man and he died soon after the doctor's arrival.

Mr. Dunn came to Norwich from New York about three months ago and his erratic actions have caused alarm to people in his neighborhood and arrangements were being made to take him to the Norwich State Hospital for treatment. Little is known of Mr. Dunn except what he had told about his life. He claimed to have visited every state in the country and was a veteran of the Boer war.

Medical Examiner Dr. C. C. Glidersleeve after investigating, gave permission to remove the body to the parlors of Hourigan Bros., finding that death was due to suicide by hanging.

It is thought that Mr. Dunn was born in Jersey City. He leaves two brothers, one in New York, the other in Minneapolis.

Over 450 fishermen have taken out their licenses from the office of Town Clerk C. S. Holbrook and it is expected that before the season is over the number will be increased to nearly 700. Most of the licenses were taken out before the first of the month, an indication that trout fishermen are many. The next big jump in figures will come about July 1st, the time the season opens for black bass.

Continuance in Automobile Case.

In the city court Thursday morning with Deputy Judge H. H. Pettis presiding, Nicholas Doyle, 34, of Montville, was presented on a charge of evading responsibility and reckless driving and his case was continued until Saturday. He was charged with evading responsibility after his machine had struck one owned by Herbert Sharkey at Norwich Town Wednesday.

It's easy to put the lid on, but when it comes to keeping it on—well, that's another story.

WHAT IS BEHIND THE OFFER for the Gas and Electrical Property of the City of Norwich?

ITS BONDS are largely owned by fourteen of the great insurance companies and as most of the people of Norwich are insured, they have an indirect interest in this company.

ITS STOCK is owned by 900 stockholders—638 of these are residents of Connecticut, and 78 of these are employees of this company or its subsidiaries.

ITS PROPERTY consists of a great steam power plant on tide water. This plant has been doubled in size and its primary capacity doubled within a year. It has another steam power, oil burning plant, at Mechanicsville, near Putnam.

ITS WATER POWER consists of two developments on the Quinebaug, and it uses the surplus water power of the Baltic Mills and of The Connecticut Company from its hydro-electric station near Danielson. It also utilizes the surplus power of the Uncas Power Company, which it controls.

ITS TRANSMISSION LINES connect all these generating plants and convey the power throughout the entire eastern end of the state, a total circuit mile distance of about one hundred and sixty-five miles.

ITS MOST VALUABLE ASSET is its organization of highly skilled operators in each department of the business.

THE OUTPUT OF THIS SUPER-POWER SYSTEM for 1923 was over 60 million K. W. H., while the average for the central stations of the United States was under 10 million.

THE SAVING IN FUEL over what would have been used in the ten abandoned small plants represents, for last year, ONE THOUSAND CAR LOADS OF FORTY TONS EACH.

THE ECONOMIC SAVING is the prime reason for the closing down of small inefficient stations and the growth of the great Super-Power generating and transmission systems of which so much is written.

SERVICE AND ECONOMY ARE THE REASONS FOR OUR GROWTH.

REPARATIONS COMMISSION UNANIMOUSLY ADOPTS REPORT OF EXPERTS COMMITTEE

The Commission Also Recommends That the Respective Governments Accept the Findings of the Experts—At the Headquarters of the German War Burdens Commission It Was Said There Was No Reason to Suppose That the Plan Would Encounter Opposition in Berlin—No Official Time Has Been Set For Germany to Reply, But the Reich Has Been Requested to Decide Within the Shortest Time Possible What Action It Will Take.

Paris, April 11.—(By The A. P.)—What appeared to be the dawn of a solution of the reparations problem broke over Paris today with the unanimous adoption by the reparation commission of the report of the experts' committee and a recommendation by the commission that the respective governments accept the findings of the experts. The recommendation was couched in such a manner that it seems practically impossible that the interested governments can evade the issue.

The action of the reparation commission in accepting the report of the experts and recommending approval of it was greeted everywhere with gratification. "The semi-official conference accomplished what all the supreme councils failed to do," was the verdict of one of the members of the reparation commission this evening. The prompt acceptance by the commission of the report of the experts was taken as evidence that the experts did not form such a "non-official" body as the various governments were at pains to make it appear to the public at large.

It now develops that M. Parmentier, the French representative on the Dawes' committee, was in constant touch with M. Barthou, president of the reparation commission, who in turn conferred with M. Poincare, the French premier, practically daily. Sir Robert Kindersley, and Sir J. C. Stamp, the British representatives on the Dawes' committee, were continually in communication with Premier Ramsay MacDonald, and M. Franqui, the Belgian member, with Premier Theunis.

The state department at Washington also was kept in close touch with the situation by Colonel James A. Logan, the American unofficial observer, who reported extensively to Secretary of States Hughes with regard to the progress of the negotiations. Members of the committee said today that any "American suggestions" emanating either from Brigadier General Charles G. Dawes or Owen D. Young always received sympathetic consideration from all the European experts.

Although no official time limit has been set for Germany to reply to the reparation commission's invitation to accept the experts' report, it is said the reich has been requested to decide within the shortest possible time what action it will take, it being the commission's purpose to ascertain Germany's decision before the German elections, which are to be held May 4. It is understood here that Premier Poincare also is desirous of having the question settled before May 11, the date for the French legislative elections. H. Poincare, it is asserted, is ambitious to go down in history as the man under whose tenure of office the reparation problems were settled.

Three weeks ago it was freely stated in German circles in Paris that the German government would accept the report of the experts made along the lines then known. Since that time the plan of the experts has been modified, favorably to the Germans, by the location of the seat of the new bank of issue in Berlin, instead of a neutral country.

At the headquarters of the German war burdens commission it was said today there was no reason to suppose the plan of the experts would encounter opposition in Berlin. The German government, it was added, might ask for some modifications, but in view of the unanimous action of the reparation commission in accepting the plan as a whole there was little likelihood of determined opposition.

Apparently the situation is now up to Germany. The reparation commission astonished everybody by its announcement that it had decided to accept the report and to recommend acceptance by the various governments interested. The announcement was a surprise to the members of the reparation commission themselves, who had counted only on an informal exchange of views today, leaving until next week the matter of giving the report serious consideration.

The commission, when it met this afternoon after the members had individually studied the report, found that that the members were so completely in accord on the question of acceptance that it decided to act immediately so as to expedite action by Germany. The meeting of the commission followed an interview between M. Barthou and Premier Poincare, and the deduction is that M. Poincare was quite ready to accept the conclusions of the experts' report. Immediately after making its decision, the reparation commission notified the German war burdens commission in order to give ample notice to the Germans of the hearing on the situation which is to take place April 17.

The question of the indivisibility of the plan recommended by the experts, was discussed by the commission, but the members declined to express themselve with regard to it. It is known, however, that Sir John Bradbury, the British member, was decidedly in favor of considering the plan as a whole. The French, it was said, also decided to accept the plan without reservation and join the other allies in putting the matter up to the German government in a way that would leave no doubt as to just what the allies now want.

"The allies once again are united" was the comment of one of the leading members of the commission after the meeting. "Germany no longer can count on a division among them."

The same note was sounded in French official circles, where it was said:

"We now shall see whether Germany is sincere in her pretentions. The decision of the reparation commission puts her to the test. If she refuses to accept the experts' plan, or endeavors to qualify it in a way to leave her a method for escape from its requirements later on, we can be sure that she means never to pay."

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

To Dissolve French Parliament

Tirpitz for Seat in Reichstag

RORABACK RE-ELECTED TO REP. NATIONAL COMMITTEE

Hartford, April 11.—J. Henry Roraback, was unanimously re-elected to the republican national committee at a meeting of the Connecticut delegation to the republican national convention which was held today at the Hotel Bond. It will be his second term.

Mrs. Samuel O. Prentice, of this city, who is associated with Mr. Roraback on the national committee, representing Connecticut, was appointed by Mr. Rorabock several months ago in accordance with a request of Chairman John T. Adams that a member in each state designate a woman to attend the committee meeting. It is understood that the national convention will be asked to amend the party rules to provide, specifically, for a woman as well as a male member of the committee from each state, and also to authorize the delegation to the national convention from each state to elect the woman member.

Senate John H. Trumbull of Plainville, delegate from the first Congressional district (Hartford county) was elected secretary of the state delegation, and William H. Putnam, of this city, alternate delegate at large, was elected treasurer. Each of the thirty-four members of the delegation was authorized to invite one guest to the convention and an assessment of $260, for each person making the trip was levied, to cover expenses.

Lieutenant Governor Bingham was elected to represent Connecticut on the resolutions committee, former Speaker James F. Walsh, on the rules committee; Miss Katherine Byrne of Putnam, on the permanent organization committee, and Colonel Francis T. Maxwell, of Rockville, on the credentials committee.

No choice was made for the convention committee to notify the persons nominated for president and vice-president. The Connecticut members of these committees will be named, at Cleveland. Headquarters for the state delegation, in which meeting in Cleveland are to be held, have been reserved on the mezzanine floor of the Hollenden hotel.

Mr. Roraback was elected chairman of the state delegation. He and Secretary Trumbull, and Omar W. Platt, of Milford, Mrs. Helen E. Davis, of Stratford and George C. Clark, of Plymouth, the last three of whom were appointed by the chairman, were selected as a transportation committee, with authority to engage a special train, if deemed advisable, and to provide suitable badges to the delegates.

Chairman Willard of New Haven, assistant secretary of the republican state central committee, was elected sergeant-at-arms, a capacity in which he served at the Chicago convention four years ago. The transportation committee was authorized to appoint an assistant sergeant-at-arms.

Chairman Roraback announced that reservations for the Connecticut party had been made by him at the Fenway Hall hotel and the Wade Park apartments, both of which are within fifteen minutes ride by taxi from the convention hall. Each delegate will be furnished with a book of taxi tickets for use in passing from his headquarters to the convention.

Only three of the 34 members of the delegation—17 delegations and a like number of alternates—were absent from the organization meeting. They were Mrs. Prentice, who is recovering from an operation in New York, Omar W. Platt and State Central Committeeman Charles E. Williamson, of Darien.

After the meeting, the delegation members were guests of Mr. Roraback at lunch.

WAGE INCREASES FOR TRAINMEN AND YARDMEN

New York, April 11.—The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company announced today that its conductors, trainmen and yardmen had been granted the following wage increases: Passenger service, three and three-quarters cents an hour; yard service, four cents an hour; freight service, four and one-half cents an hour.

The increases, it was said, were agreed upon at conferences between officials of the road and President L. E. Shepard of the Order of Railway Conductors, Vice President William M. Doak, of the Brotherhood of Railwaymen, and committees of local employes.

"It is estimated," said the company's statement, "that the increases will cost approximately $450,000 a year for these classes of employes."

The agreement provides for the modification of several technical rules concerning hours the men shall report for duty and the mileage on which crew payments are to be based, the statement said."

ALLEGED COUNTERFEITERS HAVE BEEN INDICTED

New York, April 11.—Federal grand jurors in Brooklyn today indicted for conspiracy in manufacturing spurious $20 federal reserve notes, 11 men who, with two women, were captured last night in raids on alleged bad-money plants in this city, New Britain, Conn., and Bayport, L. I.

Five of the men, who government agents alleged were leaders in a conspiracy to broadcast the counterfeit notes throughout the nation, were held in $25,000 bail each. Bail for the other six was fixed at $10,000 each.

The wives of two of the prisoners were ordered released when prosecuting attorneys declared them innocent of participation in the conspiracy or the manufacture of money.

Investigation of Wheeler Indictment

Senate Committee Has Issued Subpoenaes For Six Witnesses — No Presidential Recommendation.

Washington, April 11.—Subpoenas for six witnesses were issued today by the senate committee charged with the investigation of the indictment of Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, prosecutor in the Daugherty inquiry committee.

Among them are Gorson Campbell, geologist, of Great Falls, Mont.; James Baldwin, of Butte, Mont., law partner of Senator Wheeler; Representative Thomas Stout, of Lewistown; C. L. Stevens, and L. B. Beaulieu, both of Great Falls, Mont., and Blair Cohan.

Chairman Borah said these witnesses would be examined after the committee had received from Federal Judge Pray, of Montana, information in the Wheeler case and the list of witnesses filed by the district attorney.

Blair Cohan was subpoenaed as an agent of the department of justice, but W. J. Burns, director of the bureau of investigation of the justice department, testified yesterday that Cohan was not employed by that bureau, but was an agent of the republican national committee.

Besides the witnesses subpoenaed today, the committee will hear present and former officials of the interior department as to whether Senator Wheeler did appear before the department in the interest of claims of oil lands filed by Gordon Campbell.

President Coolidge let it be known today that he had issued no instructions and would issue none to the department of justice with reference to the indictment of Senator Wheeler. If any action was taken by the department, it was made clear, it would be by direction of Attorney General Stone.

BLAIR UNWITTINGLY DUG HIS OWN GRAVE

Killingworth, Conn., April 11.—Chrles F. Blair, farmer and raiser of poultry on his farm in a remote section of this town, whose body was found today in a hole where Mrs. Johanna Tell, his housekeeper, had said she had buried it, unconsciously dug his own grave. In the hole sixty feet from the house, under an apple tree, made by Blair to bury night soil the body was unearthed by two state officers who had dug there as one of the ways taken to check up statements made by Mrs. Tell to the police in the Bronx, New York city, yesterday in a voluntary confession of having committed the homicide. The body was lying face downward on the head was a stone which in weight was about all one man could lift. Over the body had been shoveled night soil, fertilizer, tin cans and other rubbish and the surface was smoothed off with earth, and brush scattered over it. Blair's body, removed from the hole and examined by Dr. David A. Fox, health officer of this town and Clinton, acting for Coroner Lowndes A. Smith, of Middletown, was found to have a .45 calibre bullet hole in the temple and four gashes across the throat made apparently by an axe. Mrs. Tell, in her confession, had said she shot Blair and had afterwards hacked at him with an axe to make sure that he was dead. There was a bad wound on the torso which also may have been inflicted with the axe. Two places on the head showed where the skull had been crushed probably by blows from the axe butt.

BOBBED HAIR BLONDE BANDIT IN BALTIMORE

Baltimore, Md, April 11.—A bobbed-haired blonde, pretty and stylishly gowned, late today held up the cashier of a confectionery and lunch room in the shopping district, at the point of a pistol and escaped with $350.

About 30 patrons, mostly women, looked on panic stricken, while the girl gathered up the role of money and passed it quickly to a dapperly dressed man who stood near the front door.

The pair then locked the door and jumping into a small motor car, disappeared up Howard street.

M'CRAY JURY DISCHARGED AFTER DISAGREEMENT

Indianapolis, April 11.—The jury in the trial of Governor Warren, T. McCray, charged with larceny and embezzlement of state funds disagreed and were discharged at 5:40 p. m. this afternoon.

When called into court by Judge Harry O. Chamberlin the jury reported that it was unable to reach a verdict. The court then polled the members of the jury and each replied there was no chance of reaching a verdict. The jury was discharged.

Law Enforcement Political Planks

Such Recommendation Passed by the Women's National Committee For Law Enforcement.

Washington, April 11.—Adoption of a platform urging political parties to adopt a "strong plank for law enforcement," in their national platforms and the imposition of stricter penalties for law breakers marked the concluding sessions here today of the women's national committee for law enforcement.

The platform also favored the transfer of prohibition enforcement personnel to the classified civil service and "drastic steps" to shut off the supply of liquor obtained through the "misuse of permits issued by the federal government."

Election of officers, which followed an extensive program of addresses by women leaders in the committee's law enforcement movement, resulted in the renaming of Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, of Boston, Mass., as chairman.

Speakers during the day included Mrs. Rudolph Blankenburg, of Philadelphia, who declared the women of her city, "stood behind our mayor, our director of public safety and our governor," in the fight against liquor; Mrs. Peabody, who appealed for a return to "old fashioned religion;" and Mrs. C. O. Williams, of the National Education Association, who made a strong plea for raising the standard of teachers in the country.

In a forum discussion of law observance in its relation to the home, school, church and community, Grace Abbott, chief of the federal children's bureau, delivered an address on the first subject.

DENEEN-M'CORMICK VOTE IN ILLINOIS IS CLOSE

Chicago, April 11.—Unofficial complete returns from all but 19 precincts in the state tonight indicated the nomination of former Governor Charles S. Deneen, over Medill McCormick incumbent, in the republican race for United States senator, by a piurality of 4,016 votes.

The vote for 5,725 of the state's 5,744 precincts is:

Deneen 355,399 McCormick 351,383.

Thirteen of the missing precincts are in Cook County and the other six in Adams County. The ballot box in one of the missing Chicago precincts was stolen and there will be no report on that.

The unoffical returns from 100 of the state's 102 counties were checked and re-checked by the associated press before its primary election machinery was dismantled today. When the recheck was started last night, former Governor Deneen had an advantage of 4,040 votes and when it was completed tonight, and additional reporting precincts had been tabulated, there was a ifference of only 24 votes over last night's figures.

A recapitulation of police returns at Chicago was started today in a hunt for errors and the official count will get under way next week.

McCormick supporters were reported to be asking for a judicial recount as soon as the formal canvass is completed.

Attorney General Williams declared that the embargo would not affect shipments now en route to the state but no further billings to Colorado would be permitted during the epidemic in California.

PRESIDENT REBUKES SENATE FOR INQUISITORIAL METHODS

In a Special Message the Chief Executive Admonishes the Senate to Confine Its Committees Within "Constitutional and Legal Rights"—Challenged the Legal Authority of Senator Couzens Employing Francis J. Heney, and Paying Costs of Heney's Employment, as Counsel to Conduct Investigation of Bureau of Internal Revenue—Declared the "Attack Being Made on the Treasury Department" Has Gone Beyond the Limits of "Legitimate Requirements"—Democratic Senators Aroused by President's Rebuke.

Washington, April 11. — President Coldge and senate democrats verged today towards an open breach over future conduct of senate committee investigations.

In a special message the president admonished the senate to confine its committees within "constitutional and legal rights." Returns to a government under and in accordance with the usual forms of the law of the land was required, the president said, by "the state of the union."

The message evoked a storm of democratic protests. Senator Walsh, of Montana, prosecutor for the Teapot Dome oil investigation, declared the message was a "rebuke" to all senate investigating committees.

"The president wants us to stop these investigations and he ought to say so," the Montana senator said. "Of course he isn't asking any thing of that kind but the message unquestionably was written to formulate public opinion which would have that effect."

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic leader, Senator Jones of New Mexico and others from the democratic side joined in the attack which held the senate far beyond its usual closing hour. It went unanswered from the republican side.

The specific investigation at which the presidential message was aimed was that investigating the bureau of internal revenue. The president challenged under cited statutes the legal authority of the committee to employ Francis J. Heney of California as counsel, with Senator Couzens, republican, Michigan, instigator of the investigation, paying the costs of Heney's employment.

Senator Walsh dismissed this as a "trifling matter, exceedingly trifling." Senator Jones who is a member of the investigating committee, introduced a resolution authorizing the committee to employ counsel, paying expenses out of the senate contingent funds. The resolution, designed as a flank move against the pending effort of Chairman Watson, republican, Indiana, of the investigating committee, to discharge the committee from all the labors joined the Watson resolution on the table.

Both Senators Robinson and Walsh aimed their fire at the more general statements of the message. The president transmitted with the message a letter from Secretary Mellon of the treasury which prompted his intervention, also a copy of the committee resolution authorizing employment of Heney. With reference to these, the message characterized the "attack being made on the treasury department," as gong beyond the limits of "legitimate requirements." Constitutional rights of the senate executive departments should be maintained, the president said, adding:

"But these rights ought not to be used as a subterfuge to cover unwarranted intrusion. It is the duty of the executive to resist such intrusion and to bring to the attention of the senate its serious consequences. That I shall do in this instance."

Senator Jones and Senator Walsh denied that there had been any "intrusion" or attempt at intrusion into the departments by any of the senate investigating committees. Senator Walsh declared that the president had himself accepted the evidence of the oil committee and was prosecuting through special counsel the "larcenies" uncovered by the committee. He demanded that "some one who can speak for him, tell us what the president wants us to do, or to omit to do."

The message referred supecifically to a request made by Senator Couzens last Wednesday in the revenue bureau investigating committee on bureau officials who were present for a list of companies in which Mr. Mellon was interested, other than those corporations on which secrecy of tax returns had been waived by the companies and the tax records presented for committee examination.

"Seemingly the request for a list of the companies in which the secretary of the treasury was alleged to be interested for the purpose of investigating their tax returns must have been dictated by some other motive than a desire to secure information for the purpose of legislation," the message said.

Secretary Mellon's letter declared that "it is now obvious that his (Senator Couzens) sole purpose is to vent some grevience against me."

Senator Couzens was not in the senate to answer these statements. He is confined to his bed with an attack of indigestion described as serious but not dangerous. It had been agred on the republican side that action on the Watson resolution to discharge the committee would be taken until Senator Couzens could be present. Senator Jones made a similar announcement in connection with his resolution to authorize employment of counsel by the committee at senate expense. The New Mexico senator did not ask for its consideration.

"Manifestly," he said, "the secretary of the treasury has felt that because of his differences with the senator from Michigan that he is prejudiced by the selection of an adviser (Heney) by Mr. Couzens. Let me ask what there is to fear in the further proceedings of this committee?"

Senator Robinson said that he would do of any nothing to widen the "breach" between the senate and the White House. Turning to the Mellon letter to President Coolidge he read this extract:

"When, through unnecessary interference, the proper exercise of this duty (that of efficient conduct of his office) is rendered impossible, I must advise you that neither I nor any other man of character can longer take responsibility for the treasury."

This was "by implication" a statement to the president that "if the investigation doesn't ston he will resign" Senator Robinson declared. It was "under fear of losing his secretary of the treasury," he aded, that the president had sent his "extraordinary message to the senate."

At the White House an authorized spokesman previously had said the president did not put such an interpretation upon Mr. Mellon's words. The sole purpose of Mr. Mellon as disclosed in several conferences with the president before the message was sent to the senate, it was added, was to serve notice that he would not be charged with responsibility for the treasury, "if some one else is going to run that department."

ORGANIZER OF ONE BIG UNION FOUND GUILTY

Dover, N. H., April 11.—Bert Emsley, of Lawrence, Mass., an organizer of the one big union, and Fred E. Beal, of Lawrence, arrested with him during strike disorders here Wednesday night, were found guilty in district court today on charges arising from the demonstration. Sentence was suspended.

Emsley was arrested with Beal and James Hughes and Charles Pasas of Dover, while they were picketing the home of H. A. Newton, agent of the Pacific Mills. The mills have been closed since last November when the workers declared a strike in protest against a rearrangement of work or scheduled announced by the management. He was charged with interfering with an employe of the mills engaged in his lawful occupation and with "noise, brawl and tumult." Beal was charged with the latter offense while Hughes and Pasas were charged with obstructing the sidewalk when ordered by the police to move on.

The one big union organizer was found guilty of both charges. At the request of County Solicitor Frank C. Keefe the court sentenced him to 90 days in the house of correction and to pay the costs of the prosecution and later suspended sentence. At the instance of the county solicitor the case of Beal was continued for sentence.

The prosecution moved also for dismissal of the charges against Hughes and Pasas.

The court admonished the defendants to refrain from picketing the homes of citizens and from creating disturbances. The city was quiet tonight and police reserves from Nashua and Haverhill, Mass., which came to reinforce the Dover force early yesterday, were dismissed.

STATEMENT BY PRESIDENT OF POSTOFFICE CLERKS

Washington, April 11—Postmaster General New's proposed substitute for the Kelly-Edge bill to increase wages of postal employes was assailed in a statement tonight by Thomas F. Flaherty of the national federation of postoffice clerks.

Mr. Flaherty declared the plan proposed by Mr. New contained "obvious discriminations" as between classes of postal employes and asserted that "postal workers are entitled to adequate wages regardless of the postal revenues."

"The proper procedure," he said "assuming that the party in political control wants a self sustaining service is to first fix postage rates."

The increase in parcelpost rates proposed by Mr. New in connection with his plan for postal salary increases was attacked in a statement issued at the same time by Gray Silver Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau federation.

"The proposal to make the farmers pay 300 per cent. more in parcelpost rates," he said "and to take this money for the purpose of increasing salaries of postal employes will ruin the postal service and exact an unjust and uneconomical toll from the farmers which they will bitterly resent.

MAN KILLED WHEN PIECE OF A CORNICE FELL

Dowd, of Springfield, Mass., probably fatally injured today when they were struck by a piece of cornice that fell from a new building being erected for the Bigelow-Hartford Carpet company here. ## TO PROPOSE CASH PAYMENT OPTION IN SOLDIER BONUS BILL

Washington, April 11.—Incorporation in the soldier bonus bill of an option for full cash payments to veterans on the basis of $1 for each day of service above 60 days will be proposed by Senator Simmons of North Carolina, ranking democrat of the senate finance committee.

The bill will be taken up again tomorrow by the committee and republicans, who have agreed generally on the terms of the house insurance bill, predict that measure will be ordered reported to the senate.

The house measure would allow competition of adjusted service credits on the basis of $1 for each day of home service and $1.25 for each day of overseas service, above the first sixty days. Cash payments would be made, only, to those veterans not entitled to more than $50, others being given 20 year endowment life insurance policies.

Senator Copeland, democrat, New York, has introduced a bonus bill along the lines that Senator Simmons will propose, except that it carries no insurance option. Using the dollar a day basis of credit, the Copeland bill would authorize a government bond issue of $1,500,000,000 to run for a period of 60 years, which amount, it was estimated, would cover the entire cost.

PLANNING CREDIT FOR NEW GERMAN GOLD BANK

New York, April 11.—Plans for the establishment of an American banking credit of between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000 for the new German Gold and Discount bank formed by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht were announced today through the International Acceptance Bank, acting for a syndicate of New York bankers. While negotiations have not been finally closed, it was said the the credit would be advanced to provide an outlet for German dollar trade bills.

Marking the first definite action by American bankers to assist in the economic rehabilitation of Germany, the credit, combined with advances from English sources, will enable the Schacht bank to stabilize the country's currency until it is finally merged with the Gold bank, provided under the Dawes plan, which will be the backbone of the future German currency system.

Flotation of the $200,000,000 international loan to Germany, international bankers indicated, may be deferred until fall, but meanwhile funds will be supplied to the rediscount bank to assure continuous operation of Germany's financial machinery. Initial functions of the bank, which is said to have been organized with the sanction of the experts and the cooperation of the Bank of England, will be to buy German trade bills issued in sterling or in dollars. British banks are understood to be arranging a rediscount credit for the sterling bills.

HUGHES' JAPANESE NOTE CRITICISED BY SHORTRIDGE

Washington, April 11.—The Japanese note on immigration, forwarded to the senate today by Secretary Hughes was characterized by Senator Shortridge, republican, California, in a senate speech as a "spurious verbose communication, unfounded in fact."

"The gentlemen's agreement may have worked successfully from the Japanese viewpoint," Senator Shortridge said, "but it has not been successful to California or the United States."

He promised later to give the senate facts to prove the conclusions set forth in the note erroneous.

NORWICH BULLETIN

Thursday, Clara, the nine year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ihuell Porter of Hebron, had a slight disagreement with her younger sister before breakfast time and she started off to school in the Jagger district without having eaten any breakfast. As soon as she got out of sight she took to the fields and after some time came out at Andover, where she continued walking along the state highway. Quite late in the afternoon the child arrived in Manchester and there she accosted a woman and complained of being tired and hungry. It happened that the woman was a welfare worker and she took a keen interest in the case. The girl was given food and she answered questions in regard to her home and the name of her parents. She also said that she had a sister who was a nurse in a Hartford hospital. The little girl was then sent on to this sister and she was taken home later in the evening. The child did not appear any the worse for her twenty mile hike. It was rumored that a certain man in Andover was suspected of having kidnapped the girl and that a warrant had been made out for his arrest but this report was denied at the Porter home and by neighbors, Friday morning.

The first baseball practice for the American Thread Athletic association team will be held this (Saturday) afternoon at Recreation Park. A number of the teams which are entered in the league will open their season this coming week-end and the fact has prompted the local pilot to have a definite lineup selected. The usual procedure follows such a request and in connection with an incoming postmaster is an inspection by post office inspectors. Postmaster O'Rourke received a letter Friday morning from the department that Inspector Mahan would probably possibly finish their inspection of the New London office so as to get to Willimantic today (Saturday) to carry out that work here. The new postmaster, Mr. King, has concluded his duties with the treasurer's office in the state capitol, Hartford.

The Brass city man was always figured up five or three balls ahead. Louis N. Dondero of this city was induced to engage in a contest with Stone while awaiting the arrival of Police. EMPIRE Milking Machines

WHICH—3 MILKERS—OR ONE?

Empire Does 3 Men's Work

Here's a letter from James Riley, R. D. No. 1, Harrison Valley, Pa. Read what he says:

"With the Empire Milker I can milk 22 cows in 1 hour and 20 minutes, where it took myself, my wife and a hired man 1 hour and 30 minutes. I can do the work of three people.

Let this fact stick in. The Empire sucks the teat just like the calf sucks it. It's nature's way. The cow like sit. She stands quieter. She makes more milk. She gives milk more days. The Empire gives a perfect three-sided massage of the teat from ti to udder after each suck. No other milker does that. It is patented Empire feature. That's why men want the Empire, use the Empire, make extra profits with the Empire. No matter what man say about other milkers they have only good words for the Empire.

URGES RADICAL HIGHWAY CHANGES FOR SAFETY

Radical improvements in highway construction to prevent automobile accidents were urged Thursday by Frederick Stuart Greene, superintendent of Public Works of the state of New York. Speaking at the morning session of the conference to regulate and control motor vehicle traffic held at New Haven by Yale University and the state of Connecticut, under the patronage of the Hartley Foundation of New York City, he said that 5 per cent of the accidents are due to faulty highway conditions. He suggested as need for immediate improvement:

1. The gradual elimination of grade crossings.

2. Uniform and judiciously placed danger signs and the removal of unnecessary and confusing signs.

3. Scientifically banked, widened, curved, graded, crowned and fenced highways with non skid surfaces.

Mr. Greene said: If there existed a record of the causes of all highway accidents, it would probably show that 90 per cent of our road wrecks are due to careless driving, 5 per cent to mechanical defects in the car and but 5 per cent to improper construction of the highway.

In designing roads, however, to prevent this last 5 per cent of accidents, the engineers will automatically eliminate a considerable portion of the 90 per cent chargeable to recklessness, for though the driving on a road designed for maximum safety may still be reckless, the safety features provided will frequently prevent wrecks.

Main Causes of Accidents

The outstanding causes for highway accidents are, first: Grade crossings of railroads and trolleys; second, the fact that a majority of our roads (all roads ten years and more old) were built to accommodate a traffic speed of from 5 to 6 miles an hour whereas, the motor car seldom travels at less than 30 miles an hour.

There is but one 100 per cent remedy for the grade crossing evil; A well designed elimination, either an overhead or an under crossing. But such eliminations are expensive and none of our states can afford to abolish all grade crossings in less than a 15 to 25 year period. Even had we had the money, the contracting ability of the country could not accomplish the task in less than 10 years. Until grade crossings are eliminated, we are forced to resort to some kind of safety device, which the laws of most states require the railroads, not their Highway Department, to install and maintain. Except for warning signs placed at the side of the road some distance from the crossing, the highway engineer until recently has done nothing.

Danger Signs

Another, cause for accidents is the frequency of unnecessary signs erected either by ambitious Motor Clubs or by the too-enterprising advertiser. A danger sign should be placed only at points where there is real necessity for caution, signs placed elsewhere produce the same effect as the oft-repeated cry of "Wolf! Wolf!" At right-angle turns and at approaches to narrow bridges, New York erects a special sign. This is a large board 11 feet 2 inches long by 7 feet 2 inches high, with a checkered black and white border and the word STOP painted in large letters.

Recently New York has awarded a contract for cast-iron warning signs and posts and it is hoped to erect these on all our highways as quickly as funds and other conditions permit.

Designing for Safety.

In designing a road the line of sight, width of pavement, height of crown, percentage of grade and surface of pavement are five features all vital to safety and so closely dependent one upon the other that it is hard to establish their relative importance. I believe that the standards established by the Federal Government for curves—which in any but an open country gives the line of sight—are rational and safe. At any point, except on village streets or around abrupt precipices, no curve should have a radius of less than 500 feet. The minimum vertical curve should have a radius of 200 feet on moderate grades, while a vertical curve at the apex of two 7 per cent grades should not be less than 500 feet. In New York we strive to have not less than 300 feet of unobstructed view at all horizontal curves.

Banking and Widening Curves

The radius, however, is not the only factor to be studied carefully, when laying out a curve. In spite of the assertion that banking and widening at curves encourage speeding, I consider that it would be as shortsighted not to bank curves on a modern highway as it would be to attempt level tracks on a railway curve. We must now build for a speed of thirty miles an hour or we are behind the times.

Crown

One of the most frequent causes for wrecks on New York roads is the height of the crown, especially on old waterbound roads which have been given a bituminous surface. These pavements were frequently designed with a crown 1" to the foot and as they were seldom built more than 16 feet wide, it meant that the center of this narrow roadway was 2 inches higher than the edge. It also meant that if a car, traveling at from 30 to 35 miles an hour, were suddenly forced to swings from the center to the side of the pavement, it was more than an even chance that it would be overturned.

Grades

Owing to the ability of an automobile to negotiate steeper grades than an engine running on steel rails, the question of proper grades for a highway is in no wise similar to the same question when applied to railways. The problems are so radically different that before the old railroad engineers can qualify for highway work, he must throw overboard some of the theories he has perhaps cherished for years. In my opinion it is uneconomical to establish 7 per cent as the maximum grade for a highway. This limitation may be wise for some of our middle west and southern states, where a hill is a curiosity and where the right of way is not expensive, but in states where rolling country is the rule, and in thickly settled states, it is frequently good engineering and good financing to go as high as 13 per cent to get over a short hill.

Width of Pavement

No state highway should be built with a pavement less than 18 feet in width. Eight feet may be taken as the minimum width to carry one-way traffic, but for a speed of 30 miles an hour, a 16 foot, two-way pavement is neither comfortable, economical nor safe. Eighteen feet is needed for the sway of two fast moving cars when passing, anything less forces the outer wheels from the pavement, causing heavy shoulder maintenance or is apt to result in a side swipe. A 20 foot pavement is better and safer than one 18 feet, but for economy's sake, we build this width only in our more thickly populated countries. The question of building special highways for truck traffic is now frequently raised. I believe motor truck roads will come eventually, but that the necessity for them has not yet arrived.

Guard Rail

The old-fashioned guard fence with its wooden posts and rails is not only an extravagant one to maintain but it is far less effective in preventing serious accidents than are posts and cables. The wooden fence not only fails to stop a fast moving car from going down an embankment, but there are records of accidents where the splintered rail has pierced the floor of the car and injured the occupants more than the incline might have done. The post with cables act as a net which catches and resists the momentum of the car with some degree of flexibility.

Non-Skid Surfaces

As rubber tires will slip on a wet, smooth road, no highway can be considered safe unless the surface of the pavement tends at least to retard skidding. There are but few brick or granite block pavements being built today, nothing short of retreated application of sand will safeguard a bituminous pavement, but there is no good reason why a concrete pavement should not be laid with a non-skid surface. It is simply a matter of drawing a broom across the surface before the concrete has set. To my mind, so far from being a detriment to the concrete, brooming is an advantage as it breaks up the laitance and tends to prevent surface scaling of the pavement. It is a matter of regret to me that every state does not have a brooming requirement in its highway specifications.

Only the man who knows that he is in the wrong can afford to lose his temper.

Broadway Theatre

The true right of motherhood shines always in the eyes of Jane Novak. Slender, blonde, and with the utmost appeal in her deep blue eyes, she is perhaps the foremost interpreter of this type of role on the screen. In The Lullaby she has every opportunity to give full play to her talents along these lines.

A splendid cast was assembled by Producer Chester Bennett to support Miss Novak. Among those who will appear in "The Lullaby" are Robert Anderson, happily remembered for his brilliant work in "Hearts of the World"; Fred Malatesta, Dorothy Marion Brock, Cleon Madison, Otis Harlan and Lydia Yeaman Titus, long known on the stage and screen.

The regular short subjects will also be shown.

At Broadway

It makes no difference what its length may be, or how big the cast, or how thrilling the spectacle scenes, it is a love story, sweet and compelling, with its tragic, bitter elements—realities of an unpleasant world—but with the whole drama softened as by the magic touch of some divine understanding of human love.

Mary Philbin, prophesied as one of the biggest feminine possibilities of the film future, is the girl. Norman Kerry is the man, and the balance of the cast includes George Hackathorne, Cesare Gravina, Edith Yorke, Lillian Sylvester, Anton Vaverka, Al Edmundson, Dorothy Wallace, Spottiswood Aitken, Sidney Bracy, George Seigmann, Dale Fuller and other most capable artists.

PALACE THEATRE

Palace theatre last times today special vaudeville and picture program five of the best vaudeville acts shown here in some time. Jim and Irene Marlyne the last word in uptodate revues, marvelous dancers and exceptional musicians. Lucky and Harrid in their comedy sketch All in Fun. The master musician El. Cota, the world's greatest and most original musician. Knowles and Hurst, the funny pair and direct from France Les Perettos, parisian entertainers. This is a big time vaudeville bill. Starting tomorrow night, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday matinee daily greatest of all films.

For the first time in motion picture history, a government has officially assisted in the making of a photodrama. More than that, its ruler, a king, and the premier are seen in the finished production.

The photoplay is The Eternal City, a First National feature produced by George Fitzmaurice from the noted story by Sir Hall Caine.

In order to insure accuracy in atmosphere and backgrounds, Mr. Fitzmaurice, following the acquisition of the film rights to the novel, one of the cinematic prizes of a decade, determined to produce it in the locale of the tale. But he wanted particularly to be able to use the historic ruins for which Rome is famous, such as the Coliseum and the Roman Baths, for settings.

A less courageous man would have hesitated to seek such a privilege. But Mr. Fitzmaurice boldly approached Premier Mussolini, who was elevated to the prime-ministership by the triumph of the Fascisti, and laid before him the proposition. It took some effort to induce the premier to acquiesce, for the request had the appearance of sacrilege, but when he became convinced that it would be to Italy's advantage to broadcast on the screen "shots" of its beauty spots, he agreed. He even went further than Mr. Fitzmaurice had anticipated—he issued orders to the army and civilian authorities to assist in every way in the production of the picture of which Barbara La Marr, Lionel Barrymore, Bert Lytell, Richard Bennett and Montagu Love are the principals.

Notice starting with the engagement of the Eternal City a change in prices will take effect, evenings 25 cents and matinees 20 cent including taxes. The pictures shown at the Palace theatre are none other than first run and the best that can be had for the public. See The Eternal City and judge for yourself. Matinee at 2:15—evenings continuous, showing 7 to 10:45.

BREED THEATRE

Considered from every viewpoint, few motion pictures have been adapted from the stage with more effective results than Hoodman Blind, the William Fox production which closes tonight at the Breed theatre. The original play, by Henry Arthur Jones and Wilson Barrett, is even more elaborate as a picture.

Director John Ford has created the atmosphere to perfection. Gladys Hulette, David Butler and Frank Campeau have the leading roles and they have capable support by an excellent cast.

The Way of a Man, the Pathe News and a Sunshine comedy make up the remainder of the bill today. Continuous show today from 1.30 to 10.15.

For its feature attraction Sunday, Monday and Tuesday the Breed will present The Shooting of Dan McGrew. This is picturized by Winifred Dunn from Robert W. Service's The Spell of the Yukon. It's the story of a man who was crooked as lightning, but straight as an arrow with a gun: of his light-o-love, the lady that's known as Lou: and of her husband, a magician who played Dan McGrew's "swan song" with a six shooter. Barbara LaMarr, Lew Cody and Mae Marsh are seen in the leading roles while the supporting cast is of high excellence.

Other pictures on this bill include Topics of the Day and an Educational comedy.

The Strand

Costume plays, wild westerns, melodramas and adaptations from the "Six Best Sellers" have come and gone in the ever-shifting tide of public demand for amusement and entertainment by way of the silver sheet. All of them have had their day. Still the public, the producers and the picture houses have sought for something new.

And here it is. "Something new and something old" as the old riddle puts it. The song our parents and elder kin caroled lustily on hay rides and sleigh rides and picnics and parties two decades ago! "After the Ball" the melody which Charles K. Harris made the greatest American song hit ever written, has been mirrored on the screen and is released by Anderson Pictures.

Around this simple heart drama Renco Film company has built, it is said, one of the most spectacular film productions of the year. It is coming to the Strand theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday night. A cast of all-stars headed by Miriam Cooper, Gaston Glass and Edna Murphy, presents the leading roles. The production which is of unusual length and elaborately staged, was directed by Dallas Fitzgerald from the scenario by James Colwell.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Next Monday brings the annual borough meeting. Up to this week end there is no indication of any contests, though one is never assured of that. Only one list of nominees is presented for the electors to consider, in conformity with a practice that has been in vogue here for years and has proved satisfactory. There is little of politics in the borough election, the ticket being non-partisan. Neither the republicans nor democrats, as parties, present a ticket, but unite in an effort to offer as capable and promising a list of candidates as is possible.

The polls will be open only three hours next Monday afternoon—from 4 to 7 p. m. The business meeting comes in the evening. The call for the meeting lists matters of importance for the borough to consider. It is possible, it is said, for such improvements as are asked for to be undertaken and yet realize a reduction in the the tax rate. Proposals before the meeting that will involve expenditures are relative to completing the Mechanic street sewer, relative to an improved lighting system for the borough and relative to the improved sidewalk program.

Reports of various officials of the borough will be ready for distribution that they may be passed upon by those attending the meeting.

Several hundred members of the Knights of Columbus from various parts of eastern Connecticut are expected here Sunday, to attend the exemplification of the third degree on a class of 50 candidates in the town hall. This is one of the largest classes of the order ever to receive a degree in Danielson. It is expected that William J. Mulligan of Hartford, a member of the board of supreme directors of the order, will be in attendance. A banquet is to be served in the Casino following the conferring of the degree.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

The Scarecrow Man Appears

Now, let me think a moment before I start this story, for I've forgotten where we left off in the last one. Oh, now I remember. Uncle Lucky had given the two little pigeons the house on the top of the barn to live in and he didn't charge them any rent, either, which was very kind in him, I think, don't you?

Soon these two little pigeons were very much at home, and you could hear them cooing to each other all day long. By and by Mrs. Pigeon laid some pretty eggs on which she sat to keep them warm, and when baby pigeons came out of the shells there were happy times in the little pigeon house at the top of Uncle Lucky's old barn.

As soon as the little ones learned to fly, they came down to play on the front porch where dear Uncle Lucky sat in the hammock on warm days to read the Bunnyville "Gazette."

I'm sure you remember the little sparrow who had her nest under the eaves of the little front porch. She came every year, you know, and it wasn't long before she and the pigeons were the best of friends. The dear old gentleman rabbit bought a bag of cracked corn and fed the birds out of his paw for they weren't a bit afraid of this kind old bunny.

"Gracious me!" said Uncle Lucky one day, "the grass is getting so long I must get out the lawn mower," and, hopping into the tool-house, he and his bunny nephew took turns cutting the grass. When it was all finished, Uncle Lucky said:

"Let's go down to the candy store for an ice cream cone and a lollypop and maybe a soda for I'm dreadfully hot."

So, off they hopped, not bothering to take out the Luckymobile as the village lay only a dozen hops away. Pretty soon they were both seated at the fountain where the syrups ran so sweet it made you want to drink and eat and eat.

All of a sudden, who should walk in but the Scarecrow man. You see, he had been asleep all winter in the Miller's Barn, but now that the seeds were planted in the ground he, too, had to go to work.

But, Oh, dear me! When he put his hand in his pocket, he found he didn't have a cent, no, not even a cigar coupon. And in the next story you shall hear what the Candy Man said to the poor Scarecrow.

A POOR IMPRESSION.

It is not a good impression that is made by the action of the senate committee named to carry on the investigation of the internal revenue bureau in supporting the plan of Senator Couzens to hire a special attorney to conduct the inquiry for them and to pay him with money furnished by the Michigan senator.

This is clearly making a personal matter out of a senatorial job. It is a case where Senator Couzens seems disposed to vent his animosity toward the secretary of the treasury. Because he has been unable to make any headway in the investigation through the work of the committee he has determined to go down into his own pocket and pay the expense of getting an attorney who has come into prominence because of his muck raking proclivities to try to unearth something.

The democrats have fallen for this plan because it is playing into their political backyard, or tending to. Senator Couzens has had some correspondence with Secretary Mellon in which he was left in a none too comfortable position. He has had no success in trying to fasten a lot of charges on the head of the treasury department, but he seems too determined to stick to the job in the hope that some damage may be done.

His attitude, backed up by his latest move, cannot fail to make a bad impression upon the public. When he digs into his own pocket to carry on a government duty it causes one to wonder what the caliber of our United States senators is if they are not able to get at the facts. It creates the impression that an effort is to be made to poison the minds through a lot of grandstand playing on the part of a highly paid grandstand player.

Perhaps the senate is disposed to give its sanction to conduct such as this. It may be ready to place itself in such a light before the country, but when it does it still further lowers the confidence which might otherwise be placed in its work and its investigations, when properly conducted.

TREE PLANTING.

There are many who might be singled out as shining examples of well applied efforts with a view to profits to themselves and benefit to the country in the way of planting trees for future timber production.

New York state has some of these if we are to judge by the statement by Charles Lathrop Pack, head of the American Tree association. He told of a man in Clinton, N. Y., who made a small planting in white and Scotch pine on "worthless land" in 1910. It cost $6 an acre for the trees. The owner has had two offers of $60 an acre and refuses to sell. Mr. Pack says: "Now 1910 was not so long ago. There is certainly a lesson in the Clinton county man for a lot of people in a country where there are 81,000,000 acres of idle land fit for nothing but growing trees, and this with the center of the lumber industry nearing the Pacific coast. This means high cost and high freight rates."

Of another man named T. C. Luther, of Mechanicsville, N. Y., he had even greater words of praise. Mr. Luther plants trees every year quite the same as others plant tomatoes or dahlias, but he plants many more. He doesn't consider it a good year when his plantings do not total over 400,000 trees. He finds great help in the conservation commission of that state from which he has already ordered 850,000 red and white pine trees for this year.

There are a few instances where tree planting attracts attention in this state. They are not so common but what they create attention when they are passed. But not a few of those idle acres fit only for the growing of trees are to be found in Connecticut, and in this end of the state. Instead of permitting such land to go to waste from one year's end to another how much better it would be for enterprising Connecticut men to turn tree planters quite the same as the New Yorkers have and thereby benefit themselves and contribute to the supply of needed timber. It is not a new proposition, but it is one to which too little attention seems to be given from the vast amount of lumber that is being brought into the state each year.

HUGO STINNESS.

A figure that has had commanding prominence in Germany for the past few years has been removed in the death of Hugo Stinnes. He was a capitalist of the type that creates suspicion and develops opposition. He had an inveterate fondness for amassing wealth. He took a delight in getting control of first one thing and then another. There was nothing too great for him to undertake, no limit by which he was willing to restrict his efforts. He was constantly on the watch for opportunities and he lost no time in capitalizing them. His operations were by no means confined to Germany. Europe was the field in which he was active but he was prepared to go where the allurements disclosed themselves.

A man of his wealth was naturally a man of much influence. He was disposed to turn it where expediency directed. He might support or oppose a policy of government, and the manner that he displayed toward the allied nations was one of no little difficulty for Germany to fathom at times. Apparently it was self and his interests that got consideration first, even when such matters as peace, reparations and the like were uppermost in the minds of the people.

Stinnes was among those who felt the force of the blow that was administered to Germany by France in the Ruhr. When possession of that region was taken the industrialists were hard hit. It was not believed that their policy would experience such treatment. They recoiled under the body blow and were brought to the position of recognizing not only the failure of the resistance, but the need of effecting other arrangements. That he would have been any more disposed to have German industry or his extensive wealth bear the burden that should be expected is doubted. It is strange that he should be removed by death at the very time that the report of the experts was being made, but there is no reason to believe that his going at this time will complicate the situation in Germany.

VOLUNTEERS OF AMERICA.

When an organization engages in such work as establishing and maintaining homes for aged, hospitals, industrial and trade schools, working girls' homes, children's homes, fresh air camps, dispensaries, industrial and men's homes, educational work, prison work, day nurseries and employment bureaus, it certainly arouses not only the interest but the enthusiasm of those who watch, and in watching are compelled to give their support and endorsement.

The Volunteers of America, founded and led by such well known workers as General and Mrs. Ballington Booth, is an organization that is aimed to accomplish great good, to furnish an unknown amount of relief and to give the needed uplift to those who need it.

Today marks the 28th anniversary of its organization during which time it has made a strong appeal to those who are much concerned in humanitarian work. No small part of its success is due to the unselfish and tireless efforts which have been constantly put forth by its inspiring leaders. They have not only demonstrated that there is an opportunity for such work and that there is need for some one to perform it, but they have proceeded to it in a masterly manner. They have given the helping hand, they have carried cheer, they have interrupted despair, they have given years of devoted attention to classes of humanity who in the past had been suffering from the lack of it. In the course of a score and eight years the Volunteers of America haven't accomplished all that was to be done. They have succeeded in showing the need of greater effort among the sick, the needy, the helpless and the hopeless.

MAKE IT UP TO DATE.

Probably the world is at a fever heat of excitement over the situation that has developed between Maurice Masterlinck, the author, and Sebastiani Rondi, a lawyer of Sicily. It was one of those instances where the reader of something that had been written by the author was unable to contain himself. He was not even disposed to combat it in print. He was violently opposed and seeing red there was no other thought in his mind except to fight.

The result is that the Belgian has received a communication in which he is told to consider that his ears have been boxed and that the lawyer holds himself at the disposal of the author. That of course means trouble of some kind. It is one way of challenging to a duel and doing it by mail instead of actually administering the maddening blow.

When and where the duel is to take place, or what the weapons are to be have not been disclosed. Possibly it will get no nearer a duel than the preliminary fireworks. That is of course to be hoped, but instead of a duel with pistols or swords there's no good reason why shotguns or boxing gloves couldn't be chosen. In fact there seems to be a chance for an interesting verbal combat, if we can judge from the tone of the Sicilian's letter.

These are the days when the unusual is being accomplished. These quite reasonably separated individuals might be able to get satisfaction by having a duel by mail, by cable or by radio. There's nothing like being up to date even when it comes to duels.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The backward spring is disposed to force people to dip into what might be their next winter's coal supply.

There can be extravagance and tax reduction at the same time but it doesn't satisfy the taxpayer.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

New York city is a good illustration of the fact that while a municipality may be mammoth along many lines, in some other ways it may be extremely limited. For instance, a city of the first magnitude like New York may be a great success as a financial center, and yet cut no ice as a literary center. Merely because a city is big along some lines it does not follow that it is big along all lines. There is probably no town, however small, anywhere in the United States that is so poorly prepared to accommodate the children who are clamoring for common school facilities as the first city of America. Whatever may be the cause that is a correct statement. It is not difficult to find the cause. New York is the great port of entry for immigrants. Many of them finding living conditions so much more favorable than anything they ever knew before, they are perfectly satisfied with New York. The normal immigrant has a large family of children. Hence the limited facilities.

A very practical and sensible work is being done by the Veteran's Bureau of this state for the assistance it is giving to the disabled soldiers and sailors of the World war, fitting them for positions of usefulness. Any reasonable appropriations that the federal congress might see fit to give to adequately support such a reasonable scheme would doubtless receive the hearty indorsement of the people at large. It would seem to fill a larger present need than a flat bonus helping those who are in good positions, and whose money-earning capacity was not injured by their service in the late war. At the present high rate of taxation, it would be wise to consider just the effect a general bonus, which would drain the treasury, would have on the business of the country. But all necessary assistance ought to be forthcoming for those whose earning capacity was lessened by the war.

Experience with the good things of today makes us tolerant of the bad things of yesterday. Hence there is no disposition to go back to them. If one of the undesirable conditions of yesterday is repeated today because of somebody's negligence, we rise up in arms against it, and that is a sign of progress. Take for illustration, the old, orthodox, New England turnpike while a frost was coming out of the ground in March: a veritable quagmire for miles at a stretch, almost impassible for the lightest vehicles. Nobody howled against it, because nobody knew that it could be prevented. But today we lift up our voices in holy wrath over the condition of the Norwich-Colchester road because it is muddy in patches. We have had a taste of good roads and we shall never go back to the old primitive conditions. We are going to howl as long as the mud lasts or until howling capacity is stopped by laryngitis.

During these days the writer can look out upon a vacant lot and see the lads flying kites. Some of them do it with real skill. Now and then one goes sailing up in the air several hundred feet high. A kite up that height is hard to hold down because it pulls, and the boy holding it seems to be holding it down. If one were ignorant of kite-flying he would be inclined to say, "Why does the boy pull on the string? Why doesn't he let it go up on the slack? Or why doesn't he let the kite upwind the string?" As a matter of fact the kite goes up only as the string is kept taut. It goes up only as it is connected with the earth. This is a good illustration of life. We rise only as there are cares that bind us to the earth. Cut all connection with the earth and like a kite with a broken string we begin to plunge about and finally dart down to the earth a poor broken thing.

It is now quite evident that some forces resident in the earth are waking up from their long period of hibernation and are showing their inherent power. Take, for instance, their successful energy forcing white oak leaves from their winter perch. This takes place in the springtime when the sap noiselessly moves up the trunk, out into the branches and twigs and puts the old dead leaves out of commission. Mind you it does what the winter tornado has failed to do; what ice, snow and zero cold have been unable to accomplish. Sometimes the leaves in spring have nothing left but their woody framework, but they are still there. It is new life that does the trick. You may put man in prison for crime, but you have not sloughed off his criminality. Sometimes it is a kind word or act, that gives him a new heart. The still small voice is mightier than the tornado.

Strictly speaking is this a land of free speech? Has a man really any right to express an individual opinion publicly on any conceivable subject whatsoever without paying the penalty of exposing himself to ignorant and malicious insult? Let a man express an opinion on any mooted question (especially in theology where the greatest savagery exists) then John Smith, one of these self-appointed custodians of the Kingdom of God, seizes his pen and writes a reply and sends it to the public press. Then he draws a long breath and says, "The Kingdom has been saved from wreckage for at least another day." In spirit at least the thumb screw and rack are still with us. The only reason why men are not still burned at the stake is that the law says, "You must get your fun in some other way." The effect upon the world at large would be more wholesome if Christians would love one another rather than snap at one another's heels like a pack of wolves.

There is one date in American history that ought not to be forgotten by anybody—at least by anybody north of the Mason and Dixon line. That date is April 12, 1861,—exactly 63 years ago today. No date in the internal affairs of the American people has been fraught with greater results than the firing upon Fort Sumpter in the harbor of Charleston, S. C. Intangible and tragic form it opened the eyes of the north, and for that matter the eyes of the whole civilized world as to the bitter feelings in the south. Not even our statesmen saw a long and sanguinary conflict of more than four years, that was to bleed the nation white, and that was to make the nation totter to the very foundations. Possibly it was the only way in which the question of slavery could be brought to an open issue, for that question had to be settled sooner or later. But let us rejoice that the issue is a dead one and that we are now a united country.

Two men, native Americans, were discussing the immigration problem. They were dead sure that the inflow of so many foreigners would surely "swamp us," and would "taint" the glorious heritage left to the descendents of the Mayflower. These men had just been through the foreign section of their city where the average family consisted of husband and wife and six happy, healthy children. These "two wise men of the east" who had been married ten years and had no children—did not seem to realize that they had anything to do with this "swamping" business. There is a very unpleasant natural law that teaches the "survival of the fittest," and it may be quite within the bounds of reason to suppose that at present the fittest to survive are not born in eastern Massachusetts but in southern Italy. It would not show any carelessness on the part of the Almighty if for a few years little Carlo should outrun little Charley in the race of life.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

THE CRUCIFIXION

Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit. Luke 23:46.

These were the seventh words from the cross, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit." These words teach us how to die.

The dying words of a beloved one often reveal the inmost heart beyond what we had sounded before, so the words from the cross are most precious to every one who loves Jesus. There are besides these many other voices from the cross, silent voices, but heard by the heart, voices from heaven, voices from the heart of God, voices of love and pity and forgiveness and hope. The cross was planted on Golgotha, a dry, dead tree: but lo! it has blossomed like Aaron's rod, it has struck its roots down to the heart of the world, and sent its branches upward, till today it fills the earth, and the nations rest beneath its shadow, and eat of its pleasant fruits." The cross is the tree of life in the midst of the paradise of God.

The great central event in history of the world is the coming of Jesus Christ into the world; including His life, His death, and His resurrection. The centuries circle around His personality. As all the stars of heaven are said to be moving around the star Alcyone in the Pleiades, so all the Bible and all history move around the cross of Christ as their center. "The cross of Jesus must ever remain the one bright center of all our hopes and all our songs," of our love, of all good influences, of heaven itself." (Waterloo," says Victor Hugo, "is the change of front of the universe." Nearer truth is this. "Calvary is the change of fronts of the universe." "Christ's tomb was the grave of the old world and the cradle of the new."

The sacrifice on the cross, making atonement for sin, expresses the infinite love of God for man. The real meaning of His atonement is the revelation of a suffering God behind the suffering Christ. Christ proved the greatness of His love by what He was willing to suffer for those he loved.

The atonement on the cross was a voluntary sacrifice. God did not punish an innocent person, in order to save sinners from the punishment due for their sins. Christ offered Himself, of His own choice, because He loved man so deeply.

The cross expresses God's feelings toward sin, His readiness to forgive sin, the terrible evil and danger of sin that costs such a sacrifice for deliverance from it, no one would suffer so much to save others from a slight evil or little danger.

Every power and every motive that can touch the heart of man to lift him out of sin into the kingdom of heaven radiates from the cross as the completion of the sacrifice of Christ. It enabled God to offer forgiveness and yet to have his law, so that men would be even more careful to keep the law than if they saw the wicked punished. It proves to us that God is ready to forgive. It shows that we cannot enter heaven unless we are cleansed from sin. It proves the love of God to man. It punishes every possible motive for turning from sin, touching the hearth with love showing our danger, teaching the law of duty, which dies rather than fail or neglect, giving us hope of forgiveness and life. It shows the value of our souls, to be worth such a price. It shows the value of salvation, and the worth of eternal life in heaven. All this will be in vain, unless we repent and believe.

PAYING OFF THE WAR BILL OF THE COUNTRY

How much of our war bill do we still owe and how long will we take to pay it?

No man in the United States is better qualified to answer that question than Representative Martin B. Madden of Illinois, chairman of the appropriations committee of the house of representatives, writes Edward E. Roberts, in the Washington Star. Over Mr. Madden's desk pass the itemized accounts of every dollar paid, received or owed by the government of the United States, that mightiest business organization in the world in comparison with which even the Standard Oil Company or the United States Steel Corporation seem like country stores. In casual conversation Mr. Madden gives the impression that while the nation's accounts are in transit across his desk he performs the simple feat of memorizing them. In the course of an hour's interview he reeled off statistics dealing with practically every department of the government and without once appealing to any book of reference. To my initial question he responded promptly and laconically:

"Twenty-one billion dollars."

"Could you reduce that," I suggested, "to some form which an ordinary person might grasp? What does that astronomical figure mean in actual dollars and cents to the average American taxpayer?"

"It means that, roughly, one dollar out of every three he pays in taxes goes to pay for the war."

That seemed getting down to understandable figures, so I asked Mr. Madden for some details.

Figures Really Simple

"The figures are really very simple," he said. "Our war or bonded debt today is, as I have said, $21,000,000,000. The yearly interest charges on that are $890,000,000, and in addition we set aside $310,000,000 for a sinking fund to be applied toward paying off the principal. That gives you a total of one billion two hundred million, while our total government costs are three billion four hundred million."

I struggled with a sum in mental arithmetic and remarked that three times the war charges would be two hundred millions more than the total government budget.

"Quite true," replied Mr. Madden, "we have an offset in the payments which England is making on her debt to us and which amount to about $200,000,000 yearly."

"What would the difference be if our other foreign debtors were to pay us?" I asked.

"If they were to pay us on the same basis as England it mean a total of about $800,000,000 a year."

"If things remain as they are, how long is it going to take us to completely pay off our war bill?"

"We should be able to take up the entire debt in about 25 years. Of course, during that period we would increase our sinking fund and also reduce our taxes. That calculation might easily be upset, however, by increases in expenses which we do not now foresee. We are almost certain to have further demands on the part of the veterans, and if we have to pay a bonus, naturally we will have a big setback."

"Outside of this gradual paying off of the war debt, what relief can the American taxpayer look for through reduced government expenditures? According to the figures, the government's normal expenses today are about twice what they were in 1939. What is the prospect for a reduction in that direction?"

Expenses Cut to the Bone

"I do not know that we can look for any very great reduction in government expenses," replied Mr. Madden slowly. "It is quite true that our present normal budget, excluding war debts, is about double that of 1911, but that is not due in any sense to extravagance on the part of the government. On the contrary, we have pared expenses to the bone and we are running the country today on the most economical basis it has ever known in its history. What our critics choose to ignore is that everything the government pays for today costs just twice as much as it did in 1913. Take the army, which has been cut to the danger mark, and yet which costs us $275,000,000, as against $116,000,000 in 1913, or the navy, where we have economized until competent authorities tell us we have not enough men to man our ships, and for which we are paying $290,000,000, as against $128,000,000 in 1913. We are paying our soldiers and sailors two dollars for every one we gave them before the war, and the same thing holds true for our labor, our supplies and practically everything else that the government buys.

"If you take those things into consideration you will find that it is actually costing us less to run the country today than it was in 1913, taking the relative value of money then and now into consideration. It is easy to make loose charges of extravagance, but we started the fiscal year of 1922 with a $750,000,000 deficit, and at the end of that year, by sheer economy, had turned that deficit into a surplus of $313,000,000. In 1923 we turned a $695,000,000 deficit into a $310,000,000 surplus, and since its close have paid off $623,000,000 of the public debt."

"Then you do not believe any further large economies are possible?" I asked.

"I do not see where they could be made as far as the federal government is concerned."

"Yet Secretary Mellon has stated that Americans are the heaviest taxed of all the great nations."

"Secretary Mellon is right," responded Mr. Madden quickly. "We are the heaviest taxed people, but it is not the federal government that is to blame, but the state and local governments. While we have steadily reduced federal taxation, the states, counties and cities have more steadily increased their levies. The American people are always ready to level their guns against Washington when they have a grievance, but they would find much better targets nearer home. While we have been introducing the budget system and banding every effort to reduce expenses, the state and city governments have been apparently trying to find out how much money they could spend. Many of them have doubled and trebled their expenditures in the last ten years. Take Michigan, for instance, where the percapita cost of government increased from less than $6 in 1914 to more than $24 in 1923. There was almost a similar jump in Wyoming during the same period, and the record of a score of other states is almost as bad.

"In the case of the cities I could mention a dozen offhand where administration costs have risen from 100 to 300 per cent. in a decade. Just to show that the evil is not confined to any section, I might say that the list would include Springfield, Ill.; Birmingham, Ala.; Lansing, Mich.; Fall River, Mass.; Sacramento, Calif., and Johnstown, Pa. These are just samples, any may not even include the worst offenders.

"It is quite true, as far as my information and observation go, that we are the heaviest taxpayers in the world, but we will never find the remedy by picking out the one tax-assessing body that is doing its best to practice economy and trying to pin all blame on it."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A Friendly Reply.

Mr. Editor: The time for silence is gone and the time to speak has come, as I read in Ecclesiastes (III-7) I have in conformity with my resolve, put together some few points concerning the outcries of Mr. Troland and our friend "Righteously Indignant." I am well aware that I shall not escape the reproach of taking too much upon me in presuming, insignificant and inexperienced as I am, to reply on such a weighty and great subject as if there were no one else in this modern city but I to have a care for modernism and to give advice to such wise people named herein.

I suppose it has often happened that a fool has spoken wisely, and wise men have often done foolishly, as St. Paul says, "If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise." (I Cor. III 18). Now, inasmuch as I am not only a fool, but an ardent follower of the Holy Scriptures, I am glad that I have an opportunity of fulfilling my wish, just in a fool's way. I beg you to excuse me to the moderate wise fundamentalists, for I know not how to deserve the favor of the supremely wise modernists, which I do admire.

It is possible that our fallible friends are well versed with the Gospel of Christ, but, do they comprehend it in its true light? Emerson says, "All things have two handles; beware of the wrong one." To understand the gospel, it is imperative that one must conceive how to read the gospel and, know what is essential therein.

For the exclusive benefit of my fundamentalistic friends, and others interested in our present day controversy, I would advise the reading of "Essays and Letters," by Leo Tolstoy, which are found in "The World's Classics." I would especially invite the reading of the following chapters: "Reason and Religion," "How to Read the Gospels," and "A Reply to the Synod's Edict of Excommunication." This reading gives an elaborate supply of material for thought.

Tolstoy was not a super-human expounder of religious dogmas. He was not discovered yesterday, today, nor since the World war. In his writings he gives great praise to the Gospel of Christ. He quotes the Holy Scriptures in true Christian manner. Like Diogenes, Socrates and Epaminondas—Tolstoy could have chosen wealth which was open to him. Instead he devoted his life in writing great works on morality, religious enlightment and truth. The world needs more religious enlightment, more brotherly love today than ever before.

The Tuberculosis Sewer.

Mr. Editor: This writer is not interested personally—only as a citizen, in the matter, but is sure what he is going to write about it will commend itself to the judgment and approbation of the best citizenship of the city and of the state.

Reference can not be withheld, as to the errors contained in the letter of the "Commissioner of Health of Connecticut," published in your columns this morning. First, to his limited view of the prospects of the institution—and second, of his knowledge of the Thames river.

Now, Mr. Editor, the tuberculosis hospital; as a state idea, stands, not only for the help and comfort of the diseased; its main object, surely, is for the protection of the community who are in health, and for the proposition to "Stamp out the white plague." Anything therefore that in the remotest way would contribute to the spread of the plague, should neither be proposed nor tolerated.

No ingenious reasoning nor special pleading is, or should be, admissible here. So much for the design of the institution.

Secondly, the commissioner when arguing the safety of bathing "below the entrance of the sewer" seems not to know, or overlooks, the fact that the Thames is a tidal river, and that whatever goes down it, returns up again with every tide that ebbs and flows.

Norwich Falls being the limit, the tide rising and falling there some three or more feet, almost daily.

At the Falls there is a factory of hundreds of employes, men and boys and girls, whose ventilations open on these tides, and who, besides supporting themselves and contributing to the financial support of the hospital, and are morally obligated themselves to this humane institution.

Is not these people as well as bathers in the river deserve protection and consideration?

This seems to be a time in Norwich when slaughter houses and "every old thing" are proposed and accomplished for the interest of people who have the nerve to push them, and who seem to care nothing for the consideration nor respect of their neighbors.

But, as this letter is designed to be short and to the point—the tuberculosis—sewer proposition should be forbidden by every good reason. There are septic tank processes, more than one, for the disposal of sewage, and turning it into the streams and rivers is an antiquated and properly abandoned pollution that states now condemn, and no longer approve.

JOHN TROLAND.

HELEN KELLAR FOUND HAPPINESS

Born in the Sunny South, Helen Adam Kellar was a strong, bright, happy child. She loved flowers and birds. Precocious, she learned to talk when a year old.

Stricken with a serious illness, when 19 months old, she was bereft of sight, hearing and all memories of the past. As she grew, she fought against the silence and darkness— and could not understand it all. Hopes for a cure were dispelled by specialists.

Still groping, when seven years old, she became the constant pupil of Miss Anna Mansfield Sullivan. Words began to slowly penetrate inside the wall surrounding the little girl, then faster, until in three months, 300 were known. At ten she practiced day and night until she learned to talk.

Told a story before her education, she did not understand it and it was lost in her memory. Association brought it back when she was 12, she thought it new, wrote it and it was sent to Perkins Institute of Boston, and published. The similarity was seen and a committee grilled her and Miss Sullivan to ascertain if they intentionally deceived. The verdict was divided. Then came the fear that any other writings would prove to be unrecognized imitations.

Study of Christianity, history, the arts and languages was followed by entrance, when 16, into the Cambridge, Mass., School for Young Ladies. The fifty over winning highest honors there was shadowed by the death of her father.

Preparing to enter Radcliffe College, she learned only two days before examination that the questions were given in a system of raised letters she did not understand. By intensive study she mastered it and the examination.

She was graduated from Radcliffe with honors and was appointed on the the Massachusetts Commission for the Blind. She is known as an author, a lecturer, a worker in the interest of the afflicted and for her beautiful character.

"If I were not happy my life would be a failure," she says.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Roald Amundsen, who is making his final preparations for a flight to the North Pole, has long been considered one of the most competent of the polar explorers. In 1911 he won world-wide fame as the leader of the Norwegian expedition which reached the South Pole. A splendid leader and organizer, it was in great measure due to his thoroughness and foresight that the Antarctic expedition was successful.

"Tanlac has certainly meant health and happiness to me, for I have not had a sick day since it banished my troubles over a year ago," declared Mrs. Lena Benson, 146 Lancaster St., Portland, Me., recently.

"Influenza left me so weak and miserable that I thought I would never be myself again. My appetite was woefully lacking, I could eat only soups, broths and toast and was as thin as a shadow. And nervous—why, I was nearly frantic and would go for a week without sound sleep. I had terrible pains all through my body and suffered so I would just sit down and cry.

"I will always bless Tanlac. It ended every ailment, built up my weight and made me stronger than ever. I now eat meats, potatoes, cabbage, etc., and all the fixings, sleep and feel fine, and my friends all remark how healthy I look. I would not be without Tanlac."

CENTRAL BAPTIST CHURCH HAS SEATING PROBLEM

Increasing membership at the Central Baptist church is making a problem in assigning seats for the congregation. On Jan. 1 the church had 605 resident members. By Easter this number will be increased by about 100. As there are 549 seats downstairs in the church and it has been usual to assign seats to members upon request, the situation is making a problem for the seating committee, whose members are Charles L. Stewart, Gilbert S. Raymond and Arthur F. Wyman.

The committee has been taking a vote on a questionnaire among the membership on which individuals are asked to express whether they are in favor of assigned or unassigned seats. The answers will assist the committee in solving the situation.

PULLMAN LUNCH CART FOR JAMES P. HAYES

The new Pullman lunch cart purchased by James P. Hayes has arrived in Norwich and is now being placed in position on the New Haven railroad property at the head of the approach to the railroad station on Main street. The new cart, which is of very striking appearance arrived Thursday and was immediately unloaded from the freight car.

The lunch cart was built for Mr. Hayes by Jerry O'Mahoney, Inc., of Bayonne, N. J. It is one of the most attractive wagons ever seen in this part of the state. It is mounted on wheels and has an entire covering of sheet steel, attractively decorated. In length it measures 36 feet and is 10 feet, 8 inches in width.

There are two entrances, one at the end and one at the side with a long marble top counter in front of which are 16 chairs and at the side is a smaller marble counter capable of handling 16 more standing. Marble tiling adorns the sides of the wainscoting above which is solid oak. Even the windows are attractively decorated to give the appearance of draperies.

The equipment is of the most modern type. There is a six hole steam table containing a meat container and steamer. A modern coffee urn is also included in the equipment. At one end is a new up-to-date drinking fountain and the whole inside is lighted by electricity, while the cooking is to be done by gas. Opposite the drinking fountain is a large refrigerator which is lined with white tile and large windows in it to show to the patrons of the Pullman lunch the food kept therein.

There are two stoves, one for baking and one for frying. Every article that might produce smoke therefrom is covered with a German nickle hood. The hood room is ventilated in the most modern style, a large electric fan being installed in the ceiling. In fact the ventilating system is one of the features of this particular type of Pullman lunches. Along with the other many articles is a hot water heater and an automatic milk pump.

Mr. Hayes will be open for business 24 hours a day. He will carry nothing but the very highest quality of food. He is receiving many congratulations on the new lunch cart.

The plant will be operated on central standard time by the Bankers' Life Co., and requests have been made that all owners of radio report how the first program came over.

As far as is known no local owners picked up the station Friday night, but it is expected that not a few will tune in for future concerts.

Y. M. C. A. WORKERS ORGANIZED FOR CAMPAIGN FOR BUDGET

Enthusiasm prevailed Friday evening at the supper meeting of the workers of the Young Men's Christian Association who are to hustle for funds for the current expenses of the association for the coming year. This was the preliminary meeting for the campaign that opens next Monday, when upwards of fifty workers will devote practically the whole day to this cause. The campaign chairman is Charles L. Stewart, the campaign director James L. Case, and the captains of teams are Shepard B. Palmer, Herbert B. Cary, Frank L. Arnold, C. Edward Carpenter and Harold S. Burt.

After the supper, which was served by the women of the Central Baptist church, and as usual was eaten with real relish, Charles L. Stewart, the campaign chairman, called the meeting to order, and in an enthusiastic manner told the workers of the necessity of definite consecration to their task if the object of the campaign is to be accomplished. Chairman Stewart called upon President James C. Macpherson, who expressed his pleasure and appreciation of the large number of workers who are enlisted in the campaign, and though, said he, the task is a very difficult one, victory will come if we give our best to the effort.

General Secretary Edwin Hill was called upon, and he made brief remarks, emphasizing the fact that the challenge that red blooded men responded to was a hard task for a worthy cause, and said he, you are red blooded men, the cause is worthy, and you certainly have a real job, but you have the assurance that God is with you; He puts His unlimited strength and ability alongside of your limited strength and limited ability. You can count on absolute victory insofar as you abandon yourselves to the task; the word of St. Paul was timely, "This one thing I do"; let this be our motto, and let this be our actual practice, and victory is sure.

At this point the chairman turned the meeting over to James L. Case, the campaign director, who in turn called on Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, who in a very convincing way told the workers that they had no need of arguing for the association. The people of the community know of the splendid work the association is doing, and though your job is certainly not an easy one, you can put it over. There are some causes that we hesitate to urge people to support financially, but not so with the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Abbott told of his experience in the Y. M. C. A. as a boy and stated that that influence had been with him ever since.

State Secretary H. H. Smith of New Haven was the last speaker, and he said that President Woodrow Wilson once said that we can estimate a city on its attitude toward the Y. M. C. A. The association of Norwich is tested, not by its program, but by its service, and the power it puts into the lives of men and boys. The reason for your success through the years is due to consecrated leadership; the employed staff and the faithful board of directors. Your success has come by hard work; by following a constructive program, and because you have a responsive community. In this campaign you have an attainable goal. This campaign is a great challenge, and you men have accepted it. You will win.

Director Case explained in detail the program of the campaign and urged the workers to stick to the task, and he expressed his confidence in the success of the drive.

NEW YORK SPEAKER AT MISSIONS MEETING

The missions department of Park Congregational church held its April meeting Friday afternoon, members of several local churches being present.

The devotional exercises were led by Mrs. William B. Birge, who read from Ephesians and read an abstract from a book emphasizing the importance of putting First Things First. The secretary's report and various announcements required only a short time and the meeting was turned over to the chairman, Mrs. A. N. H. Vaughan.

Mrs. Vaughn introduced as the speaker of the afternoon, Miss Charlotte Porter, dean of the Virginia Osborn Memorial Training School for Christian Workers, New York city. In a most interesting manner Miss Porter pointed out that the work here at home is closely akin to foreign missions in that it administers to all nationalities regardless of denominational lines.

The aim, she said, is to carry the gospel to homes in the lower part of the city of New York, to help the families in mental, physical and moral ways; to teach the children industry, honesty and truth, and to minister to the sick poor in homes, or in hospitals. On the staff of 34 workers are ten nurses and five churches are affiliated with the school. It is located at 7 Grammercy Park and a two-year course of training is maintained for students who must have graduated from high school, and be between the ages of 18 to 35.

The meeting closed with a hymn and brief prayer by Mrs. Vaughn, after which tea was served by a committee under the direction of Miss Alexandrine Trumbull. Mrs. William T. Crandall and Miss Amy Coggswell poured.

WEEKAPAUG WOMAN GUEST DAUGHERTY'S ASSISTANT

Playing an unobtrusive but important part in the defense of Harry M. Daugherty, whose record as attorney general of the United States has been subjected to a searching investigation at the hands of a senatorial committee, is Mrs. Mabel Walker Willegrandt, assistant attorney general. Mrs. Willebrandt, spent a part of last summer at the Weekapaug Inn and while there gave a tennis exhibition before a large gallery of summer visitors and Westerly people. In addition to being one of the most noted attorneys of her sex in the country she holds the women's tennis championship of the District of Columbia.

Mrs. Willebrandt has served in an advisory capacity to Mr. Daugherty throughout the senatorial investigation, and her feminine intuition is said to have been particularly helpful in suggesting questions to confuse Roxie Stinson during the cross-examination of this important witness.

Those who attended included the Misses Peck, Toomey, Sharvan, Berryman, Phillips and Muttart.

NIGHT FOREMAN KILLED AT GREENEVILLE PAPER MILL

While oiling a main shaft bearing in the wheel pit of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours plant, North Main street, late Thursday night, Jay B. Wetherbee, night foreman at the plant, was instantly killed when he was knocked against an upright pipe by the huge flywheel. Mr. Wetherbee, who was the son of Benjamin B. Wetherbee, plant manager, was last seen alive about 10.30 o'clock Thursday night. It is supposed that shortly after that he went down into the wheel pit to oil the bear which has given more or less trouble lately due to the high water in the river.

Mr. Wetherbee's absence was noticed and a search for him was begun about 11 o'clock. Edward Sullivan, boss beaterman of the night shift, found Mr. Wetherbee's body, beneath the fly wheel shortly before two o'clock Friday morning. Dr. Louis T. Cassidy responded to a hurry call but on arrived found that Mr. Wetherbee was dead and that in fact he had been instantly killed. Medical Examiner C. C. Gildersleeve was notified and conducted an investigation of the accident. Mr. Wetherbee's father was notified and went to the plant from his home in Uncasville.

From the position of the body and from a mark on his forehead between the eyes it was evident that Mr. Wetherbee had been hit by the rapidly revolving belt on the huge flywheel. When the body was found an electric flash light was clutched in the left hand and the oil cup which he had intended to use in oiling the bearing was found where he had set it down near the shaft. His father stated that he could easily see how the accident had happened as his son had evidently been stooping under the wheel, had raised up too far and been hit by one of the protruding hooks that are used where the belt joins together. Dr. Gildersleeve gave Undertaker Gager permission to take charge of the body.

Mr. Wetherbee who came to Norwich in 1916 when the du Pont company took over the Hubbard paper mill, resided at No. 170 Broadway. He was born in Bellows Falls, Vt., May 11, 1977, the son of Benjamin S. and Frances Derby Wetherbee. Before coming to Norwich he was employed with the John T. More & Sons Paper company at Bellows Falls.

October 8, 1902 in Bellows Falls he was united in marriage with Erma May Frost, who survives him with one son, Cecil Frost Wetherbee, 11 years of age. Besides his father he leaves a brother, Levi Wetherbee of Bellows Falls and three sisters, Edith, Leata and Winifred, all of Washington, D. C.

In politics he was a republican. Mr. Wetherbee was a member of the Bellows Falls Congregational church and a member of the Blue Lodge of Masons in Bellows Falls.

OBITUARY

Fred S. Manning

After an illness of some duration for which he underwent an operation on April 2nd, the life of Fred S. Manning came to a close at 10:20 o'clock Friday morning.

Mr. Manning was one of the best known printers and newspaper workers in Norwich, learning his trade in the Bulletin job department, and for the past 30 years was a most efficient foreman of the Record printing department, his knowledge of printing gained through fifty years of study proving of great value to those employing his services.

Mr. Manning was born in Norwich, June 19, 1866 the son of Nancy M. Ladd and William Diah Manning, great-grandson of Diah Manning, drum major in Washington's Life Guard.

After attending the public schools of Norwich and the Norwich Free Academy, Mr. Manning took up the study of draughting in Providence. Completing his studies there he returned to Norwich and entered the old C. B. Rogers plant, as the draughting department, remaining there for some time.

About 50 years ago he entered the employ of the Norwich Bulletin where he learned the printer's trade under his father, who was one of the founders of the Bulletin in 1858, and at that time was in charge of the job printing department of the company. Mr. Manning remained with the Bulletin until about 1890 when he accepted a responsible position with a printing firm in Providence. About 30 years ago he returned to Norwich, assuming the position of foreman of the Record job printing department, which position he held up to the time of his death.

Mr. Manning was first married on August 14, 1879 in Norwich, to Hortense Lucinda Griswold, who died in December 1880. On November 30, 1887 Mr. Manning was united in marriage with Mabel Earle French of Providence, by whom he is survived. He leaves one daughter by the first marriage, Mrs. Harvey M. Briggs of this city.

Mr. Manning was a member of St. James Lodge No. 23 F. and A. M., a member of the Odd Fellows and a member of the New England Order of Protection. In the days before the Norwich paid fire department Mr. Manning was for many years an active member of Norwich Hose Co., No. 4 located on Boswell avenue. He was a member of the United Congregational church joining when it was known as the Broadway church.

Mr. Manning also served his city for two years, 1903 and 1904, as a member of the court of common council, during the term of Charles F. Thayer as mayor. While a member of the council he was a member of the board of police commissioners.

Mr. Manning was a well read man, possessed a jovial disposition, was a finished workman and was considered one of the best printers in this section of the state. Serving his apprenticeship in Norwich, Mr. Manning joined Norwich Typographical Union No. 100. During his years of service with the Bulletin and Record he always worked for the interest of his employers. Careful in his work, he proved himself most competent in his chosen work and many friends were made among those whom he served long and faithfully. In his death Norwich has lost a valuable citizen and his friends a man unfailing in his kindness and faithfulness, friendships, and everyone who had the opportunity of knowing him could not fail to be impressed with his fine, upright character and pleasing personality. A devoted husband and loving father, a kind neighbor and true friend, he was ever ready to give assistance whenever called upon. In his going the community has lost the services of a faithful and trustworthy citizen, and his family a loved one, and his friends a man for whom they had the deepest affection.

Dwight H. Hough.

Following an illness of some duration which took a more serious turn several weeks ago the life of Dwight H. Hough, one of Norwich's best known and most respected citizens, came to a close Friday morning shortly after 2 o'clock at his home on the Scotland road, Norwich Town.

Mr. Hough had not been in the best of health for the past eight years. Shortly before 1916 his health began to fail and his chances of recovery were lessened to a great extent by injuries to his spine received in an automobile accident in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., on a trip with the late Louis P. Roath. In December Mr. Hough underwent an operation on his eyes in Bridgeport but his health failed to improve and the threatened loss of sight depressed him greatly, causing him to lose hope during the last few weeks of his life.

Mr. Hough was born in Colchester, September 8, 1854, the son of John Hillard Hough and Mary Ann Bridges, and was a direct descendent of several of the founders of Norwich. An ancestor, Rev. James Fitch, was the first pastor of the First Congregational church at Norwich Town, where the funeral services for Mr. Hough are to be held.

Mr. Hough was essentially what is called a "self-made" man, for it was through his industry and care that he worked up to the important business positions he held in later life. During his boyhood he worked faithfully for his father and afterwards entered the employ of the Fitchville and Baltic mill stores, in both places serving as bookkeeper. In the fall of 1886 he came to this city to accept a position as bookkeeper for the Norwich Lock company, and a year and a half later took a similar position with the hardware firm of A. W. Prentice & Co. His rise was rapid and in 1889 when that old established firm was succeeded by the Eaton-Chase & Co., Mr. Hough became one of the partners of the new concern. Other partners were Albert H. Chase, the late Luther S. Eaton and the late D. M. Stockwell.

In 1906 when the concern was incorporated under its present name, The Eaton Chase Co., Mr. Hough withdrew from the firm after 25 years connection with the house. In 1911 he entered the Uncas National bank on Shetucket street and was elected cashier on March 1, 1913, remaining with the bank in that capacity until January 9, 1917. Later he became local agent for the Burnall corporation of Chicago and in June, 1923, was appointed superintendent of the State Employment bureau with office in the Central building.

In 1893 Mr. Hough was elected a member of the court of common council, enjoying the distinction of being the youngest member of that body. During his two terms he served on the street committee, police committee, auditing committee, public grounds and water board. Four years before entering the council Mr. Hough was elected secretary of the Young Republican club, serving in that capacity during its existence in the Harrison campaign.

He was a member of St. James' lodge, No. 23, F. and A. M., in which he had filled the office of secretary, and was a charter member of Norwich council, No. 720, Royal Arcanum, and of the United Congregational church.

In 1881 Mr. Hough was united in marriage with Miss Grace Irene Trask, daughter of Mary Jane McKinney and Francis Alonzo Trask. They purchased the old Trumbull house on Warren street and lived there for over 30 years and in recent years have resided on the Scotland road.

Surviving Mr. Hough are his wife, a son, Leonard A. Hough of Norwich, a daughter, Mrs. Arthur H. Patterson of Rye, N. Y., six grandchildren, a sister, Mrs. Albert A. Clark of McKinley avenue and two nieces, Mrs. Horace L. Briggs of Providence and Mrs. Charles A. Voight of Pelham Manor, N. Y.

Mr. Hough was a man of fine qualities and proved capable of faithfully executing every responsibility placed upon him. Of a naturally pleasant disposition he easily made many

THE GINGHAM GIRL AT BROADWAY THEATRE

"The Gingham Girl," a musical comedy by Daniel Russell, that had a long run in New York, gave an audience at the Broadway theatre, Friday evening several hours of fine entertainment with its tuneful music, rapid fire comedy lines and work and snappy dancing by a sprightly chorus. The attraction classed with the best that the house has offered this season and the audience was enthusiastic in its applause, demanding a curtain call for all the principles at the end of the second act.

Starting with Crossville Corners, New Hampshire, in the first act, the scenes shift to a cafe in New York and a studio in Greenwich Village and the play comes to a happy close in the office of the Blue Bird Cookie factory. There was a well chosen cast throughout and the play was adequately staged Peggy Pates carried the leading role with convincing sincerity and sang sweetly while Bobby Jarvis as the rube who goes to the big city was a comedian of the first rank who scored a bullseye with every one of his "swige cracks." The solo, As Long as I Have You, was the musical gem of the evening. Excellent support was given by Loring Smith and Lilian Young playing opposite each other, while Henry White played well and his pleasing baritone voice was heard in a solo and chorus number. Tell Her While the Waltz is Playing, Edna Dare's solo, The Wonderful Thing We Call Love, was given with pronounced dramatic power, and an Apache dance by White and Mills with another dance specialty by this couple were features of the production.

STATE CATHOLICS GAVE $65,710 FOR EASTER CHARITY

In all the Catholic churches of the Diocese of Hartford tomorrow, (Sunday) there will be read a circular letter from Bishop Nilan, announcing that the annual Eastern collection for the diocesan charities will be taken up in all the churches of the diocese Sunday, April 20th. The offerings received last year amounted to $65,710.13 and the chief items of expense were as follows: Repairs and improvements on building for dependent children, $9,990.73; maintenance of dependent children, $19,600; payment on building debt $11,000; social service $12,125; deaf mutes $2,966.50; aged blind and infirm, $1,340,000; Little Sisters of the Poor, $3,000; House of the Good Shepherd $3,000; orphan Asylum at New Britain, $3,000.

The care of dependent children continues to be the most pressing problem.

Ten years ago St. Agnes Home for infants was opened at West Hartford. Since it threw open its doors to receive the little ones it has cared for 1,910 wards, and it seldom shelters fewer than 200, a number in excess of its normal capacity.

It is to these appealing waifs that a former Norwich man, Robert Porter Keep, son of a former principal of Norwich Free Academy, now principal of Miss Porter's school, Farmington, sends every day during the summer vacations at this famous school, the milk from the school's fine herd of cows—an average of 60 quarts a day.

CONSIDER REDUCTION IN RATES FOR ELECTRICITY

The possibility of making a reduction of electricity rates was discussed Friday night by the gas and electric commissioners at their meeting at the gas office on Shetucket street, with President James L. Case in the chair. General Manager C. W. Taggart was instructed to prepare a statement for presentation to the commissioners at an early date which will give them the information upon which they can base possible action in putting a rate reduction into effect.

No action respecting the offer of the Eastern Connecticut Power company to sell electricity to the city or to buy the plant was taken as the power company's communication is now in the hands of the common council, which has not yet made any inquiries for information that may be needed.

ACADEMY BASEBALL TEAM OPENS SEASON TODAY AGAINST THE ALL-COLLEGIANS

The Academy baseball team will usher in the season this afternoon at the campus when the All-Collegians will be the first opponents of the season. While this will be more or less of a practice game for both teams it will give the Norwich people a chance to get a line on the Academy team for this year. Coach Brigham will give practically every candidate a chance.

The lineup that will start for the Academy will be, Segal in the box, Hollander on the receiving end, Burke at first, Tombari at the keystone position, McNamara at third, McGowan at short, Hinricks in left field, Dinty Kilroy in center and Busch in right. Others who get a chance to get into the game will be Steinman, Healy and Couture, pitchers; Mileski, catcher; Gee, first baseman; Haslam, Goldblatt and Cimilioski, infielders; Sayles, Fellows and Strickland in the outfield. Strickland is a new recruit hailing from Groton, who appeared in a uniform a day or so ago. He fields well and in hitting from the left side of the plate seems to be a fairly sure and hard clouter.

The Collegians put in an afternoon of practice on Friday under the direction of Manager McKnight. The boys, although it was the first day out, showed up in old time style giving promise that the students will have a tussle on their hands this afternoon. Manager McKnight's lineup will be: Stanley p, Manchester c, Harris 1b, Madden 2b, McKnight 2b, Ringland ss, Keenan lf, Murphy cf, Cafferty rf. There will be several other players in reserve in case of trouble which is not anticipated at the present time.

The game will be called at 3 p. m. sharp and there will be adequate seating facilities for the fans as the Pasnik memorial bleachers were completed Friday afternoon by the contractors. Manager Gilman was busy roping off the field and erecting the players' benches and he will have the diamond in fine shape for the game this afternoon.

LIEUTENANTS BEAT ENGINEERS IN DUNGAREE LEAGUE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 11.—Twelve runs in two innings was enough for a victory by the First Lieutenants over the Engineers in a regular Dungaree league contest played at the Submarine Base this afternoon. For three innings both teams played in big league style and a good battle was expected throughout. With the beginning of the third inning after the Engineers had scored two runs and increased their lead to three runs, the first looeys up and struck for liberty. Their revolt was successful and after the shooting had cleared a total of six runs were made by the commissioned men. The final score was 12 to 5 in the First Lieutenants' favor.

The Engineers had a tendancy to play erratic in the field and some of the First Lieutenants' scoring came after errors and a few hits sandwiched in between put men on the paths. The graduates of Annapolis were consistent both at the bat and in the field. It was by far the best performance put forth by the winners since this league got under way. If the First Lieutenants can continue to play in this manner, this team will be a contender for first place in the standing.

Locke, for the winners, pitched a good game from the very first inning. He kept the hits of the Engineers well scattered. Wildner, the twirler for the losers, started off strong but began to weaken in the third inning and with the beginning of the fifth frame he was hit so hard that he had to retire in favor of Mangold, who also failed to stop the Lieutenants' onslaught.

Haggert, for the winners, with a triple and two singles out of four times at the bat was the best sticker during the afternoon. Hawes' fielding at shortstop was also good.

The teams lined up as follows:

First Lieutenants: Capt. Hawes ss, Hamnch 2b, Ainzkie c, Anderson 3b, Walsely rf, Jones cf, Christopher lf, Haggert 3b, Locke p. Engineers: Meeks ss, Harrel 3b, Mangold cf, p, Wilder p, Langford c, Hare 2b, Kelley lf, Manno rf, Havens rf, Mayn lf.

The score by innings:

First Lieutenants ... 0 0 6 0 6 1 0—13
Engineers ..... 1 0 2 0 2 0 0— 5

FIVE BOUTS SLATED FOR BENEFIT PROGRAM

New York, April 11—Five bouts totalling forty rounds of boxing, comprise the card to be given April 20 at Madison Square Garden for the benefit of the Olympic fund. It was announced tonight by Harold Dibbiee, of the Olympic committee.

Jack Zivic, Pittsburgh lightweight, will meet Ever Hammer, Chicago; Paul Berlenbach, New York, middleweight, will face Harold Abbatt, New York, and Eddie Cannonball Martin, New York bantamweight, will box Rosenberg, New York in ten round matches.

Young Stribling, Macon, Ga., light heavyweight, will meet Mike Burke, New York, in a six round match and Pete Zivic, Pittsburgh bantamweight, will face Tony Scapiro, Brooklyn, in a four round preliminary.

GIBBONS-CARPENTIER BOUT ON MAY 31 PROBABLY

Chicago, April 11.—Floyd Fitzsimmons, promoter of the Tommy Gibbons-George Carpentier international boxing contest said tonight that date of the match probably would be switched from July 4 to May 31 at his arena in Michigan City, Ind.

Carpentier is matched to meet Gene Tunney, American light heavyweight champion in New York on June 16 and Fitzsimmons desires to change the match with Gibbons in advance of the Tunney-Carpentier encounter. Fitzsimmons has until May 10 to name the date and location of the contest, but it undoubtedly will be held in Michigan City, he said. He has a force of workers engaged in getting the arena in shape.

PHILLIES CAPTURE CITY SERIES FROM ATHLETICS

Philadelphia, April 11.—The Philadelphia Nationals today won the city series by defeating the Athletics 4 to 1, capturing their third game to the Athletics' one.

Home runs by Cy Williams and Johnny Mokan were responsible for the Phillies' score. The Athletics made a desperate rally in the ninth but fell one run short of tying the score. Score by innings:

Philadelphia (A.)—
0 0 0 0 0 1 0 0 2—3 8 1
Philadelphia (N.)—
0 0 0 0 2 0 2 0 0x—4 5 0

Burns, Walberg and Gibson; Ring, Couch, Carlson and Henline. Umpires Keen and Hart.

SHEFLOTT AND HUTCHINSON ARE REINSTATED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 11.—George H. Shedett, regular catcher, and Harold Hutchinson, regular third baseman of the Bulkeley High school baseball team were reinstated late this afternoon to represent Bulkeley on the diamond this season. It was at first feared that both Sheflott and Hutchinson would be barred from participating in baseball games with the Bulkeley team due to poor averages in one subject.

This morning Hutchinson passed a make-up examination which will make him eligible to play and Sheflott will take special work in English which will make him eligible to represent Bulkeley in baseball. The other first string player that has not been declared eligible is Joseph Gaetano, regular short stop. Gaetano is taking one less subject than that prescribed by the state high school athletic association. However, he has taken steps towards taking another subject and it is expected that he will be eligible to play when the Bulkeley team plays its first contest.

Edward Taylor, who played in the outer garden last season in several games and one of the most promising recruits for an outfield berth will be ineligible to play baseball this season. Taylor is taking five subjects and flunking in three it seems almost impossible for him to make up the conditions that will allow him to be eligible again. Donohue, Lonergan and Montgomery, three promising reserve men, have also been declared ineligible for the entire season. The trouble that makes these players ineligible is almost the same that affects Taylor. There is no possible way for these players to regain their good standing.

EIGHTY THREE RUNERS FOR BIG BOSTON MARATHON

Boston, April 11—The list of entries for the Boston Marathon final Olympic long distance tryout to be run April 19, reached 3 today, the Boston athletic association announced. Last year there were 78 entries and 70 runners started. Entries received today included two from Washington, D. C., James H. Montague, of the Alpetis A. C., and Lee S. Haymond, U. S. Naval Hospital.

With the entry of Frank Zuna, Melrose A. C. received yesterday, four former winners of the event have placed themselves in competition Zuna was the 1921 winner. The others are Clarence Demar, who won the race last year, as well as in 1922 and 1923; Carl Linder and Bill Kennedy.

DUGAS TAKES MEASURE OF DODGE AT TAFTVILLE

In the second match between Dodge of Willimantic and Dugas of Taftville at the Olympic alleys in Taftville Friday evening, Dugas won eight of the 11 strings rolled. This puts Dugas into the lead with Fillmore of Norwich in second place in the Eastern Connecticut bowling tournament.

Neither bowler was very strong, Dugas getting 1113 for a total, while Dodge was 15 pins under him. The averages were Dugas 101.3, Dodge 99.9. The scores:

HEAD QUARTERS TEAM GOES THROUGH WITHOUT DEFEAT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 11.—The Battery A quintet won from the J. N. Lapointe five by forfeit, in what was to be the last game of the Military league last night. The necessary number of men required to make a team failed to put in appearance at the scheduled time, 9.30, and the guardsmen were given the game by forfeit.

By taking this game by forfeit, Battery A went into a tie with the Tabs for third place in the standing with each team winning eight games and losing six. With this league at anend basketball in New London comes to an end also. Baseball is the next sport and no doubt a meeting will be held in the near future for the purpose of getting the two twilight leagues in action again.

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch
Captain New York Giants

The score is a tie. It is the last half of the ninth. One man out. Runners on first and third—the winning run on third.

Should the infield play in on the diamond, or should it play back? Who decides this?

In this situation the infield should play half way in—a few feet from the grass. Then they can make a double play either from second to first or from home to first on a hard hit ball. This position also enables them to throw a man out at the plate on a slow hit ball.

The manager of the club decides where his infield shall play in a case like this. Of course, the various managers have different ideas, but the position given is the one generally taken in big league baseball.

New London Sport Comment

A meeting of the New London Ranger Soccer club was held at the Y. M. C. A. Wednesday night.

Micheals one of the star twirlers for the Submarine Base team last season seems to retain the speed that gained for him quite a reputation as a twirler in the eastern section of the state last year. Wednesday afternoon in a regular game of the Dungaree league, he set a new strike out record by fanning 11 men.

What would the Submarine Base do without Lieutenant Arnold to look after the sports? After a three year lay off in basketball at the Base, this popular indoor sport was again taken up and the Base team was a success too. Whatever is being done to promote sports at the Base can be traced to the hard and diligent efforts of Lieut. Arnold. This year Lieut. Arnold is attempting to get the gobs stationed at the Base to take an active interest in the various sporting activities. Hence the introduction of the Dungaree baseball league. Other leagues will follow.

The announcement of several Bulkeley players as being ineligible for baseball comes as a surprise to the Bukeley followers. This will mean that the rosy outlook for another state championship team will have to be abandoned. Sheflott, Gaetano and Hutchinson are only down in one subject and it is expected that the work necessary for reinstatement can be done within a week. Let us hope that the boys are reinstated before Bulkeley begins its first game with High schools in this state.

Bulkeley Not to Play Today.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 11. — Bulkeley will not open its baseball season tomorrow, for the game scheduled to be played against the Alumni on Saturday afternoon at Morgan Park had to be cancelled due to the inability of several of the Bulkeley players to be able to play. The 85th Brigade Headquarters company, which is composed of high school boys, must parade at the 102d day celebration in New Haven Saturday afternoon, and several Bulkeley players are among those that will be affected by this announcement.

Crouch Elected Captain.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, April 11.—Ellis Crouch, second baseman on the Chapman Technical High school baseball team for the past two years, was elected captain of this year's team by the Tech players this noon. Crouch's performance on the diamond for the past two years is highly commendable. While not so much of a hitter, he was always a sure fielder and made but four errors all last season.

Baseball is about the only sport which Crouch goes in for, although he was utility center on the basketball team this season.

Fulton Kayoes Herman.

Exhibition Game Postponed

Cleveland, April 11—The exhibition game between Cleveland Indians and the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa today was cancelled because of rain.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

The game of handball originated in Ireland, but it is in America that it has reached its highest development and popularity.

In emulating the varsity baseball team in taking a "spring training trip," Harvard oarsmen are setting what is believed to be a precedent in collegiate rowing.

The first extensive tour ever made by a professional baseball team was that of the National Club of Washington, in 1867. The schedule included games with teams in Columbus, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Chicago, and several other cities of the middle West. The Nationals won every game played with the exception of one with the famous Forest City nine of Cleveland.

In the track and field events on the Olympic Games at Antwerp four years ago the United States won first place with 212 points. Finland was second with 106 points.

Mickey Walker, the welterweight champion, has decided to remain out of the ring for some time to come, in consequence of the death of his old friend and manager, Jack Bulger.

Despite his 18 years as a big league pitcher, Walter Johnson appears to be in the best fettle and should be able to do his full share in keeping the Washington Senators in the pennant race.

The first Oxford-Cambridge boat race was rowed in the year 1829. The series to date embraces just 78 contests. Of this number Oxford has won 40 and Cambridge 34. In 1877 the race resulted in a dead heat.

The best time ever made in the Oxford-Cambridge boat race was achieved by the victorious Oxford crew in 1911, when it covered the course from Putney to Mortlake, a distance of four and a quarter miles, in 18 minutes, 29 seconds.

Phil Bloom, the veteran Brooklyn lightweight, who has been fighting for a number of years, is the latest boxer to announce his retirement from the ring.

One of the longest pugilistic matches on record took place near Melbourne in 1855, when Australian Kelly defeated Jonathan Smith in a contest that lasted 6 hours and 15 minutes.

In 1867, in the published averages of the previous season's play, it was shown that the general average of the scores of the leading baseball teams of the period was 51 runs for each game.

Siamese football is played with a wicker ball, and the players are not allowed to touch it with their hands, being however, allowed to use their heads, shoulders and knees. The object is not to allow the ball to touch the ground, and some of the players are very skilful at it.

The old belief that a fighter once knocked out can never return the compliment by stopping the one who gave him the K. O., has been thrown into the discard by Abe Goldstein's victory over Champion Joe Lynch, on the occasion of their first meeting several years ago Lynch disposed of the little East Side fighter in 11 rounds.

Among the entries received for the 28th annual American marathon of the Boston Athletic Association is that of Clarence DeMarr, the famous Melrose runner. DeMarr has won the big event three times and will try for his fourth.

Earl Coombs, the outfielder who batted .380 for Louisville last season in 166 games, and for whom the New York Americans handed over 50,000 big round dollars, has displayed such high class on the training trip that his retention in the Yankee lineup is a foregone conclusion.

Johnny Evers, field marshal of the White Sox in the absence of Frank Chance has decided Outfielder Bill Barrett will not do as a shortstop. Barrett isn't an outfielder either, according to Connie Mack who had him first, but Evers likes the looks of him in the pasture.

Rogers Hornsby should be more careful or his bad knee will have him on the shelf before the season opens. In the game of March 27, against Washington, while attempting to score, Rogers had a collision with Catcher Bennett Tate. In the mixup Tate was spiked in the forehead and Hornsby pulled up lame. After playing two more innings Hornsby retired from the game. Tate was sent to a hospital in Tampa where Washington is going through its training stunts.

Polo, which is of Hindu origin, was introduced into America from England in 1876 by the late James Gordon Bennett.

The Philadelphia Nationals seem to have run true to form this year by losing the big majority of their exhibition games on the spring training trip. However, it is not always the team that shows up best in March practice that wins the pennant in October.

The old yip that college sports interfere with scholastic success has been given a black eye by Dartmouth College records just made public. The statement shows that the captains of the Green baseball and basketball teams both made perfect records in their class-room work during the first semester.

Homer Smith is back after a trip to Cuba where he went to box Battling Siki and is anxious to take on any of his battles in his division with a preference for Jack Renault and Floyd Johnson.

Since 1839, the Grand National has ranked as the principal steeplechase that is run in England. As to the merits of the horses that are successful, or that approach success, in this event, no sort of doubt can exist. "Liverpool" horses, as they are called, must possess extraordinary stamina; they must have been perfectly schooled; courage is as essential and they must be at the very perfection of fitness. So, too, with the jockeys, amateur and professional, who ride. It takes a bold and skillful horseman to cover the four miles and a half over thirty fences, and he, too, must have heart and muscle in the right place, or there is little hope of his completing the long journey.

Pitcher Paul Gassaway, who was signed by St. Joseph of the Western League as a free agent, has been declared ineligible by Secretary Farrell of the National Association. Gassaway, it is charged played with outlaws on the Monroe, La., team last year.

Cliff Brady, the St. Louis boy, who is with Red Killefer at Seattle this year, already has won the heart of his new boss. Cliff is holding down the second sack and Seattle folks are being told that he has added 50 per cent in efficiency to the infield.

Joe (Lumber) Price the home run king of the Appalachian League who had a try out in the International last year will probably go to Charlotte of the Sally League. Lumber was one of the leading hitters with the Johnson City team for three years.

Mel Coogan, the Brooklyn lightweight is boxing better than ever since recovering from a broken arm and wants to box the best of the lightweights with Jack Bernstein, Pal Moran, Rocky Kansas or Johnny Dundee, preferred. While the fans around New York have seen little of Coogan, he has one of the best records of any one in his class and with over 200 battles to his credit he has had but four referees decisions against him.

Canadian Middleweight champion, Jack Reddick, must be some good hitter if what Wild Burt Kenney says is true. Kenney says that he has fought them all including Jack Dempsey and that the Canadian is the best puncher he has ever met and would like to see him in the ring with Paul Berlenbach or Harry Greb. Reddick is particularly anxious to box either Ted Moore or Dave Shade.

It remained for Joe Woodman to find the heavyweights and now he has under his management, Andrew Balsa, the heavyweight champion of Spain who comes to this country with a very good record having won over the best boys his weight across the big pond. Woodman wants to match Balsa with Harry Wills or Firpo.

President August Hermann of the Cincinnati Reds is so well pleased with Orlando as a training ground for his team that it is reported he will spend a lot of money in building a permanent plant in the south Florida city.

Mark All, who will be 96 in June, and who claims to be the world's champion long-distance walker, is now engaged on the last stage of a twenty-four years walk, in the course of which he has tramped all over the world.

The sensational work of Shortstop Dudley Lee of the Boston Red Sox has been most pleasing to Manager Fohl. Lee is fortunate that he is teamed up with such a smart second baseman as Bill Wambsganss who will steady him and show him some of the finer points of play.

Although Glenn Wright, counted on as the shortstop for Pittsburg, has been with the Pirates on their entire trip to the Pacific Coast, he did not sign his contract until last week. Day by day as the season's opening approaches the holdouts are coming into the fold, and when the gong sounds on April 15 they will all be in, including Milton Stock, who says he is through with the Cardinals, or is it that the Cardinals are through with him.

PLAINFIELD SWIMMERS WIN SERIES OF MATCHES FROM NORWICH TEAM

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Plainfield, April 11.—Plainfield repeated its feat of a few weeks ago when the local team defeated the Norwich Y. M. C. A. swimming team at the Community house pool Friday evening, 31 to 28. The meet was exceedingly exciting, the two teams being very evenly matched and every point was hotly contested. Norwich started out in the lead, but Plainfield soon forged ahead and from then on it was anybody's lead. The score before the last event was 25 to 25 but the hundred yard dash won by Greene decided in Plainfield's favor. Greene, the Plainfield captain, was easily the star of the meet, capturing the greater number of Plainfield's points and completely eclipsing all who swam against him. Kundig starred for Norwich, followed closely, however, by McNamara, who displayed excellent form throughout the meet. Wyman easily took the plunge, completely outdistancing all who competed in that event.

The rest of the events were as follows: Plunge for distance, four-man relay, fancy diving, forty-yard dash, forty-yard back stroke, 40-yard breast stroke and 100-yard swim.

The results: Plunge for distance, Wyman (N.), Ely (N.), DeVoe (P.), points, Norwich 3, Plainfield 1; four-man relay, won by the Plainfield team, Peterson, Lee, Ely and Greene; the Norwich team was Sayles, McNamara, Hendricks and Fellows, Norwich 0, Plainfield 5; fancy diving, Greene 1st (P.), McNamara (N.) second, and Kundig (N.) third. In this event each man was given eight dives, four of them required and four optional. The required dives were as follows: Front dive, back dive, front jack-knife and the back jack-knife. The optional dives were as follows: Greene (P.) standing flying Dutchman, running flying Dutchman, backward jack with half twist, the running one and a half; McNamara (N.) standing flying Dutchman, running flying Dutchman, the full twist and the back forward dive; Devoe (P.) standing flying Dutchman, running flying Dutchman, full twist and the running one and a half; Kundig (N.) backward jack with half twist, forward jack with half twist, forward jack with half twist, running forward with half twist. Points—Norwich 4, Plainfield 5. Forty-yard dash, Greene (P.), Fellows (N.), Peterson (P.), Norwich 3, Plainfield 6. Forty yard back stroke, Greene (P.), Kundig (N.), McNamara (N.), Norwich 4, Plainfield 5. Forty-yard breast stroke Kundig (N.), Baldwin (P.), McNamara (N.), Norwich 6, Plainfield 3. 100-yard swim, Greene (P.), Hendricks (N.) Ely (P.), Norwich 3, Plainfield 6. Starter, Fred Williams of Norwich; scorekeeper, Clarence Winsor, Plainfield.

ORDER OF PROTECTION

Several interesting reports were given Thursday at the 32nd annual convention of the New England Order of Protection held at New London this week. In opening the convention at Union Lodge rooms, Grand Warden Joseph E. Clabby of Bridgeport urged the members to attend the lodge sessions more regularly and deplored the decrease in membership.

Concluding his summary of the condition of the order Grand Warden Clabby stated that a net gain in their respective memberships had been made during the recent years by the following lodges: Ida, Park City, Silver City, Gladstone, Sheridan, Middletown, Hammonassett, Windsor, Waterbury, Slater and Beulah lodge No. 228, which is in New London.

The total membership of the order on Jan. 1, this year, was 8,462, according to the annual report of Grand Secretary Henry C. Kendall of New Haven. Mr. Kendall's report also showed the increase to the first of the year had been 180 although the decrease amounted to 282 with a consequent net loss in aggregate membership of 102. Grand Treasurer F. Edward Whalen of New Haven reported that on April 1, the order possessed a balance on hand of $1,169.29.

Information in regard to the invested securities of the order were included in the report made by the board of grand trustees, which was signed by Charles J. Manwaring of Niantic, chairman; Horace Cook of Waterbury and Severin Johnson of New Britain. No changes or amendments in the grand laws were made during the year, according to the report of the committee on laws, comprising F. W. Richards of New Haven, Daniel O. Abbe of Hartford and Sumner W. Armstrong of South Norwalk.

An appropriation for the annual budget of $3,165 was made in accordance with a recommendation of the finance committee in its annual report. The appropriation was based on expenses from officers' salaries and other current liabilities. The report was submitted over the names of George F. Hall of Meriden and P. J. Grace of Bridgeport, members of the finance committee.

JUNIOR AMERICAN MECHANICS.

Buckingham council, No. 14, met in regular session Wednesday evening at the Buckingham Memorial with Councilor F. P. Shappee presiding. There was two applications for membership handed in, and reports were favorable for several other applications within the near future. Owing to the fact that the state of Connecticut has begun into a membership drive with the state of Rhode Island it has created much enthusiasm and all of the members are hard at work. One of the old members that hasn't attended a meeting for some time was present Wednesday evening with the usual smile that he always carries, his reception being very cordial. The council feels very sure that his previous activities will be renewed. The council had the pleasure of entertaining the state vice councilor, H. B. Marshall of New London, and also past councilor, H. C. Cornell of Roosevelt council, No. 8 of New London. Both of the visitors spoke briefly on questions of interest to the order. The council received an invitation to attend Roosevelt council next Monday night and bring candidates that they may receive the degree work. There will be a large delegation from Norwich going down, as there are several candidates. Arrangements have been made to assemble at the Buckingham Memorial at 6.45 p. m. The trip is to be made by automobile.

ODD FELLOWS.

The regular meeting of Uncas lodge No. 11, was held Monday night at Odd Fellows' hall with Noble Grand Herbert Spencer in the chair. Considerable routine business was transacted and plans for future activities were discussed. A social time followed the meeting.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY.

There was a good attendance on Monday evening at the meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary to Robert O. Fletcher Post, No. 4, American Legion, President Mrs. Ida Fairbanks residing. Following the business session the members talked over plans for the coming poppy sales. As usual the women of the auxiliary are to make their own poppies, the money received by sales to be devoted to the work of the auxiliary among the disabled ex-service men in local hospitals.

President Fairbanks announced that the work would start next Monday evening at her home, No. 235 Laurel Hill avenue, and it is expected that a large number of the members will be present to begin the work. Several hundred poppies will be made during the next few weeks, in readiness for the sale on Memorial day.

A. O. H. AUXILIARY.

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY.

Norwich grange, No. 173, met Wednesday evening in Steiner hall with Worthy Master Arthur W. Avery presiding. At the business session a report was read from Herbert L. Richardson, chairman of the feast committee for the past quarter, for which the committee was given a rising vote of thanks for their efficient work. Refreshments were served at every meeting with no expense to the grange. A report was also read by Mrs. William S. Murray chairman of the ways and means committee, in which she stated that the committee had $50.30 to turn over to the treasury, this money having been made by two pinochle parties and a supper. The committee was also given a rising vote of thanks and told to let their good work go on. The new feast committee, Mrs. Rose Carter, chairman, Mrs. M. Isekowske and Mrs. William Rush, served a splendid supper at 6.30, consisting of baked beans, potato salad, frankfurters, pickles, rolls, coffee and cake. After grace by Rev. Edward Ayers, about 100 were seated at attractively arranged tables. Music was furnished by the grange orchestra. Every one pronounced the supper one of the best of the year.

During the evening the third and fourth degrees were conferred upon a class of eighteen candidates. The degree team was supplemented in its work by tableaux and drill work. State grange lecturer, Charles A. Wheeler, of Storrs, attended the meeting and assisted the worthy master with the secret work of the degrees.

Mr. Wheeler gave a short talk upon the fraternity spirit. Quoting from the State Lecturer Philip H. Dewey of Pennsylvania state grange, he said that from the earliest history and recollections of mankind companionship has been the outstanding feature of all animate nature. When Adam roamed the fields he observed that the beasts roamed the fields in pairs, the birds flew in pairs, the fishes swam the sea in pairs, and God made a companion for Adam. Jealousy is the arch enemy of companionship. Envy is the malicious foe of virtue and is ever ready to destroy what it cannot imitate or surpass. Were it not for envy fraternity would be the most common of all the graces. Every word, every line and every precept of our order teaches love, not hate, and our membership should by lofty and honorable examples preach these lessons until the whole world smiles with love which is the bond of fraternity.

Edwin E. Lewis, master of Pachaug grange, spoke and Mrs. Maud K. Wheeler gave an interesting talk upon Civic Duties. Remarks were made by visitors from several other granges. Guests were present from Mansfield, Preston City, Bozrah, Pachaug and Groton.

Three candidates were balloted on and the members were reminded that the sewing society will meet next Thursday for an all day meeting. The corps is to hold a supper and sale next Saturday, the sale in the afternoon under the auspices of the work society, with a cake table, aprons, etc., and the supper in charge of the executive committee. Many of the members took credential papers in order to attend the state department convention in Waterbury April 23 and 24. The meeting closed in the usual form with salute to the flag and America.

EAGLES.

When Norwich aerie, No. 367, holds a special meeting Sunday, April 13, all members should attend, also all past presidents, as the state officers are coming to arrange for the state convention, which is to be held in Norwich in June. The aerie is aiming to run its membership list up to 350 by June 1st. There will be entertainment and refreshments for the meeting Sunday.

ENGLISH MAKE INQUIRIES ABOUT HEADLIGHT LAW

With the idea of making practical recommendations to the British Ministry of Transport looking to the solution of the problem of glaring automobile headlights in Great Britain, Miles F. Bingham, a prominent London engineer, has requested the state motor vehicle department of Connecticut to furnish it with all available information about the approved list of lighting devices issued in the latter department.

The British Ministry of Transport has deferred proposed "anti-dazzle" legislation for the past two years, owing chiefly to the fact that in its opinion no research to date has resulted in the production of a practical lamp or device for the control of glare which did not destroy too much driving light.

Commissioner Stoeckel of the Connecticut department has replied that, while the condition of the lighting laws in the United States so far as they relate to the elimination of glare are not wholly satisfactory, they are in the process of development toward a condition nearer perfect. Lenses and reflectors have been approved in the whole Eastern group of states, the approved list now issued by Connecticut having been arrived at in conference with the motor vehicle authorities of nine other states included in the Eastern Conference of Motor Vehicle Administrators. The approved list is uniform in all of these states and each device listed will, under proper testing conditions provide the results required. The Eastern Conference has co-operative relations with the Bureau of Standards of the United States and the Society of Automotive Engineers' Lighting Committee. The "Scientific American" recently concluded that the lighting testing plan has approached perfection to a point where it is a practical and useful thing. Greater progress has been made on the subject in the member states of the Eastern Conference than anywhere else in the United States.

Delaware has never granted the right of franchise to women. While Delaware women have voted for the last three years it has been under the national amendment.
